Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Government considered all relevant factors in bringing forward the Bill's provisions, which will greatly enhance the statutory maternity rights of pregnant employees, regardless of their length of service or hours of work.

ENVIRONMENT

Community Care Housing

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research his Department has conducted into the housing needs of older people; and if he will commission research on overall assessment of community care housing needs at a national level.

Sir George Young: The Department has commissioned Ernst and Young management consultants to carry out an independent study of the housing needs of elderly and disabled people. The study has been completed and a series of reports covering different elements of the programme of research are being prepared, slightly later than was originally expected. Due to the amount of data collected and the complexity of the analysis, it is now proposed to publish a single report later this year which summarises the findings from the individual reports, which will then be made available on request.

The study undertaken by Ernst and Young was an assessment of the overall housing needs of eldely people and did not look separately at needs arising from community care policies. The Government are, nevertheless, keeping a close watch on the way in which community care is being implemented and will consider the need for detailed research at an appropriate time.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has had from foreign Governments and parliamentarians concerning the environmental implications of opening the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield.

Mr. Yeo: The Irish Government have formally responded to the chief inspector of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food's public consultation on the proposed draft authorisations for the Sellafield site including THORP. There have also been representations from Scandinavian parliamentarians.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations have been received since November 1992 by Her Majesty's Government from (a) the Government, (b) citizens and (c) non-governmental organisations of the Irish Republic regarding the plans to open the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield.

Mr. Yeo: In total, 83,000 responses were received including a response from the Government of the Irish Republic. A breakdown of the responses as requested by the hon. Member is not available.

Planning Permission

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he proposes to take to protect sites of importance for nature and landscape conservation from being destroyed prior to applications being made for planning permission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: The Government encourage local authorities to adopt appropriate policies in their development plans and to make full use of their powers under the National Parks and Access to the Countryside Act 1949, the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 and under planning legislation to protect sites which they recognise as sites of local ecological importance. I am satisfied that measures available to local authorities are sufficient to secure the protection of such sites.

EC Directives

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the percentage rate for implementing European Community directives on the environment by each member state.

Mr. Yeo: The latest available information is set out in the Commission's ninth annual report to the European Parliament, "Commission Monitoring of the Application of Community Law—1991", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Waste Management

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the recommendations made by the Radioactive Waste Management advisory committee on the principle of substitution made available to the Government on October 1992; and if he will place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, if he will make it his policy to publish the report produced by the radioactive waste management advisory committee on waste reprocessing and storage at Sellafield.

Mr. Yeo: The RWMAC report on waste substitution will be released shortly and a copy placed in the Library.

Council Tax Appeals

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what broad timetable he has now agreed with the Valuation Office agency for resolving the council tax appeals which have already been received.

Mr. Baldry: We are still discussing this matter with the Valuation Office agency and representatives of the valuation tribunals. We are anxious that appeals should be dealt with as quickly as is compatible with the right of taxpayers to have their appeals considered thoroughly and carefully, including where necessary or where they so wish by an independent tribunal.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the average cost of dealing with a council tax appeal in (a) 1993-94 and (b) 1994-95.

Mr. Baldry: The estimated average cost of dealing with council tax appeals is £112 in 1993-94 and £111 in 1994-95. These estimates include Valuation Office agency and valuation tribunal costs and are based on planning assumptions made at the beginning of the financial year.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, if he will consider an increased use of the private sector in order to speed up the processing of council tax appeals.

Mr. Baldry: I do not consider that this would be appropriate, or would in practice secure faster processing of appeals within available resources.

Housing Associations

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the timetable for Government decision in relation to grant levy available to housing associations for the financial year 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Grant rates will be announced in time for the next annual bidding round.

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he has had from the Housing Corporation about private finance for housing associations; and when he expects to announce the grant rates for next year.

Mr. Baldry: We have received initial advice from the corporation about the grant rate for 1994-95. There are a number of areas on which we have asked the corporation for further information and we are currently awaiting its response. Grant rates will be announced in time for the next annual bidding round.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the advice he has received from the Housing Corporation on grant levy available to housing associations for 1994-95, on private finance, and on other related issues; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: We have no plans to publish the advice we receive from the board of the Housing Corporation.

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each of the 20 largest housing associations the most recent figures for the amount of annual Government grant they receive, the number of houses under their management and the ratio between the two.

Sir George Young: Housing associations provide a wide diversity of accommodation from general family housing to homes for those with special needs. Allocations of housing association grant in any year depend on an individual association's ability to meet priority housing needs cost effectively. The amount of grant received in any year will therefore vary. The allocation figures represent the total grant cost of new schemes which the associations are invited to bring forward for approval during the course of the year. The figures for the 1993-94 allocations for the 20 largest housing associations are as follows:

Housing association	Total housing under management	1993-94 Housing association grant allocation £ million
Notting Hill Housing Trust	9,197	29·59

Radioactive Waste Inventory

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes), of 19 May Official Report, column 179, if he will set out the reasons for the delay in publishing the 1991 United Kingdom radioactive waste inventory; and what steps will be taken to speed up the publication of the 1992 and 1993 inventories.

Mr. Yeo: The 1991 United Kingdom radioactive waste inventory was produced by Electrowatt Engineering Ltd. under joint contract to the Department of the Environment and UK Nirex Ltd. It contains substantially more data than previous inventories and there were some problems in clearing and verifying this data with the industry. The next inventory, which will show stocks of radioactive waste as at 1 January 1994, will broadly follow this new format and we will be looking to the industry for a quicker response.

Environmental Pollution

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 19 May, Official Report, column 181, on transborder impacts of environmental pollution, if he will set out the multilateral treaties and EC directives containing formal consultation between parties on transfrontier issues to which he refers.

Mr. Yeo: The most significant directives and treaties containing provisions for consultation between parties are:

77/795/EEC—Decision establishing a common procedure for the exchange of information on the quality of surface fresh water.
80/779/EEC—air quality standards for sulphur dioxide and suspended particulates.
82/176/EEC and 84/156/EEC—limit values and quality objectives for mercury discharges.
82/501/EEC and amendments—major accident hazards.
83/153/EEC—limit values and quality objectives for cadmium discharges.
85/203/EEC—air quality standards for nitrogen dioxide.
85/337/EEC—assessment of the effects of certain public and private projects on the environment.
88/609/EEC—limitation of emissions of certain pollutants into the air from large combustion plants.
92/72/EEC—air pollution by ozone.
Paris Convention from the Prevention of Marine Pollution from Land-based Sources.
Oslo Convention for the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping from Ships and Aircraft (this and the Paris Convention to be replaced by a Co-operation Agreement for the Protection of Coasts and Waters of the North-east Atlantic against Pollution).
Geneva Convention on Long-Range Transboundary Air Pollution.
Helsinki Convention on the Transboundary Effects of Industrial Accidents.
Espoo Convention on Environmental Impact Assessment in a Transboundary Context.

ReChem Incineration Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department is required to reply to the European Commission inquiry over the applicability of EC directive 82/501/EEC to the operation of the toxic waste incinerator by ReChem at Pontypool.

Mr. Yeo: The United Kingdom Government were required to respond within two months of receipt of the letter from the EC Commission which was dated 18 February 1993. Our permanent representative to the EC sent his response on 16 April 1993.

City Challenge

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many, and what percentage of the total number of, city challenge board members are (a) business men, (b) local councillors and (c) representatives of community groups.

Mr. Baldry: Some appointments for the second round city challenge boards have yet to be finalised. From the information currently available, the membership of the 31 city challenge boards will be composed of 152 (29 per cent.) private sector, 143 (27 per cent.) local authority and 145 (27 per cent.) community members. Ninety-one (17 per cent.) will be from other agencies and interested organisations.

Mr.Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many city challenge authorities he has visited.

Mr. Baldry: The 31 city challenge partnerships receive regular visits from their sponsor Ministers as well as Ministers from this Department.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money was (a) originally allocated, (b) allocated for the first year and (c) spent by each city challenge authority in the first year.

Mr. Baldry: Each round 1 city challenge partnership has received a total funding allocation of £7·5 million per annum for five years. Partnerships' expenditure limits were revised as appropriate during 1992-93 in order to offset predicted underspends, as they became known, against opportunities to expedite spend elsewhere. These in-year changes do not affect the overall sum allocated to each partnership, which remains at £37·5 million for the five years.

Final expenditure limits and current best estimates of spend against expenditure limits in 1992-93 for all round 1 city challenge partnerships are as follows:

Authority	Final City Challenge expenditure limit in 1992-93	Expenditure in 1992-93[1]
Lewisham	7·87	7·82
Tower Hamlets	6·39	6·36
Nottingham	7·65	7·44
Wolverhampton	8·24	8·24
Bradford	7·43	7·42
Dearne Valley	7·10	7·10
Manchester	7·83	7·83
Liverpool	7·50	7·50
Wirral	7·50	7·48
Middlesbrough	7·49	7·48
Newcastle	7·50	7·50

[1] All figures for expenditure in 1992-93 are provisional. Final figures will not be available until after the receipt of authorities' 1992-93 final audited claims.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the progress of Tower Hamlets' city challenge.

Mr. Baldry: The 1993-94 action plan for the Bethnal Green city challenge in Tower Hamlets is currently before us for consideration. It is expected that a decision will be issued soon.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he had concerning exit strategies for the first round city challenge authorities.

Mr. Baldry: The need for planned exit strategies was highlighted in the guidance given to the first round city challenge authorities on the preparation of their action plans. The development of exit strategies is monitored as part of the annual review.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the meetings that the Local Government Commission has held to discuss its proposals for the review of local government in respect of Derbyshire.

Mr. Baldry: This is a matter for the Local Government Commission.

Council Tax

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the average length of time he expects those council tax banding appeals which have been received to date to take (a) to be considered by valuation offices and (b) to be determined by valuation appeal tribunals if referred to such a tribunal;

(2) how many of the council tax banding appeals so far received he expects to be determined by the end of (a) June, (b) September, (c) December and (d) March 1994.

Mr. Baldry: The length of time taken by listing officers and valuation tribunals to clear appeals will depend on the number ultimately received and the complexity of the appeal caseload. In the light of information about proposals received to date, targets for the clearance of appeals are being discussed with the Valuation Office Agency and valuation tribunals and will be announced in due course.

City Challenge

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his latest discussions on future rounds of city challenge.

Mr. Baldry: City challenge has already been immensely successful in promoting new partnerships and providing a new impetus to urban regeneration. Future rounds of city challenge will be considered in the light of results from the 1991 census and after taking stock of the lessons from the first two competitions.

National Sustainability Strategy

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken to invite views from the National Recycling Forum on the United Kingdom national sustainability strategy to be submitted to the UN Commission on Sustainability Development.

Mr. Yeo: The Government are committed to widespread consultation in the preparation of the United Kingdom's national sustainable development plan. We welcome the views of anyone who would like to contribute to this consultation process. As the next stage in the preparation of the United Kingdom's plan, my Department expects shortly to issue a consultation paper and will send this to the National Recycling Forum.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received since the publication of the reports by the Local Government Commission on Cleveland and Durham and Derby.

Mr. Baldry: These reports are the commission's draft proposals on which it has asked for the views of local people. Representations are being made to the commission at this stage.

Land Reclamation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of new development took place on industrial reclaimed land in 1992; what assessment he has made of the effectiveness, in terms of environmental safety, of reclamation of contaminated land; and if he will make a statement on the role played by his Department in support of the Urban Regeneration Agency in recycling former industrial sites.

Mr. Baldry: Information about the amount of land reclaimed for development in the years since 1988 will be available from the 1993 derelict land survey. This survey is currently under way and the results should be available early next year. The Government are aware of the need to ensure that the reclamation of contaminated land is effective and has published guidance on this subject. Further research into the threats to the environment posed by contaminated land and the effectiveness of remedial measures is currently under way. Subject to Parliament's approval, the Urban Regeneration Agency will be set up in the autumn. It will be for the URA to determine its priorities and initial work programme within the scope of a corporate plan to be agreed with Ministers, but recycling industrial sites is likely to be one of its main objectives.

Pollution, River Thames

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what checks are made and by whom, on pollution in the River Thames; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: The National Rivers Authority is responsible for monitoring the quality of the River Thames; the sampling results are available on public registers maintained in the NRA's Thames regional office.

Planning Permission, Ninfield

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a paper outlining the background to, and the reasons for, the revocation order issued by him in respect of the authorisation granted by Wealden district council for the erection of a dwelling at Ninfield, East Sussex.

Mr. Baldry: A copy of the revocation order and associated papers have now been placed in the Library.

Together these give full details of the background to, and reasons for, the Secretary of State's decision to revoke planning permission for the dwelling at Ninfield, East Sussex.

Local Government Commission

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the total cost to date of the Local Government Commission.

Mr. Baldry: The total cost of the Local Government Commission to 31 May 1993 has been £2,453,070.

Household Waste

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his proposed timetable for legislation on economic instruments to promote the reduction and recycling of household waste; and what options the Government propose to enact.

Mr. Yeo: We are currently examining the responses to our consultants' reports on economic instruments for waste. In the light of those responses, we are actively considering whether to develop economic instruments to promote the reduction and recycling of waste and, if so, which instruments are likely to be most effective.

Cities Conference

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how his Department was represented at the "Conference on Cities '93" at the international conference centre in Birmingham on 24 to 25 May.

Mr. Baldry: My Department was represented at Cities' 93 on 24 and 25 May. My right hon. and learned Friend the then Secretary of State for the Environment opened the conference, and the then Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities visited on the second day. The Department also exhibited at the event.

Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he received the 13th annual report of the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee.

Mr. Yeo: My right hon. and learned Friend received RWMAC's 13th annual report on 10 May.

Planning Guidance

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidelines were issued by local authorities as to the criteria to be used in producing unified development plans; and whether changes to these plans will be required following publication of new criteria in the regional planning guidance note No. 2.

Mr. Baldry: The Government have issued instructions on the production of unitary development plans through the Town and Country Planning Act 1990, as amended by the Planning and Compensation Act 1991, and the Town and Country Planning (Development Plan) Regulations 1991. It has issued guidance on national and regional planning policy through planning policy guidance notes, regional planning guidance notes, minerals planning guidance notes and circulars.

National and regional guidance should be taken into account during the preparation of unitary development plans. When such guidance is updated, it may lead to plan changes.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information is being used for revising the regional planning guidance note No. 2; and when he expects the revised note to be published.

Mr. Baldry: The revised regional policy guidance note 2 will be based on advice received from the standing conference of local planning authorities in Yorkshire and Humberside.

I expect a draft of the revised RPG2 to be published for consultation in spring 1994.

Recycling

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a performance league table of local authorities which have achieved the largest volume of recycling waste products.

Mr. Yeo: My Department has commissioned consultants Coopers and Lybrand to survey the recycling plans of English waste collection authorities. This work, which will be completed shortly, is expected to provide information on recycling rates, as reported in the plans.

Local authorities in England and Wales have also been asked by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy to provide information about recycling rates as part of CIPFA's 1991-92 waste collection and disposal surveys. I understand that the results of these surveys will be published shortly.

I will arrange for both publications to be placed in the Library of the House.

Horticultural Substitutes

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action is being taken to encourage the production of peat-free horticultural substitutes from recycled organic waste.

Mr. Yeo: The Government have commissioned research into the potential markets for waste-based compost and are participating in the development of standards for it. This work is designed to address the main barriers to the use of waste-based compost.

My Department funds a number of projects to encourage composting, including projects run by Friends of the Earth; the Henry Doubleday Research Association; and Wyecycle. We have allocated £15 million in supplementary credit approvals to local authorities in 1993-94, to enable them to set up recycling schemes, including organic waste composting schemes.

The Department of Trade and Industry has given a grant of £409,000 to South West Water, under its DEMOS scheme, to explore the feasibility of co-composting sewage sludge and municipal solid waste.

Tree Planting

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to encourage the use of recycled organic material instead of peat in tree planting programmes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: My Department has funded research by the Forestry Commission into good practices in amenity tree planting; and has supported publication of the resulting advice. Some of this work has indicated that thorough site preparation and post-planting care are often of greater importance for successful tree planting than the use of organic matter of whatever origin, including peat. The Forestry Commission has recently published a manual of good practice for the use of sewage sludge in forestry.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish full details of his Department's assessment of the compliance costs for small businesses in general, and dry cleaning businesses in particular, of commitments undertaken as part of the Montreal agreement on chlorofluorocarbons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: Economic assessments under the Montreal protocol were carried out by the protocol economics options committee in 1989 and 1991. I am placing copies of these reports in the Library of the House.

My Department works closely with the Department of Trade and Industry and the relevant trade associations on this issue. Last year the Department of the Environment commissioned a study of the use of CFCs in the refrigeration and air conditioning industry in the United Kingdom which looked, inter alia, at small businesses. This was the sister study to the Department of Trade and Industry commissioned report on solvent-using industries, including dry cleaning. Copies of both reports are in the Library of the House. Costs to small businesses must be expected to vary widely depending on the solution chosen and the particular circumstances involved.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the Ernst and Young econometric model for local government finance which is being utilised by the Local Government Commission.

Mr. Baldry: The model has been developed by Ernst and Young in consultation with the Local Government Commission. Decisions on publication would be for Ernst and Young or the Commission.

Radon Gas

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what current research is being undertaken into the effects of naturally occurring radon gas on people.

Mr. Sackville: I have been asked to reply.

A comprehensive case-control study of lung cancer incidence in the areas with the highest domestic radon concentrations in the United Kingdom, Devon and Cornwall, is currently being carried out by the Imperial Cancer Research Fund in association with the National Radiological Protection Board. This study is funded jointly by these groups, Government and the Commission of the European Community.

The NRPB is also engaged in several epidemiological studies in collaboration with other Government departments and charities such as the Leukaemia Research Fund and the ICRF. These studies are investigating the effect of radon on the incidence of lung cancer, various other cancers, and leukaemia.

In addition, the Department of Health is funding laboratory research which complements the human studies. These are designed to determine the mutation rate and toxicity in lung tissues.

EC Environment Council

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he plans to put forward at the EC Environment Council meeting in Aarhus on 14 to 16 May.

Mr. Yeo: The Government conducted a substantial publicity campaign on the duty of care on its introduction in April 1992. This was well received and more than a million copies of a free explanatory leaflet, which is still available, were distributed to trade associations and companies. The Department employed MORI to review the effectiveness of this and other publicity campaigns. The results of its survey, carried out in December 1992, showed overall high levels of awareness of information on the duty of care. It was clear that awareness was greater among waste disposers than among waste producers. Subsequently, companies have become more aware of the requirements on inquiry from their waste disposal contractors and local authorities.

SSAs

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what the additional educational needs distribution would have been in the 1993-94 SSAs for each authority if the new census data were incorporated.

Mr. Baldry: The additional education need index for 1993-94 recalculated to include information from the 1991 census is shown in the table.

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for what reasons the visitor rights factor was doubled in the other services block distribution in the 1991-92 standard spending assessments.

Mr. Baldry: The decision to double the weight on visitor nights was taken in the light of a large number of representations from local authorities suggesting that the weight of 0·25 of a resident, used in 1990-91, took insufficient account of the costs associated with tourism in such areas as environmental health and street cleaning.

Council House Sales

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council homes were sold by each local authority in the county of Kent since 1 July 1979; what percentage of the total housing stock the total figure of sales represents in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: A table showing the available information on total council house sales for each English local authority in the period April 1979 to December 1992 was placed in the Library recently. The table also shows sales as a percentage of housing stock.

By the end of 1992 four of the 14 local authorities in Kent had transferred most or all of their stock to a housing association—Sevenoaks (March 1989), Swale (March 1990), Tonbridge and Malling (January 1991), Tunbridge Wells (January 1992). One further authority—Rochester upon Medway—transferred its stock to a private company in July 1990.

Housing Corporation

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the annual running cost of the Housing Corporation.

Mr. Baldry: The amount of grant in aid paid by my Department to the Housing Corporation for net running costs in 1992-93 was nearly £28 million. Expenditure during 1993-94 is expected to total just over £30 million, of which £2 million is for the second phase of the corporation's new information technology strategy.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies have been undertaken by his Department or consultants to his Department on the use of irradiation to treat toxic wastes.

Mr. Yeo: We have not commissioned any studies concerning irradiation treatment of toxic wastes.

Biodiversity Conference

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contribution Her Majesty's Government made to the conference on biodiversity convened by the United Nations environment programme at Trondheim in Norway on 24 to 27 May.

Mr. Yeo: The United Kingdom participated in three of the five expert panels on biodiversity whose reports were presented at the Trondheim conference. The Government were represented at the conference by an official from my Department, and a number of technical experts from the United Kingdom also attended.

Emissions Data

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what evaluation his Department has made of the use of a geographical information system for providing publicly available data on emissions to air and water as stated in the Environmental Protection Act 1990;

(2) what plans his Department has for the use of geographical information systems to provide detailed publicly available information on changes in local, regional and national environments.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 27 May 1993]: It is for bodies responsible for collecting environmental information, including the maintenance of statutory registers under the Environmental Protection Act 1990, to consider whether the additional costs of providing geographic information in electronic form are justified.

Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution is carrying out preliminary work to assess the costs and benefits of a geographic information system for a range of uses which may also include the statutory registers for which they are responsible.

Environmental Management

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the pilot project established to test the effectiveness of British Standards 7750 on environmental management; and what meetings he, other Ministers or officials of his Department have had with British business to discuss the implementations of BS7750.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

It is for the British Standards Institution to decide whether to amend BS7750 in the light of the recent pilot project for the standard. DTI has had no meetings with industry to discuss the implementation of the standard which is a matter for discussion between industry and the institution. My Department and the Department of the Environment are, however, considering possible accreditation arrangements in relation to BS7750 and the proposed EC regulation on eco-management and audit, and any such arrangements will be the subject of wide consultation with industry.

SCOTLAND

Housing Conditions

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the full survey of the condition of Scottish housing by Scottish Homes to be published.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Scottish Homes plans to publish the main report of the Scottish house condition survey before the summer recess.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet the federation of tenants in Glasgow to discuss the findings of the 1993 house condition survey.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The main survey report on the Scottish house condition survey will be available from Scottish Homes before the summer recess, while publication of a special report covering Glasgow is planned for later this year. The Glasgow Council of Tenants' Associations may wish to consider these reports once they are published and to discuss them with the Glasgow district council.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make additional finance available to public sector landlords who have identified major dampness or condensation problems through the house condition survey;

(2) if he will consider additional help to public sector tenants who are required to live in difficult to heat damp houses.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make additional finance available to those public sector landlords where the house condition survey has identified major dampness or condensation problems; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make additional finance available to public sector landlords who have identified major dampness or condensation problems through the house condition survey;

(2) if he will consider additional help to public sector tenants who live in difficult to heat, damp houses.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Very substantial resources totalling some £900 million have been made available to local authorities, Scottish Homes and new town development corporations for capital investment in housing in 1993-94. Under the new system of local authority housing plans and housing capital programmes launched on 30 April, all authorities have been asked to assess their overall housing needs and draw up strategies and targets for tackling houses subject to condensation and dampness in their areas.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will request Scottish Homes to prioritise part of its annual budget towards assisting landlords and tenants with capital works.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is part of Scottish Homes' aim to ensure that the quality of housing in Scotland is substantially improved. In approving Scottish Homes investment programme for any year, my right hon. Friend agrees the amounts which Scottish Homes will spend on particular priorities. The allocation of funds to specific geographical areas and projects is then a matter for Scottish Homes. Scottish Homes' total investment programme in 1993-94 will be £372·5 million of which £277·8 million will be made directly available for capital works on rented housing owned by housing associations, other approved landlords and Scottish Homes own stock.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will request Scottish Homes to prioritise part of its annual budget towards assisting landlords and tenants with capital works to counter dampness and condensation.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of Scottish Homes' capital budget will be spent in each of the next five years on dampness and condensation; and what plans he has to increase the sums involved.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Scottish Homes is committed to improving the quality of Scotland's housing. In 1993-94 through its record investment programme of £372·5 million Scottish Homes will give particular priority to improving the condition of Scotland's housing stock. Priority will be given to projects which will eliminate or replace housing declared as below tolerable standard, and Scottish Homes will also, through its substantial investment in housing associations, other approved landlords and in its own stock, support improvement works which will help counter and eradicate dampness and condensation.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet the Glasgow Council of Tenants' Associations to discuss dampness in the city's housing stock.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have no plans for such a meeting. Investment in council housing to tackle dampness is a matter for Glasgow district council in the light of its own view of priorities within the substantial housing capital allocations made available to the council.

Housing Associations

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will visit Paisley, South constituency to assess the need for further investment in housing associations.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The assessment of individual investment proposals by housing associations is a matter for Scottish Homes and private lenders. In total Scottish Homes allocation of funds to housing association projects throughout Scotland will be about £260 million in 1993-94, a record sum. The hon. Member may wish to pursue his particular constituency interests with Scottish Homes.

Community Alarm Systems

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the percentage of (a) sheltered and (b) non-sheltered or general needs houses in the (i) district council, (ii) Scottish Homes, (iii) housing association and co-operative, (iv) private rented and (v) owner-occupied sectors which are served by community alarm systems.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The available information on sheltered houses, which covers the installation of community alarms, was published in December 1992 in the statistical bulletin, "Housing Trends in Scotland—Quarter ended 30 June 1992", which is available in the House Library. No additional information on community alarm systems is held centrally.

Council Housing

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many new-build (a) sheltered and (b) non-sheltered or general needs houses have been built by Scottish district councils in each year since 1974; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on housebuilding by user category is not readily available for the years prior to 1986 and could be extracted only at disproportionate cost. The available information is set out in the table.

Local authority house building in Scotland for the years 1986 to 1992

VAT (Fuel)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had on the impact of VAT on domestic fuel for occupiers of public and private sector properties which are proven to be (a) difficult to heat and (b) in a colder climate than the British average.

Mr. Stewart: None. The Secretary of State has, however, received a substantial volume of correspondence following the Chancellor's announcement to which substantive replies have been sent.

Functions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the dinners, receptions or functions hosted by his Department since 1 May together with the purpose and the cost of each, where each was held and who attended; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The information is set out in the table. It would not be appropriate or practical to list each individual who attended these functions. The costs quoted are approximate as the events are recent and, in most cases, final invoices have yet to be submitted.

Dinners, receptions or functions hosted by The Scottish Office since 1 May 1993

The costs of this event will be met by the Government Hospitality Fund.

150 guests with approximate total cost of £1,600.

Drug Abuse

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has recently taken to discourage the abuse and illegal use of the drugs commonly known as "jellies"; what evidence he has received associating such misuse with crime; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The misuse of Temazepam capsules, sometimes referred to as "jellies", is a matter of continuing concern and, at the Government's request, the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs has conducted a detailed examination of the problem. The council has recommended that Temazepam should be rescheduled from schedule 4 to schedule 3 of the Misuse of Drugs Regulations 1985. This would place more stringent controls on the production, storage and distribution of the drug; require doctors to handwrite all prescriptions; and create an offence of unlawful possession. The Government are presently considering the outcome of a wide consultation exercise on the possibility of rescheduling and will reach a decision on the matter shortly.

The Chief Medical Officer at the Scottish Office has had discussions with directors of public health, and action has now been taken in a number of health board areas, for example by the introduction of voluntary bans or restrictions on prescribing and by raising the awareness of doctors of the implications of misuse. It is too early to assess the effects of these local measures.

Drug misuse is closely associated with a wide range of criminal behaviour; and police reports indicate that the misuse of Temazepam is no exception.

Fox Hunting

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what permissions he currently gives for the hunting of foxes on land owned by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: No permissions are currently granted for the hunting of foxes on land owned by my right hon. Friend.

Public Appointments

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to allow the members he appoints to (a) health boards, (b) health trusts and (c) other non-departmental public bodies to choose their own chairperson or vice-chairperson; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I have no plans to change the present arrangements.

MV Braer (Oil Spill)

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total cost to the Government of the MV Braer incident; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: Government Departments—notably the Scottish Office and the Department of Transport—have expended considerable sums: additional environmental work by Government in Scotland has already cost of the order of £0·75 million. But it is at present too early to say what the Government's overall expenditure will be.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to meet representatives of the employees of the Forestry Commission to discuss the Commission's future; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: My right hon. Friend has no plans to meet representatives of the employees of the Forestry Commission. He understands that representatives of all the trade unions concerned are being kept informed of matters affecting their interests through meetings with the Director General of the Forestry Commission.

Council House Sales

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list for each housing authority area in Scotland the number of former council houses which were purchased under the right-to-buy provisions which have been repossessed over the last five years;

(2) if he will estimate the number of purchasers of former council houses which were purchased under the right-to-buy provisions who have fallen into arrears over the last five years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is not available.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will commission research to establish what proportion of owner-occupiers who purchased their property under the right-to-buy provisions are finding it difficult to meet mortgage and maintenance payments.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office has commissioned a number of research projects since the right-to-buy legislation was introduced in 1980 and in January this year a research report "The Right to Buy in Scotland" was published. A copy is available in the Library. The report provides information on the effect of the scheme and shows that very few purchasers reported any difficulty meeting their mortgage repayments and that 70 per cent. found it easy. There are no immediate proposals for further research into the right-to-buy scheme.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what advice is given by his Department to prospective purchasers under the right-to-buy provisions about the financial burdens involved in servicing the loans and maintenance costs involved in home ownership.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Tenants who are considering buying their homes under the right to buy scheme can obtain a copy of the Scottish Office Environment Department's information leaflet "Buy Your Home" from their landlord or directly from the Department. The leaflet explains about the costs of buying and owning and advises tenants to seek advice from a solicitor or local citizens advice bureau if they require further information.

Freight Traffic

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the Government's policy on the recommendation on financial inducements to freight traffic to transfer from roads to ferries, proposed in paragraph 103 of the Scottish Affairs Committee's first report, HC 217, on "Scotland's Transport Links with Europe".

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A large number of United Kingdom ports already fall within the definition of inland waterways and are therefore within the scope of the freight facilities grants scheme. The Government will be responding to the report's recommendations in due course.

Conservation Sites

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if all sites of special scientific interest in Scotland will be designated as special areas for conservation under the EC directive on the conservation of species and habitats (92/43/EEC); and when he expects the designation process to commence.

Sir Hector Monro: No. Only a proportion of sites of special scientific interest will be of Community importance and thus candidates for designation as special areas of conservation within the terms of the directive. The designation process will commence after June 1998 by which date the European Commission and member states must agree the list of sites to be designated.

Piper Alpha

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans the Lord Advocate has to initiate prosecution proceedings against the Occidental Oil Company as a result of the Piper Alpha disaster.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None. The decision taken by my noble and learned Friend's predecessor that there would be no criminal proceedings in relation to the Piper Alpha disaster was publicly intimated in July 1991 and in consequence, as a matter of law, there cannot now be a prosecution at the instance of the Crown in respect of this matter.

Stornaway-Ullapool Ferry

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Government intends to seek EC objective funding to help finance the replacement of the Stornaway to Ullapool ferry.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is too early to say what projects might be funded from 1 January 1994 under the new round of the European structural funds, the regulations for which are still under negotiation.

Forestry

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions the interdepartmental working party on the Forestry Commission has met; and on what dates.

Sir Hector Monro: The Forestry Review Group has met twice: on 31 March and on 19 May 1993.

Art Therapy

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many grants the Scottish Office is awarding to Scottish students studying for the postgraduate diploma in art therapy in (a) English higher educational institutions and (b) Scottish higher educational institutions.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 May 1993]: The Scottish Office is supporting two Scottish students studying for the postgraduate diploma in art therapy at English higher education institutions in session 1992-93. There is only one similar course at a higher education institution in Scotland. It commenced only in session 1992-93 and the arrangements were finalised too late for it to be considered for an allocation of awards. The position will be reviewed for session 1993-94.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what monitoring he is carrying out of the factors influencing the drop out rate of first-year students on the postgraduate diploma in art therapy run by Edinburgh university settlement's school of art therapy.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 May 1993]: The Scottish Office Education Department does not monitor completion rates on individual courses at higher education institutions in Scotland. The Department recently published research into factors affecting non-completion rates in Scottish Universities and issued guidelines for promoting effective learning in higher education. Together with the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council, the Department maintains a general interest in completion rates across the sector as a whole.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total EC funding available to the Edinburgh university settlement's school of art therapy.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 May 1993]: I understand that Edinburgh University Settlement's school of art therapy is to receive funding of the order of 294,000 ECUs (£230,000) in the three-year period 1991-1993 through the European Community's HORIZON initiative.

Self-build Housing

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of the Scottish housing budget was allocated to self-build housing in percentage and money terms; and what percentage was taken up in the latest year for which figures are available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 May 1993]: Some £900 million is available to local authorities, Scottish Homes and new town development corporations for capital investment in housing in 1993-94. No separate budget for self-build housing is prescribed, and it is a matter for the individual authorities and agencies how to allocate the resources made available to them.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what statistics he has on the number of reported cases of food poisoning in Scotland in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 27 May 1993]: The numbers of food poisoning cases notified in Scotland in each of the last five years are as follows:

	Number
1989	3,197
1990	3,024
1991	2,938

[1] provisional figure

A more detailed analysis of food-borne infection in Scotland, and a commentary on the trends, may be found in part II of the report of the Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Food, the Richmond report. published in 1991. The report recommended that the current arrangements for national surveillance co-ordinators should be placed on a more formal basis and that is now in hand.

Deer Killing

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each forest in the Forestry Commission Inverness district for each year from 1990 (a) the culling targets for red and roe deer, (b) the numbers of red and roe deer actually culled and (c) the estimates of the red and roe deer populations.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 17 May 1993]: The information is as follows:

Forestry Commission (Privatisation)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what aspects of the privatisation of the Forestry Commission in respect of (a) the ownership of woodlands and (b) the regulatory functions of the commission will require primary legislation.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 18 May 1993]: Ministers have come to no decisions about the effectiveness of the current incentives for forestry investment or the ownership and management of Forestry Commission woodlands, which are the subject of review. Only once they have done so would they consider any consequent requirements for primary legislation.

Scottish Parliamentary Business

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet representatives of the Scottish National party to discuss procedure relating to Scottish parliamentary business; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 20 May 1993]: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the right hon. Member for Strangford (Mr. Taylor) on 5 May 1993 at columns 178-79.

Hearing Aids

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who is responsible for the provision and maintenance of radio hearing aids for (a) pre-school children, (b) children at school and (c) students in further and higher education in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 May 1993]: Where a radio hearing aid is specified as special educational provision in the record of needs of a pre-school child or a child attending a school, it is the duty of a responsible education authority to arrange for the provision and maintenance of such aids.

Boards of management of further education colleges have a duty to ensure that their college provides suitable and efficient further education. They have a power to provide to students such assistance of a financial or other nature as they may consider appropriate. In exercising their functions they must have regard to the requirements of those with learning difficulties. Education authorities' bursary arrangements provide a discretion to provide allowances for students with special educational needs.

Within higher education it is for individual higher education institutions to consider the arrangements necessary to meet the additional learning support needs of such students. Eligible students in higher education may be entitled to disabled students' allowances, including provision for the purchase of specialist equipment as part of their student award.

Bail

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average sentence imposed for breach of the Bail etc. (Scotland) Act 1980, in the sheriff court and the High Court in each of the past five years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 May 1993]:

The available information is given in the table:

DEFENCE

Allivane Ltd.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 27 October 1992, Official Report, column 610, when the 1988 contract with Allivane Ltd. was signed; for how long ammunition was stored in his Department's facilities for Allivane; when the consignment of ammunition was removed from this Department's storage facilities; and at what facilities the ammunition was stored.

Mr. Aitken: A contract between my Department and Allivane Ltd. for the short-term storage of ammunition was signed on 2 June 1988. The ammunition was stored at the central ammunition depot Longtown for a period of 10 days from 7 June until 16 June 1988.

Mr. John Anderson

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the legal basis of the arrest by his Department's police, of Mr. John Anderson, in Scotland, on 24 April 1990; where and by whom the arrest warrant was issued; if he will place in the Library the findings of the board of inquiry into the subsequent road accident on the A249 near Dettling, during the afternoon of 24 April involving Mr. Anderson; what legal action resulted from the road accident; who covered the costs of the repairs to the respective vehicles involved in the road accident; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Mr. John Anderson was arrested by Ministry of Defence Police (MDP) on 24 April 1990 in connection with the giving of a corrupt gift contrary to section 1 of the Prevention of Corruption Act 1906. He was interviewed and subsequently released without charge. The warrant for his arrest was issued by a justice of the peace at Ramsgate magistrates court, Kent. Whilst under arrest the MDP vehicle in which Mr. Anderson was travelling was hit by a private car. There was no board of inquiry into this matter, but a road accident report was undertaken by Kent police who decided that legal action was not appropriate. The MDP vehicle was written off and my Department received £2,000 from the third party insurance of the other vehicle involved which was at fault.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the buildings currently owned or rented by his Department, together with (a) the estimated value, (b) the annual rent and (c) the annual maintenance cost of each building in the current financial year.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Select Committee Recommendations

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Select Committee recommendations have been made about, and how many accepted by, his Department since April 1989.

Mr. Hanley: Since April 1989, the Defence Select Committee has published 42 reports on matters relating to my Department. These reports, together with the Government responses made to them, are available in the Library of the House; Government responses to the reports have appeared either as command papers, or have been published as special reports by the Defence Select Committee itself. My Department has contributed to the work of other Select Committees as requested; any reports reflecting these contributions are also available in the Library. The "Sessional Information Digest" lists Select Committee reports and provides reference numbers to Government responses up to the start of the current Session. Similar information for the current Session may be found in the House of Commons "Weekly Information Bulletin". Alternatively, Select Committee reports and the Government responses relating to them may be traced through the POLIS data base in the Library.

Cadet Corps

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what financial resources have been devoted by his Department towards the running of the (a) Air Training

Cadet Corps, (b) Army Cadet Force, (c) Combined Cadet Force and (d) Sea Cadet Corps in each year since 1988.

Mr. Hanley: Information in the form requested is available only from financial year 1991-92 and is as follows:

£ million

Financial year	Sea Cadet Corps[1]	Army Cadet Force[2 3]	Air Training Corps	Combined Cadet Force[2 3]
1991-92	4·0	20·0	25·1	5·8
1992-93	4·8	16·5	27·5	6·5

[1] Excludes the cost of the Harbour Training Ship HMS Bristol (about £1 million).
[2] Includes an element of capital works expenditure.
[3] For 1991-92 Earnings Related National Insurance Contributions for Combined Cadet Force Army personnel are included in the Army Cadet Force figure.

Polaris

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 17 May, Official Report, columns 81-82, if he will explain the differences between his answer and the evidence given to the Defence Committee on the annual operation and maintenance costs of Polaris on 30 January 1985, HC 37 (1984-85), p. 159, Q 935; and what items are included in the figure given in the evidence.

Mr. Hanley: The figures given in the answer of my right hon. Friend the member for Epsom and Ewell (Mr. Hamilton) of 17 May (Official Report, columns 81-82) represent the best available estimate of the average annual operating cost of the Polaris system in the individual years 1991-92 and 1992-93. Figures given to the Defence Select Committee in 1985 are likely to have covered similar items, but were derived from a defence-wide cost-attribution system which is no longer in use. This system was largely reliant on contemporary judgments on the attribution of costs which were refined over time. It would not be possible to carry out a more detailed examination of the basis for the figures given in 1985 without incurring disproportionate cost.

Relocation and Amalgamations

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the sections and organisations within his Department for which there are plans for relocation or amalgamation.

Mr. Hanley: Reorganisation plans have an impact within my Department and throughout the armed forces. It would not be possible to list every section and organisation for which there are plans without disproportionate cost. A number of changes have already been announced and announcements will continue to be made as and when decisions are taken.

Search and Rescue

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what will be the reduction, in square miles, between the European waters area currently covered by a one-hour response time for search and rescue helicopters as illustrated in annex A of "The Future Provision of RAF Search and Rescue Helicopters" and that illustrated in annex B in (a) the south-west approaches, St. George's channel Irish sea area, (b) southern North sea and Dover straits and (c) the North sea area between Peterhead and Flamborough head;

(2) what was the total area in square miles in the United Kingdom search and rescue region outside the standard one-hour response time (a) as illustrated in annex A of the defence open government document, "The Future Provision of RAF Search and Rescue Helicopters" and (b) as illustrated in annex C of the same document;

(3) how large an area in square miles will be outside the standard one-hour response time within the United Kingdom search and rescue region for search and rescue helicopters as a result of redeploying Sea King flight 202 to RAF Chivenor from RAF Brawdy;

(4) how large an area, in square miles, and how many miles of coastline, his Department calculated would be outside the standard one-hour response time for search and rescue helicopters when considering whether to transfer Sea Kings from RAF Boulmer to RAF Leuchars.

Mr. Hanley: The information required is not readily available within the timescale requested and I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

RAF Equipment

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when results of the RAF equipment supply study will be announced.

Mr. Aitken: In the autumn.

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what account is taken of cost effectiveness and value for money in the RAF study into equipment supply.

Mr. Aitken: Cost effectiveness and value for money in defence procurement are central to this study.

Burtonwood Air Base

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the future use of Burtonwood air base and his Department's surrounding land; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: We are currently considering alternative defence uses for RAF Burtonwood once it is vacated by the United States army later this year and hope to take a decision on the site's future as soon as possible. In parallel we are discussing prospects for the site's development with the local authority should it be declared surplus to defence requirements; in this context a planning application for development of some of the land surrounding the main site has recently been submitted to Warrington borough council.

Bosnia

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what specific steps Her Majesty's Government are taking to provide support on the ground to their commitment of safe havens in Bosnia; what British forces are to be provided in support of this concept; and what rules of engagement they are being given.

Mr. Hanley: Security Council resolution 836 calls on United Nations member states to contribute forces to facilitate the implementation of the safe areas. The United Kingdom is proposing to continue the deployment of 2,100 ground troops serving with UNPROFOR Bosnia-Herzegovina command, which constitutes the largest national contribution to that command. A total of 173 of these troops are based at an airfield adjacent to the town of Tuzla. Tuzla and it surroundings is one of the safe areas designated by Security Council resolution 824. The troops will remain there, structured and equipped as at present. They will continue to operate under rules of engagement issued by the United Nations commander.

Married Quarters

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the availability of housing including married quarters in the Stockport and Glasgow areas; and what is the estimated cost of each area for the location of additional personnel for the new Army personnel centre.

Mr. Hanley: The housing supply in both the Greater Manchester and Glasgow conurbations is adequate to meet the requirement likely to be generated by the Army personnel centre. Although some existing married quarters near to the locations could be used, extra quarters would need to be acquired in each case. Because there are currently fewer married quarters in the Stockport catchment area than in Glasgow, provision of married quarters for an Army personnel centre at Stockport would cost nearly £1,000,000 more than allowed in the investment appraisal for the Glasgow option.

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the cost of providing additional parking facilities at Kentigern house for the proposed increase in full-time staff for the new Army personnel centre.

Mr. Hanley: It is not proposed to add to the 96 car parking spaces currently available at Kentigern house; Glasgow has a most efficient public transport system which is the normal method of commuting into the city.

Parachute Regiment

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what disciplinary action has been taken against those members of the Parachute Regiment who were bound over to keep the peace for 18 months in a recent court action arising out of incidents in Coalisland, Co. Tyrone.

Mr. Hanley: The soldiers were brought before the magistrates court for various charges relating to the alleged offences committed in Coalisland. No separate disciplinary action may now be taken against them for the same or substantially the same offences.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the estimated legal costs incurred by his Department in respect of the recent court action against members of the Parachute Regiment arising out of incidents in Coalisland, Co. Tyrone.

Mr. Hanley: The costs of this action will not be determined until solicitors' bills have been received for consideration and approval by the Crown Solicitor's Office, Northern Ireland, on behalf of the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many senior and junior barristers were employed by his Department in the recent court action against members of the Parachute Regiment arising out of incidents in Coalisland, Co. Tyrone.

Mr. Hanley: On legal advice, four leading counsel and four junior counsel were employed to represent the particular interests of the individual soldiers concerned.

Belize

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will now review his policy in respect of the proposed withdrawal of British military forces from Belize; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Plans for the evolution of the British military presence in Belize were announced on 13 May. We see no reason to change these plans.

Maralinga Nuclear Test Site

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to meet his Australian counterpart to discuss outstanding matters in regard to United Kingdom obligations to clean up the radioactive contamination at the Maralinga nuclear test site in Australia.

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence together with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, plans to meet the Australian Ministers for Foreign Affairs and for Primary Industries and Energy on 17 June 1993 to discuss this subject.

WALES

Forestry Commission

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received on the subject of the future of the Forestry Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend and I have received five written representations on this matter during the last year.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was (a) the number of people employed, (b) the area owned and (c) the amount of timber produced by the Forestry Commission in each year since 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information is as follows:

Forestry Commission in Wales

Year ending 31 March	Number[1] employed	Area managed ('000s Hectares)	Timber produced ('000s Cubic metres)
1987	1,700	145	761

1992	1,290	139	733

[1] This includes directly employed contractors.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to meet the trade unions of the employees of the Forestry Commission to discuss the commission's future; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend has no plans to meet representatives of the employees of the Forestry Commission. I understand that representatives of all the trade unions concerned are being kept informed of matters affecting their interests through meetings with the Director General of the Forestry Commission.

Diseases

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total number of cases of (a) TB, (b) diphtheria and (c) dysentery in Wales for each county in each year since 1979.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The numbers of notifications of tuberculosis and dysentery in each county in Wales in each year since 1979 are given in the following table. There were no notifications of diphtheria during this period.

Incomes

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales over 16 years have an income of less than £75 per week.

Mr. Redwood: The estimated number of full-time employees in Wales at April 1992 with gross weekly earnings below £75 was 3,500.

Electrical Goods

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the percentage of electrical goods manufactured in Wales exported overseas in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The information requested is not available.

Relocation and Amalgamations

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the sections and organisations within his Department for which there are plans for relocation or amalgamation.

Mr. Redwood: I have no such plans at present.

A465

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he is now in a position to give the start date for construction of the Aberdulais to Glynneath section of the A465.

Sir Wyn Roberts: A start to the main works is planned for 1993-94 contingent on the availability of trunk roads programme resources during the year.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the latest total figure for the number of (a) fatalities and (b) accidents on the A465 between Aberdulais and Glynneath since 1978.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 8 June 1992, column 57-59, for the number of accidents involving personal injury and the number of deaths resulting from accidents on the stretch of the A465 between Aberdulais, junction with A4109, and Glynneath, junction with B4242, for 1979 to 1990. Figures for 1978 are not readily available. Updated figures for 1991 and provisional figures for 1992 are given in the following table along with totals for the years 1979 to 1992.

	Number of accidents[1]	Number killed
1979-1992[2]	263	26

[1]Excluding those where there was no personal injury—for which no information is available.
[2]Provisional.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the fatal accident on the A465 near Resolven on Tuesday 25 May.

Sir Wyn Roberts: A full report on the accident is awaited.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the cost to date and the expected future cost of his Department's market-testing programme; how many staff are engaged full-time in work relating to market testing; which firms of consultants have been used in connection with the market-testing programme; and how they were selected.

Mr. Redwood: The estimated cost of the Welsh Office market testing programme since November 1991 is £647,000. The future costs of the programme have yet to be determined. There are the equivalent of approximately 7·5 full-time staff engaged on work relating to market testing. Coopers and Lybrand, Touche Ross and Price Waterhouse management consultants have been used in connection with the market testing programme. All three appointments followed competitive tendering exercises.

Trawsfynydd Lake

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will close Trawsfynydd lake to members of the public until a full inquiry has been carried out into the radioactivity of the lake; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Regular monitoring of a range of environmental materials from Trawsfynydd lake is undertaken by the directorate of fisheries research of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. This monitoring indicates that the radioactivity dose to the critical group, that is, people who consume fish from the lake and spend time on the lakeside, is well within internationally recommended safety limits. There would appear to be no reason, therefore, why Nuclear Electric should be advised to close the lake to the public.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the level of radioisotopes in Trawsfynydd lake.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Data on levels of radioisotopes in Trawsfynydd lake are collected in the course of routine monitoring by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. Results are presented in the "Aquatic Environment Monitoring Report" published annually by that Department's directorate of fisheries research. The latest issue, No. 34, item 6.10 of which refers to Trawsfynydd, is in the Library of the House.

Bone Cancer

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many incidents of bone cancer there have been in Wales in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The recorded number of cases of cancer of the bone and articular cartilage for persons resident in Wales for the years 1979 to 1988 is given in the following table:

Year	Total
1979	83
1980	65
1981	52
1982	81
1983	85
1984	108
1985	97
1986	100
1987	88

Source: Welsh Cancer Registry.

The ninth revision of the International Classification of Diseases, Injuries and Causes of Death (ICD 9) was introduced in 1980. Prior to this date the classification of cancer of the bone and articular cartilage included certain types of cancer excluded in later years' figures.

Radon Gas

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many homes the National Radiological Protection Board has surveyed for radon in each year since 1989 in (a) postcode district SA, (b) Wales and (c) the United Kingdom.

Mr. Redwood: The number of homes surveyed for which results are available are shown in the following table:

Year	Postcode SA	Wales	United Kingdom
1989	110	390	8,200
1990	25	140	3,500
1991	90	430	71,000
1992	7	73	23,000
1993	18	110	31,000

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his best estimate of the number of houses in postal district SA whose occupants are exposed to radon gas in concentrations of (a) 0 to 25 becquerels per cubic metre, (b) 26 to 50 becquerels per cubic metre, (c) 51 to 100 becquerels per cubic metre, (d) 101 to 200 becquerels per cubic metre and (e) more than 200 becquerels per cubic metre.

Mr. Redwood: The research completed to date does not allow the estimate requested to be prepared.

Car Manufacturing

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of people in Wales directly employed by the car manufacturing industry in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Levels of employment in the car manufacturing industry (a) in Wales are given in the following table. Figures are available only for years when a census of employment was carried out and the results prior to 1981 are not comparable with later years.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Sick and Disabled People

5. Mr. Ashby: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much real spending on long-term sick and disabled people has changed since 1979.

Mr. Burt: Expenditure for benefits on long-term sick and disabled people in 1992-93 was nearly £15 billion; nearly treble the 1979 level in real terms.

18. Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures his Department has taken to maintain support for disabled people.

Mr. Scott: Since 1979 we have introduced a wide range of improvements, aimed at providing a comprehensive and coherent system of disability benefits. These improvements include the introduction of disability living allowance and disability working allowance in April last year.

By the end of 1992-93 expenditure on benefits for long-term sick and disabled people has risen by 197 per cent. in real terms to £14·9 billion.

Pensioners

10. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of recently retired pensioners income derives from state benefits.

Mr. Hague: We estimate that, in the latest year for which information is available, 36 per cent. of the income of recently retired pensioners was derived from state benefits.

Notes:
1. Source: Family Expenditure Survey.
2. Recently retired pensioners are pensioner units where the head of the unit is aged less than five years above the state pension age.

11. Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received about the average value of the capital assets owned by pensioners.

Mr. Lilley: We estimate that on average, between 1979 and 1989, pensioners' income from investments rose by 130 per cent. in real terms to £23·10 a week. Reliable information on the average value of all capital assets held by pensioners is not available, but just over half all pensioners own their own home. In England, the estimated average value of owner-occupied homes of those over 65 is more than £42,000.

12. Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of pensioners retiring (a) in 1979 and (b) in the latest year for which figures are available, had incomes from savings; and what was the real average level of savings on each of those two dates.

Information is not available in the form requested because the family expenditure survey does not tell us when people retire. The information in the table is about those who have recently retired—that is, where the head of the unit is aged less than five years over state pension age. The sample size of those one year over state pension age would be too small to be reliable.

Income from savings
Recently retired pensioners

	Percentage of units with investment income		Average amount for those in receipt[1]
	1979	1989	1979	1989
Pensioner couples	73	87	21·60	41·50
Single pensioners	60	64	12·60	31·50
All pensioner units	68	78	18·20	38·10

Notes:
1. Source: Family Expenditure survey.
2. Recently retired pensioner units are defined as: single woman aged 60 to 64; single men aged 65 to 69; and couples in which the husband is aged 65 to 69.

15. Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioner households had incomes above the national average in 1979, and in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Hague: The information is in the table:

Number of pensioners above contemporary average income

	BHC	AHC	BHC	AHC
Pensioner couples	0·8	0·9	1·0	1·2
Single pensioners	0·7	0·8	0·7	0·9
All pensioners	1·5	1·8	1·7	2·1

	BHC	AHC	BHC	AHC
Pensioner couples	18	20	20	23
Single pensioners	16	20	15	21
All pensioners	17	20	18	22

Notes:
1. Source: Family Expenditure Survey.
2. BHC and AHC denote before and after housing costs respectively.
3. 1988-89 denotes a combined sample from the 1988 and 1989 Family Expenditure Surveys.
4. Figures have been calculated using the methodology used to produce the Households Below Average Income results. They therefore relate to individual pensioners (rather than pensioner units) and assume all members of a household share the same standard of living.

20. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has of the total value of an average pensioner's savings, investments and home; and what was the figure in 1979.

Mr. Hague: The information is not available in the form requested. In 1989, the latest date for which information is available, the average weekly investment income received by pensioners was £23·10. This represented an increase of 130 per cent. over the average sum of £10·00 received in 1979. Home ownership among pensioners increased from 40 per cent. to 52 per cent. over the same period, with 94 per cent. of pensioner owner occupiers owning their homes outright.

25. Mr. Legg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the trend in pensioners' real income since 1979.

Mr. Hague: Since 1979 pensioners' total average net incomes have increased by 30 per cent., or 37 per cent. after payment of housing costs.

Fraud

13. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what further action his Department is taking to reduce fraud.

Mr. Burt: This year an extra £10 million has been allocated to the Benefits Agency to provide additional trained staff in key areas, the development of information technology and further research to help step up the fight against fraud and abuse.

We have also introduced new financial incentives to encourage local authorities to crack down on housing benefit fraud.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has of the extent of fraud in the social security budget; and what steps he is proposing to take to combat it.

Mr. Hague: Although the full extent of social security fraud is not known, a target of nearly £1 billion fraud savings has been set for 1993-94. The Benefits Agency has been allocated an additional £10 million for each of the next three years to allow the deployment of more investigators and to finance other anti-fraud initiatives. New financial incentives have also been introduced to encourage local authorities to combat housing benefit/council tax benefit fraud.

Benefits

17. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent measures his Department has taken to maintain the real level of benefits.

Mr. Burt: From April this year we have maintained the real values of all social security benefits by fully uprating them in line with the movement in prices. Because of our success in keeping inflation down this increase, based on last September's RPI, was over twice as much as it would have been using the current inflation rate of 1·3 per cent.

In addition, the continuing payment of the element previously allowed for payment of the community charge as well as 100 per cent. council tax benefit, provides extra help worth up to £1·64 a week for a single person and £2·90 for a couple. Overall this help is worth around £750 million a year.

State Pension

19. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent representations he has had with respect to the future of the state pension.

Mr. Hague: We regularly receive representations about the state pension.

Loans

21. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to review the operation of budgetary and crisis loans.

Mr. Scott: We are carefully considering the operation of the social fund in response to a number of authoritative reports and our own close monitoring of the fund.

Elderly People

22. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures his Department has taken to maintain support for the elderly.

Mr. Hague: Since 1979 we have maintained the real value of the basic retirement pension; improved choice and flexibility in pension provision so that now 67 per cent. of recently retired pensioners have income from occupational pensions; and the extra help above normal upratings made available to pensioners on income-related benefits since 1989 is now worth around £1 billion a year.

21-hour Rule

23. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has had on the 21-hour rule.

Mr. Burt: The 21-hour rule enables unemployed claimants in receipt of income support to follow part-time education courses while continuing their search for work. We have received a number of representations from hon. Members and others over the past few months.

Pensions Harmonisation

24. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many letters he has received over the past 12 months from the general public about the issue of harmonising the ages of pension entitlement for men and women; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: Since the consultation document "Options for Equality in State Pension Age" was published in December 1991, we have received over 4,000 responses from members of the public. The Government are committed to the equalisation of state pension age. We will announce our proposals in due course.

Social Fund

26. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will extend the rules for eligibility for the social fund to include fares to courts relating to family proceedings.

Mr. Scott: We have no plans to do so. Arrangements concerning attendance at legal proceedings are a matter for the court.

Automated Credit Transfer

27. Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many representations he has received about his Department's consultations for automated credit transfer.

Mr. Burt: We have recently received a substantial number of representations about automated credit transfer, including letters from right hon. and hon. Members and a number of individuals.

Pension Incomes

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much total pension incomes increased per annum between (a) 1974 and 1979 and (b) 1979 and 1992.

Mr. Hague: Estimates of pensioners' income for 1974 have not yet been calculated on a basis consistent with those for 1989, the latest year for which data are available. However, our most recent comparable estimates show that annual increases in pensioners' incomes were, on average:
(a) between 1974 and 1979—0·6 per cent. a year; and
(b) between 1979 and 1988—3·3 per cent. a year.

National Insurance

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the amount of revenue that would accrue to the Government in the first full year from an increase in employees' national insurance contributions of (a) 1 per cent. and (b) 2 per cent.

Mr. Hague: The figures are as follows:
(a) £1·8 billion
(b) £3·6 billion

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has as to how many people below the basic rate income tax threshold will pay more national insurance contributions during the 1994-95 financial year as a result of the changes announced in the Budget.

Mr. Hague: It is estimated that in 1994-95 about 500,000 people whose earnings fall below the basic rate income tax threshold will pay slightly more in national insurance contributions.

Pension Schemes

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are (a) the total numbers of members, (b) the total current estimated liabilities and (c) the average liability per member in respect of (i) private sector funded pension schemes and (ii) public sector unfunded pension schemes.

Mr. Hague: The information is not available in the form requested. Membership, and approximate liabilities, of public sector unfunded schemes, and of all funded schemes, including those public sector schemes which are funded, is in the table.

	Active members (millions)	All members (millions)	Estimated liabilities (£ million)	Average liability per active member (£)	Average liability per member (£)
Public sector unfunded	2·8	5·2	170,000	60,000	33,000
Private/public sector funded	7·8	14·9	430,000	55,000	29,000
All schemes	10·6	20·1	600,000	57,000	30,000

Source: Government Actuary's Department.

Notes:
(a) Numbers of scheme members are based on 1987 GAD Survey of Occupational Pension Schemes.
(b) Estimates of scheme liabilities are for 1991 and are given at 1991 prices.
(c) Estimates of average liability per scheme member are illustrative and assume that sectoral scheme membership did not change between 1987 and 1991.
(d) Active members are those currently contributing to the scheme. All members includes deferred pensioners and beneficiaries.

Child Support

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security who will be required to pay a fee, and how often, for a maintenance application to the Child Support Agency; how long applicants to the agency will be given to pay the fee; and what is the applicant's fee payable annually to the agency.

Mr. Burt: Both the absent parent and the parent with care of the children will be required to pay £44 each for the annual assessment service, renewable each year. The fee is not payable if they are in receipt of income support, family credit or disability working allowance; they are under 16, or under 19 and in full-time education up to A-level or equivalent; or their income falls below a certain limit. Clients normally have 14 days in which to pay the fee.

DNA Tests

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security who will pay for deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) testing, on a denial of parenthood, in cases where the Child Support Agency applies to the court for such testing.

Mr. Burt: Any parties who make an application to the courts for a declaration of parentage may request that DNA tests be taken, but there is no legal power for them or for the courts to require such tests. Where the Child Support Agency is the applicant it supplies conventional evidence to support its application and does not routinely invite or pay for DNA testing. However, the agency may pay for test fees at the express request of the courts, with the intention of seeking recovery of court costs awarded in its favour.

Relocation and Amalgamations

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the sections and organisations within his Department for which there are plans for relocation or amalgamation.

Mr. Hague: There are no current plans for any significant relocation or amalgamation of sections or organisations within the Department.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the buildings currerntly owned or rented by his Department, together with (a) the estimated value, (b) the annual rent and (c) the annual maintenance cost of each building in the current financial year,

Mr. Hague: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Sickness Benefit

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Wales have applied for sickness benefit for each month since January 1992; and if he will indicate the total cost of these benefits.

Mr. Scott: Information is not available in the form requested. Available information about benefit claims is in the table and relates to the Benefits Agency's Wales area directorate; the boundaries of which do not correspond exactly with those of Wales. Expenditure on sickness benefit in Great Britain was estimated to be £315 million in the year 1992-93.

Centenarians

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many men and women are expected to reach the age of 100 years or more in June; what were the figures for (a) January 1993, (b) January 1979 and (c) June 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: The information is in the table:

	Number
June 1993	260
January 1993	264
June 1979	111
January 1979	108

Nigerian Residents

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many residents of Nigeria are currently, to his knowledge, in receipt of either United Kingdom social security, housing or other benefit; and what information he has on their occupations.

Mr. Burt: In December 1991, the latest date for which figures are currently available, 206 people resident in Nigeria were receiving United Kingdom retirement and widows pensions. There are currently six residents of Nigeria in receipt of war pensions. Information on other benefits is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. We have no information about the occupation of these beneficiaries.

EC Citizens

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has as to how many non-British EC citizens claimed board and lodging allowances during the past 12 months; and what cost; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: There is no board and lodging allowance within the social security system. The Department's records do not show a benefit claimant's nationality so information about the numbers of non-British EC citizens who receive income support and housing benefit is not available.

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many non-British EC citizens have claimed benefits in the United Kingdom during the last 12 months; at what cost and for what purpose; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: Separate information on the benefits claimed by non-British EC citizens in Great Britain and the amounts paid to them is not collected. The information requested is therefore not available. The position in Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to prevent non-British EC citizens from coming to the United Kingdom for the purpose of claiming board and lodging allowances; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: Students, pensioners and non-economically active people from member states of the European Community enter the United Kingdom on the condition that they do not become a charge on the social security system. An EC national seeking work in Great Britain may lose the right to income support after six months if he has not found employment and has no reasonable prospect of doing so. The only group of EC citizens and their families who can claim social security without qualification are those who are working or who have worked in the United Kingdom, but if unemployed, they must meet all the restrictions and requirements relating to such benefits. This means that they must generally be both available for and actively seeking work. Subject to this, all EC citizens have the right under European treaties to move freely to another member state.

There is no board and lodging allowance within the social security system. People with a genuine rent liability may get help with their housing costs from housing benefit. The position in Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the cost to date and the expected future cost of his Department's market-testing programme; how many staff are engaged full-time in work relating to market testing; which firms of consultants have been used in connection with the market-testing programme; and how they were selected.

Mr. Hague: The cost to 31 March 1993 has been some £3·2 million and the expected cost for the financial year 1993-94 is broadly estimated at £3·5 million. Currently there are some 150 full-time staff assigned to the market testing programme. The following firms of consultants have been used in connection with the market-testing programme:

Coopers and Lybrand
Kodak
KPMG
Hemsley Miller and Co.
PA Consultancy
PE International
PMMS Consulting
Price Waterhouse
SEMA Consultants
Shreeveport
Symonds Facilities Management
Touche Ross

The above were all selected by competitive tender.

Overpayments

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the cases of social security investigation in Lancashire in each year since 1989 resulted in identifying overpayments; and what was the total amount of these overpayments in each of those years.

Mr. Hague: I understand from Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, that the information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Sickness Benefit

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many sickness benefit claimants there have been in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Such information as is available is in the table. It is based on a 1 per cent. sample of claimants at a point in time in each year.

(i) Date	(ii) Sickness Benefit claimants[1,2]	(iii) Sickness Benefit beneficiaries[1]
2 June 1979	488,000	430,000

31 March 1990	309,000	103,000
30 March 1991	372,000	110,000

Notes:

[1] Statutory sick pay introduced from 6 April 1993 for a maximum eight weeks sickness absence in a tax year. From 6 April 1986 statutory sick pay was payable for up to 28 weeks in any one period of incapacity for work.

[2] Includes claimants who are not entitled to sickness benefit, but receive national insurance credits.

Spending

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the change in real terms in social security spending in each year since 1978; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Details of total social security spending from 1978-79 to 1992-93 are in the table.

	Expenditure in £ million		Percentage change in real terms over previous year
Years	Cash	1992-93 prices	Per cent.
1978-79	16,602	46,341	—

1980-81	23,751	48,017	2·32
1981-82	28,963	53,397	11·21
1982-83	33,000	56,794	6·36
1983-84	36,881	60,666	6·82
1984-85	39,957	62,553	3·11
1985-86	43,502	64,577	3·24
1986-87	46,859	67,393	4·36
1987-88	49,145	66,998	−0·59
1988-89	49,967	63,496	−5·23
1989-90	53,026	63,227	−0·42
1990-91	59,497	65,683	3·89
1991-92	69,048	71,465	8·80
1992-93	78,343	78,343	9·62

Notes:

1. 1992-93 figures are estimated outturn.
2. The real terms decrease over the period 1987-88 to 1989-90 is largely attributable to the fall in unemployment since 1986.

Unemployed Volunteers

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on what date his proposal to relax the availability for work rule for unemployed volunteers will be implemented; and if the concession concerning 48 hours will be extended to unemployed claimants who (a) provide a caring service, (b) have a part-time job or (c) attend a part-time training or education course under the 21-hour rule; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: We hope to introduce an amendment to regulations for implementation during the summer.

Many unemployed people who provide a caring service are not required to be available for work at all. However, we have no plans to extend the proposed concession other than to those who are volunteers.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many attendance allowance claims have (a) resulted in an award and (b) been rejected, broken down by the type of evidence required, in each month since May 1992 at each disability benefit centre and for the country as a whole.

Mr. Scott: The administration of attendance allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mr. M. Bichard to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 27 May 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to the points raised in your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how many attendance allowance claims have (a) resulted in an award and (b) been rejected, broken down by the type of evidence required, in each month since May 1992 at each disability benefit centre and for the country as a whole.

The information has been provided in the form of a table attached and shows the results nationally, by each Disability Benefit Centre and at the unit at Blackpool. The categories of evidence used within the tables are as follows:

01—Claimants self-assessment as on claim form
02—Additional information
03—Factual report (hospital, GP)
04—External Medical Practitioner
05—Visting Officer
06—Visiting Officer plus other
Unknown—Evidence type not recorded

The table includes information on both normal and special rules claims.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report. A copy will also be placed in the Library.

Medical Boards

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what restrictions apply to a doctor who is a member of one of his Department's medical board panels in respect of giving a medical decision about a patient contrary to that of the medical board.

Mr. Scott: Medical boards are a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mr. M. Bichard to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 27 May 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to the points raised in your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking what restrictions apply to a doctor who is a member of one of his Department's medical board panels in respect of giving a medical decision about a patient contrary to that of the medical board.

A doctor who is a member of an Adjudicating Medical Authority (AMA) is there as an independent statutory authority and not as a representative of the Benefits Agency or any other organisation. If the medical board has two doctors, then although one of them is the Chairman, the Chairman does not have a casting vote. If the two doctors disagree, the case is adjourned and referred to an AMA consisting of three members. The AMA decision will be a majority decision.

Of course, a doctor is not permitted to be a member of an AMA if he is or may be affected directly by that case, or if he has taken any part in such case as a medical practitioner who has regularly attended the customer (Social Security (Adjudication) Regulation 33). In effect doctors are not permitted to sit on a board which involves making decisions on patients they have attended regularly.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report. A copy will also be placed in the Library.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Serbian Companies

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths), on 6 May, Official Report, column 204, if he will list the names and trading purposes of the 36 companies connected with Serbia or Montenegro known to his Department.

Mr. Needham: The list of 36 "persons connected with Serbia and Montenegro" referred to in my answers to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South is that attached to the open general supply licence (authorised recipients—Serbia and Montenegro) which came into force on 26 November 1992 and is available in the Library of the House. It is currently being renewed, and I will write separately to both the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent and the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South when the review is complete.

Plutonium

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the reactor or reactors of origin of plutonium exported to Japan from the United Kingdom since 1975.

Mr. Eggar: Since May 1979, the plutonium exported from the United Kingdom to Japan has arisen from the reprocessing of Japanese irradiated fuel by British Nuclear Fuels plc.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in what ways plutonium from the Wylfa Magnox power station has been disposed of since his answer of 9 March 1983 to the hon. Member for Bedfordshire, North (Sir T. Skeet), Official Report, column 403.

Mr. Eggar: Since 9 March 1983, arisings from Wylfa power station continue to contribute to the United Kingdom's civil holdings of plutonium under international safeguards. For the latest available data, I refer the hon. Member to the plutonium figures published on 4 February 1993, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

OFFER

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he received the annual report of the Office of Electricity Regulation; and when he next plans to meet the Director-General of OFFER.

Mr. Eggar: I received a copy of this report on 21 May 1993. Department of Trade and Industry Ministers meet the Director General of Electricity Supply from time to time.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library the supplements to (a) his energy technology support unit's report ETSU-R-72 and (b) energy paper 60 on renewable energy.

Mr. Eggar: The supplement to the energy technology support unit's report ETSU-R-72 was placed in the House of Commons Library in January this year.

No supplement to "Energy Paper 60" on renewable energy is planned. However, the Government will publish a fuller renewable energy strategy review document later this year, in the light of the REAG report and the "Coal" White Paper.

Pollutec 93

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assistance his Department will provide to British companies to participate in the Pollutec 93 exhibition in Paris in October.

Mr. Needham: Unfortunately, my Department received no bid for this exhibition in its priorities exercise for the relevant programme year. Therefore, no offer of support could be made under the trade fairs support scheme.

Subsequently, an approach was made to overseas promotions support branch by the Birmingham chamber of industry and commerce asking it to support the event. However, by then the provision for the scheme was fully committed making it impossible to offer assistance.

Naturally, if funds become available at a later date my Department will review the position.

ECGD

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the present staffing level of the Export Credit Guarantees Department; what is the projected level under the draft corporate plan; and what are the terms of reference of the external report commissioned on the ECGD.

Mr. Needham: The total staff employed in ECGD at present is 601. The staffing level projected by the draft corporate plan at April 1997 is 524.

The terms of reference for the external review of ECGD are:

"1. To consider and advise on the appropriate size and nature of the central services, in particular personnel, finance, IT, audit, management review, procurement and facilities management which ECGD needs to support its business effectively, taking account of:

- the constraints under which the Government Departments are required to operate, in particular with regard to Government accounting, and the personnel and other management policies of the Government;
- the current state of, and future strategy for ECGD's IT and other systems;
- its business objectives.

2. To advise on the pace at which any changes should or could be made.

- (a) without regard to ECGD's current running cost cash limits;
- (b) with a view to containing any additional running cost expenditure within existing running cost limits;

having regard to the ability of ECGD to place any surplus staff in other Government Departments or public sector organisations.

3. To advise on the implementation of any recommendations, having regard to the need to maintain the integrity and viability of ECGD's business operations."

Steel

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement regarding EC policy on steel prices.

Mr. Sainsbury: EC policy on steel prices is governed by the provisions of the ECSC treaty. The pricing decisions of individual EC steel producers are a matter for the companies concerned.

Trams

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps his Department is taking to ensure there is a British capability for manufacturing trams.

Mr. Sainsbury: My Department helps to enhance Britain's capability in light rail transit systems, which includes trams, in a number of ways, including support under the tracked-transport systems technology programme.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research his Department has undertaken into public attitudes to the British Nuclear Fuels plc nuclear waste substitution proposal and the storage of foreign nuclear waste in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: The possibility of substitution has been publicly acknowledged by Government since the reply by the then Under-Secretary of State for Energy to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 2 May 1986, Official Report, column 500-01. Although advice has been received from the radioactive waste management advisory committee, the Government's consideration of the proposal by British Nuclear Fuels plc to return nuclear waste by substitution has not yet been completed. If approved, substitution would not lead to any net overseas radioactivity being retained in the United Kingdom.

Inntrepreneur Scheme

Mr. Wareing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what representations he has respecting the inntrepreneur scheme operated by Grand Metropolitan Estates within the brewery industry; what have been the nature of such representations; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will refer the practice of the inntrepreneur scheme operated by Grand Metropolitan Estates within the brewery industry to the Office of Fair Trading.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Both I and my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade have received representations in the form of correspondence from Inntrepreneur Estates Ltd. lessees, or on their behalf. Whilst the terms of individual leases are a commercial matter for discussion between landlord and tenant, Ministers have on a number of occasions urged Grand Metropolitan, as managers of IEL, to deal sympathetically with IEL's tenants where changes were being introduced following the enactment of the Beer Orders or the Courage/Grand Metropolitan transaction. We continue to keep in touch with IEL to ensure that they are aware of the importance we attach to this. The complaints received by the Department do not appear to raise issues under the competition legislation. However, if the hon. Member has any specific examples of anti-competitive practices, it is open to him to raise these with the Director General of Fair Trading.

Recycling

Mr. Robathan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what response has been received from European Commissioners and the German Economics Minister to his concerns over the impact of the German packaging regulations on the United Kingdom recycling industry; and what further action may be taken to alleviate the difficulties being experienced by some sectors.

Mr. Eggar: The European Commission responded on 17 May to my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade's letter about the German packaging regulations. The Commission shared the United Kingdom's concerns, hoped for progress on the proposed directive on packaging and packaging waste as a way of alleviating some aspects of the problem, and referred to a meeting of a group of experts to discuss the general question of packaging waste management on 4 June.

Officials from the Department of Trade and Industry and the Department of the Environment visited Bonn for discussions of the German packaging ordinance on 18 May. I hope that it will be possible for the German Economics Minister, Dr. Rexrodt, to respond positively to my right hon. Friend's letter in the light of those discussions.

North Sea Licences

Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the prevalence of legally binding joint application agreements of consortia for North sea licences requiring absolute unanimity among companies for any one consortium to withdraw from a licensing round; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Absolute unanimity was not a requirement among companies applying as a consortium for blocks offered in the 14th offshore licensing round. While no additional partners could be added after the consortium's application had been received, the withdrawal of original members, with the agreement of their partners, has been accepted.

Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) when his Department issued its offer to consortia to withdraw from the 14th round for North sea oil licences following the abolition of petroleum revenue tax relief; and if the offer was sent to all companies involved in consortia;

(2) how many days' notice were given by his Department for consultation between all members of consortia to decide whether to withdraw from their legally binding agreements and applications under the 14th round for North sea oil licences.

Mr. Eggar: A letter was sent on 26 March to the operator company leading each consortium which had applied for blocks offered in the 14th offshore licensing round. This letter was not sent until some two weeks after the proposed changes to petroleum revenue tax were announced in the Budget so that companies had a chance to examine their impact. It afforded companies an opportunity to reconsider their applications, and asked for a response by 2 April. Where companies asked for longer to respond, their request was granted.

Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many consortia are involved in bidding for the 14th round of North sea licences;

(2) how many companies, on average, take part in each consortium bidding for a licence for oil extraction in the North sea.

Mr. Eggar: Bids for the 14th offshore round licences were received from 63 consortia of up to five partners, and from 12 sole applicants. The average size of consortium was three companies.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the buildings currently owned or rented by his Department, together with (a) the estimated value, (b) the annual rent and (c) the annual maintenance cost of each building in the current financial year.

Mr. Eggar: My Department occupies space in 250 buildings, the majority on the common user estate operated by Property Holdings. The information requested on individual buildings cannot be given on grounds of disproportionate cost and commercial sensitivity. Total estimates for the rent and maintenance costs of properties on the common user estate are published in the supply estimates. On DTI's departmental estate, the cost of rent will be about £8·4 million and for maintenance £4·9 million in 1993-94.

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the estimated amount to be spent in 1993-94 in rent and other associated costs with the offices of his Department in Victoria street, London.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 27 May 1993]: My Department's accommodation in Victoria street will cost some £19·7 million in 1993-94, covering rent, maintenance and the contribution in lieu of rates.

Post Offices

Mr. Spearing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many (a) Crown and (b) sub post offices are currently used by Her Majesty's Government for payment of the main benefits; and what is the minimum number in each category which he expects to be capable of discharging this function for the next five years.

Mr. McLoughlin: As at 27 December 1992 there were 970 Crown post offices and 18,974 sub-post offices, all of which are used for the payment of benefits. The number of Crown offices is expected to decrease over the next five years in line with the Post Office's policy to convert them to agency offices. The number of sub-post offices is expected to remain broadly similar, although closures occur from time to time as a result of local circumstances.

Oil and Gas Division (Relocation)

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the first civil servants from his Department's oil and gas division to be relocated to Aberdeen will be in place.

Mr. Eggar: The first relocations are planned for the autumn of this year.

Insolvency

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the progress of his consultation on the law of insolvency.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Currently there is no general consultation in progress on insolvency law. Officials in the insolvency service continue to monitor its operation.

Relocation and Amalgamations

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the sections and organisations within his Department for which there are plans for relocation or amalgamation.

Mr. Eggar: The Department plans to relocate part of its petroleum engineering directorate to Aberdeen. We are also considering options for relocating other parts of the Department but as yet we have no firm plans.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 20 May, Official Report, column 289, if he will publish full details of his Department's study into the use of CFCs as solvents which highlighted a number of implications for the dry cleaning sector of the early phasing out of CFCs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The results of the study, "The Use of CFC 113 and 1, 1, 1 Trichloroethane as Solvents in UK Industry" commissioned by my Department from Touche Ross management consultants, were publicised at a conference hosted by DTI in October 1992 at the national motor cycle museum, Birmingham. Copies of the full report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses, and are available to the public from the DTI Library and information centre.

Household Waste

Mr. Robathan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions have been held with the packaging industry as to their views on the prospect of increased incineration of household waste; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Officials from the Department of Trade and Industry have had regular discussions with representatives of the packaging industry about various aspects of the disposal of domestic and commercial waste. These discussions will continue and will take into account the findings of the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution's report on incineration as a waste disposal option.

Regional Preferential Assistance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the percentage change in the level of regional preferential assistance by standardised United Kingdom region between 1978-79 and 1992-93.

Mr. Sainsbury: Apart from minor exceptions regional preferential assistance is restricted to the assisted areas of the United Kingdom. Between 1978-79 to 1984-85 the assisted area map was updated three times. With the exception of Northern Ireland there were substantial changes to the coverage of individual standard regions. Changes in the level of regional preferential assistance to individual regions between 1978-79 and 1992-93 are therefore influenced by the difference in coverage.

In 1978-79 two thirds of regional preferential assistance in Great Britain was accounted for by expenditure on regional development grants. RDGs were abolished in 1988 although residual expenditure is still continuing. In 1992-93 expenditure on RDG accounted for less than 10 per cent. of regional preferential assistance in Great Britain.

Percentage change in the level of regional preferential assistance 1978-79 to 1992-93

United Kingdom region	Percentage change
Northern	−69
Yorkshire and Humberside	−63
East Midlands	−65
West Midlands	[1] +5,300
South West	−14
North West	−67
Wales	[2] +7
Scotland	[2] −34
Northern Ireland	[2] +6

[1] In 1978-79 the Oswestry TTWA only had assisted area status.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the cost to date and the expected future cost of his Department's market-testing programme; how many staff are engaged full-time in work relating to market testing; which firms of consultants have been used in connection with the market-testing programme; and how they were selected.

Mr. Eggar: The cost to date of my Department's market-testing programme is some £1,050,000. This covers direct staff costs and consultants brought in to add private sector skills. Future costs cannot be gauged at this time as details of the forward programme are not yet available. Eight staff are engaged full time on market testing.

Firms of consultants which have been used in connection with the market testing programme are: Capita, Coopers and Lybrand, Ernst and Young, Grosvenor consultancy services, KPMG Peat Marwick, Lamb Associates, MM Consulting, PA Consulting, Pannell Kerr Forster Associates, Price Waterhouse, Shreeveport, SRU Ltd., and Stoker Associates. They were all selected by competitive tender.

Fraudulent Trading

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many cases of fraudulent trading have been investigated in each of the last three years; how many of these cases were brought to court; how many were not successful after (a) a full trial and (b) after dismissal by the judge before the defence case was heard in court; and what was the full cost of each investigation brought to court.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: In 1990-91, 44 cases were referred to my Department for investigation with a view to prosecution for fraudulent trading; of these, 39 have been investigated or are still under investigation; the comparable figures for 1991-92 are 60 and 50, and for 1992-93 are 48 and 28. Nine of the cases where investigation began in 1990-91 have come to trial and convictions were obtained in four of these cases. In three cases, the defendant was found not guilty at the conclusion of the trial and in one case the judge ordered the charges to be left on file. In the remaining case the trial judge directed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. None of the other cases for all three years has come to trial yet.

It is not possible, within the limit imposed on costs, to provide the information requested on the full cost of each investigation brought to court.

Exporting Countries

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the 10 countries that earned the most money from exports in each year since 1979.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is in the table.

Marathon Oil

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make public the environmental assessment made by Marathon Oil as part of its bid for blocks in St. George's channel included in the 14th licensing round.

Mr. Eggar: The environmental information provided by applicants for licences is submitted to my Department on a commercially confidential basis, as is the case with all other material supplied in support of applications.

Applicants are required to provide evidence only of their environmental policies. In addition, applicants for sensitive blocks offered in the current licensing round were encouraged to acquaint themselves with the environmental sensitivities of the areas concerned before making their application.

Sea Mammal Research Unit

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to require offshore operators to submit detailed plans of seismic work to the sea mammal research unit for approval before petroleum exploration work can begin.

Mr. Eggar: Where licences are awarded for blocks near to areas of cetacean activity in all or part of the year, operators are asked to consult the sea mammal research unit before seismic activity commences. They are also asked to use the lowest feasible energy levels for seismic surveys in these areas.

Coal Stocks

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultations he has held about the level of coal stocks necessary under the Electricity Act 1989 for 1993-94; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My Department is currently reviewing with the electricity generators, and with the National Grid Company which advises the President in such matters, the basis of the existing directions under sections 34 and 35 of the Electricity Act 1989 with a view to putting in place arrangements which reflects current security needs. The Government will announce in due course any revised arrangements for 1993-94 and subsequent years.

Collieries

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what finance is available to assist in funding consultancy studies for management and employee buyouts of British Coal collieries; how applications for such finance should be made; how many applications have been made; and how many, and of what value, have been successful.

Mr. Eggar: A fund of £1 million is available to assist management and employee buyout teams in meeting the costs of employing consultants and other professional advisers. Assistance will be at a maximum rate of 50 per cent. of the eligible costs, including VAT. Support for work in preparing bids for any one of the pits which British Coal is offering for licensing will not exceed £80,000. Should more than one team bid for a particular pit, the limit will be apportioned equally between the teams.

Applications for such assistance should be made to the coal privatisation unit, room 3.4.21, 1 Palace street, London SW1E 5HE.

Since the scheme was announced on 27 May my Department has received a number of inquiries, however, at this early stage no formal applications have been made.

Sellafield

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the advisory committee on the safety of nuclear installations will now examine the computer systems at THORP and the Sellafield vitrification plant.

Mr. Eggar: I am advised that the Health and Safety Commission's advisory committee on the safety of nuclear installations has no plans at present to examine these systems which satisfy the requirements of the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received from the advisory committee on the safety of nuclear installations and intermediate-level waste storage at Sellafield.

Mr. Eggar: None. A report by the Health and Safety Commission's advisory committee on the safety of nuclear installations on the accumulation of radioactive waste was published in July 1992.

Coal Imports

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much coal has been imported so far in the current financial year; and how much he expects to be imported in the full year.

Mr. Eggar: Information on the volume of coal imports is published monthly in "Energy Trends", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Since the completion of the single market at the end of 1992, total imports are having to be estimated while a new system is installed for providing data on imports from and through EC countries the latest available estimate is for March 1993. I have not made an estimate of coal imports for 1993-94.

Fiddlers Ferry Power Station

Mr. Hall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the projected working life of the Fiddlers Ferry power station.

Mr. Eggar: This is a commercial matter for PowerGen plc.

RECHAR

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will list those local authorities in the Yorkshire region which have received RECHAR money over the past two years giving the amount given to each authority;

(2) what is the value of RECHAR money allocated to the regions over the past two years.

Mr. Sainsbury: Eleven United Kingdom RECHAR programmes which were approved in February 1992 and for which grant has to be committed by 31 December 1993. The allocations to these programmes, in 1992 prices are as follows:

South Yorkshire	34·0
South Wales	31·2
East Midlands	30·6
Tyne and Wear, South East Northumberland	17·2
Mid Yorkshire	16·5
Eastern Scotland	16·0
Durham and Cleveland	12·2
Lancashire	8·3
South Staffordshire	5·0
North Warwickshire	4·0
Western Scotland	4·0
TOTAL	179·0

It is for each RECHAR programme committee to decide on grants for applications, including those from local authorities. Payments made by the end of May 1993 to local authorities in Yorkshire were, in pounds sterling:

South Yorkshire
Barnsley MBC	21,000
Doncaster MBC	209,000
Rotherham MBC	423,000
Sheffield MDC	92,000

Mid Yorkshire
Wakefield MDC	436,000
Kirklees MBC	100,000
TOTAL	1,281,000

Trade (Croatia)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 18 May, Official Report, column 123, when information regarding trade with Croatia was first separately identified from the rest of former Yugoslavia; how permissible trade with Croatia, Slovenia, Macedonia and Bosnia-Herzegovina was distinguished from prohibited trade with Serbia and Montenegro prior to the collection of separate figures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 27 May 1993]: United Kingdom trade with Serbia and Montenegro was separately identified from trade with the other former Yugoslav republics in the collection of trade statistics since 1 July 1992. However, in line with normal practice to make major changes to the statistical systems only at the start of a calendar year, separate figures were not published until January 1993. Since then, separate figures have been published for Slovenia, Croatia, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Serbia and Montenegro and Macedonia.

Assisted Areas

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he intends to dispatch his Department's new assisted areas map to the European Commission; and when he expects to secure its approval.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 27 May 1993]: Proposals should be submitted to the European Commission shortly. I cannot anticipate how long they will take to complete their consideration.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the dates being used in the statistical analysis of unemployment that informs his Department's review of the assisted areas.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 27 May 1993]: As the consultation document made clear, unemployment measures are the major criteria for the review. A number of relevant unemployment statistical series are being taken into account.

Pit Closures

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the current situation at the 12 reprieved collieries; what market testing has been carried out at these collieries; and what is the success of such operations.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 27 May 1993]: Decisions about individual collieries are a matter for British Coal. I understand the corporation will be maintaining these collieries in production while they carry out market testing. Negotiations for additional tonnages are continuing between British Coal and the generators.

Benefits (Automated Credit Transfer)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list each of the organisations which have written to him on the subject of automated credit transfer and the implications for the viability of sub post offices; and if he will indicate which have been (a) favourable and (b) unfavourable.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 26 May 1993]: We have recently received a substantial number of representations about automated credit transfer (ACT), including letters from a wide variety of organisations, from right hon. and hon. Members and from a number of individuals. These letters have argued in favour of the continued availability of the option of using post offices for the payment of benefits.

THORP

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will ensure that British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. make available under section 13A of the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 to those involved in the statutory consultation process in relation to the opening of the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield the report on the economics of the plant commissioned from Touche Ross.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 26 May 1993]: Under section 13A of the Radioactive Substances Act 1960, copies of all applications made to the chief inspector of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution are made publicly available, except where material is withheld for reasons of national security and commercial confidentiality. No report by Touche Ross has been submitted to HMIP by British Nuclear Fuels plc as part of an application under the Act. The question of making any such report on the economics of THORP available is a matter for the company.

Car Auctions

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will take steps to require those organising car auctions to keep records of those selling and buying motor vehicles.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 26 May 1993]: No. The costs of introducing and policing a compulsory system of recording details of buyers and sellers would not represent value for money and would far outweigh any perceived consumer benefits.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the standing charges per quarter and the unit charge in pence/kWh for electricity prices as a weighted average of the 12 regional companies for each year since 1991-92; what each figure represents as a percentage increase or decrease on the previous year's figure; what were the changes in the retail prices index over the same period; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 24 May 1993]: Average standing charges in England and Wales in £/quarter and unit rates in P/kwh for standard domestic tariffs are tabulated.

	1 April 1991	1 April 1992	1 April 1993
Average Standing Charge (£'s)	10·41	10·55	10·56
Average Unit Rate (pence)	7·55	7·71	7·53
RPI (per cent.)		4·3	1·3

Unit rates increased by 2·1 per cent. in nominal terms from 1 April 1992 but decreased by 2·3 per cent. in nominal terms from 1 April 1993. On the same basis standing charges increased by 1·3 per cent. and 0·1 per cent. respectively over the same periods. These figures exclude discounts associated with payment methods.

The prices charged by RECs, including standing charges and unit charges, are limited by price control formulae, which are overseen by the Director General of Electricity Supply (DGES). Further information is available from the DGES.

Package Travel

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many representations he received objecting to his 1992 proposal to license package travel companies; and from whom.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 25 May 1993]: A proposal for a licensing system for all organisers of packages was included in the Department of Trade and Industry consultation paper on the implementation of the package travel directive published in July 1991. Of those who responded to this paper, 15 registered a specific objection to a licensing system. These respondents were virtually all representatives of domestic tourist interests.

Telephone Charges

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the local telephone call charges for three minutes at peak times for each member state of the European Community as charged by the principal telephone company or service in each company.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 25 May 1993]: The call charges for three minute local calls in each of the European Community countries are set out in the table:

Local call charges as at 1 January 1993 (ECU)

Country	Peak rate 3 minutes	Cheap rate 3 minutes
Belgium	0·15	0·15
Denmark	0·16	0·11
Germany	0·12	0·12
Greece	0·03	0·03
France	0·11	0·11
Ireland	0·16	0·16
Italy	0·16	0·16
Luxembourg	0·12	0·12
Netherlands	0·07	0·07
Portugal	0·06	0·06
Spain	0·07	0·07
United Kingdom (British Telecom)	0·25	0·06
Average	0·12	0·10

Note: Due to variations in charge measuring intervals and definitions of "local" calling zones, these data are not strictly comparable.

Rating Revaluation

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate his Department has made of the likely effect of the 1995 rating revaluation on industry in the west midlands.

Mr. Needham: My Department has carried out no such study, which would in any case be premature.

Leyland-Daf

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures he is taking to assist those companies owed moneys by the Leyland-Daf Company; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Outstanding debt is a matter for the suppliers and the receivers.

EC Grants

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of EC grants intended for the United Kingdom has been claimed in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: I have been asked to reply.

As EC grants made under the structural funds are allocated on a multiannual basis, no annual figures for grants actually claimed are available. However, of the structural funds allocated to the United Kingdom for the period 1989-93, approximately 80 per cent. have been committed to projects. The remaining 20 per cent. is expected to be committed before the end of the year. Since there is no allocation specific to the United Kingdom in respect of other EC expenditure it is not possible to say what percentage of grants intended for the United Kingdom has been claimed.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he intends to take to ensure that all EC grants intended for the United Kingdom are claimed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: I have been asked to reply.

Government Departments give detailed information to interested bodies and individuals on EC grants and moneys which may be available. In the case of structural funds, the DTI monitors commitments and experience on a detailed and regular basis. This gives early warning of the possibility of any allocations not being taken up so that the necessary action can be taken.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the buildings currently owned or rented by his Department, together with (a) the estimated value, (b) the annual rent and (c) the annual maintenance cost of each building in the current financial year.

The Attorney-General: The Departments for which I am responsible—the legal secretariat to the Law Officers, the Crown Prosecution Service, the Treasury Solicitor's Department and the Serious Fraud Office—occupy accommodation in 148 buildings in England and Wales, all of which form part of the common user estate which is administered by Property Holdings. The Secretary of State for the Environment will include the rent and maintenance costs borne by Property Holdings of this accommodation in his answer to a similar question from the hon. Member. The internal maintenance costs for the accommodation, when borne by Departments, are included with expenditure for other works and the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Crown Prosecution Service rents accommodation directly at only one site, for which the annual rent is £12,000 and the annual maintenance charge is £1,500.

TRANSPORT

Trans-Pennine Crossing

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what considerations he imposed on Transportation Planning Associates, the consultants appointed to carry out the trans-Pennine study, over the use of data gathered as part of the study for purposes beyond the preparation of their report.

Mr. Key: It is my Department's practice that consultants may make use of published reports for their own purposes, but that any unpublished material remains the Department's intellectual property. The Department's permission must be sought before unpublished material is used for consultants' own purposes or made available to outside parties.

Transport Research Laboratory

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the budget of the Transport Research Laboratory in each of the last three years and the current year.

Mr. Key: The Transport Research Laboratory became an executive agency on 1 April 1992, and expenditure information was published in the "Department of Transport Report 1993", Cm 2206. It is repeated in the table for the years in question.

1990-91 Outturn	32·6
1992-93 Estimated Outturn	38·2
1993-94 Plans	34·1

Maritime Safety

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will support the efforts of the Turkish Government to improve the safety standards of international shipping in the Bosphorus.

Mr. Norris: The Turkish Government put forward an information paper at the last meeting of the maritime safety committee of the International Maritime Organisation, which outlined proposals for improved control of navigation in the Bosphorus. Our policy is to support all sound initiatives for improving the safety of shipping, and we shall offer constructive assistance when the Turkish Government submit formal proposals to the International Maritime Organisation.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has for progressing further the consultation on the channel tunnel rail link, in particular with reference to the Boxley valley.

Mr. Freeman: Union Railways will be arranging special meetings for two sections of the route of Ashford and Detling to Boxley. For each of these sections, more than one route option was identified in Union Railway's report. I am clear that, based on the facts in the report, the route for consultation announced by the Government in March is the right choice. The special meetings will be an opportunity for those concerned about the choice between route options to satisfy themselves on all the facts, and for material factual differences, if any, to be identified and brought to Ministers' attention.

Cash Limits

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes he proposes to make to the cash limits and running costs limits for his Department for 1993-94.

Mr. MacGregor: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised estimate, the cash limit for class VI, vote 5 will be reduced by £5,801,000 from £495,744,000 to £489,943,000. This reduction will be offset by a corresponding increase on the Department of Transport/local authority capital non-voted cash limit from £451,334,000 to £457,135,000 to enable the Greater Manchester passenger transport executive to repay public transport facilities grant following the receipt of European regional development fund grant and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Railway Rolling Stock

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will show the number of (a) locomotives, (b) high-speed trains and (c) coaching vehicles owned by British Rail in 1979 and 1992.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

	1979	1992
Locomotives

Electric	310	262
High speed trains (power units)	136	197
Coaching vehicles	20,963	12,925

Marine Oil Spills

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the time of call and country of destination of radio communication calls from the MV Braer via Wick Radio, Shetland Radio or Collafirth Radio between 8 am on 4 January and 5 am on 5 January.

Mr. Norris: None.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will detail the steps taken by his Department and the marine pollution control unit in response to recommendations 74 and 75 in the eighth report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution regarding the use of dispersants to deal with oil spills; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Member to pollution paper No. 20 of 1983, which sets out the Government response to the royal commission report. Since its publication, the MPCU has considerably increased its capacity for dealing with oil spills and, with its contractor Air Atlantique and with Warren Spring Laboratory, has developed considerable expertise in the use of aerial spraying of dispersants and aerial surveillance. In addition, the MPCU has four ship-based oil recovery systems ready to deploy in vessels of opportunity and stockpiles of booms, skimmers and other recovery and clean-up equipment. Details of the arrangements for dealing with pollution arising from spillages of oil from ships into the marine environment are set out in the marine pollution control unit's national contingency plan. This was revised in May 1993 and copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Prison Escort Services

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in the Humberside and East Midlands region escaped from (a) prison service escort and (b) police service escort in each of the last five years; and from what type of escorting vehicle the escapes were made.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 4 June 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking how many prisoners in the Humberside and East Midlands region escaped from (a) Prison Service escort and (b) Police Service escort in each of the last five years; and from what type of escorting vehicle the escapes were made.

Prison Service

The information requested is available centrally only for prisoners who escaped since 20 June 1988 from Prison Service escorts.

The following figures are for all escapes from escort including those to court, hospital and for other purposes.

Fires Safety

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to discharge the requirements of the EC directives commonly known as the framework and workplace directives; what assessment he has made of the benefit of an extended and replacement designating order by virtue of section 1(2) (f) of the Fire Precautions Act 1971 for places of work, compared to making regulations under section 12 of the 1971 Act.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The health and non-fire safety requirements of the framework and workplace directives have been implemented by regulations made by my right hon. Friend. the Secretary of State for Employment. As to implementing the fire safety requirements, I would refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave him on 7 June, Official Report, column 68.

Consideration was given at the outset to implementing those requirements by making a designation order under section 1 of the Fire Precautions Act. We concluded, however, that such action would place unacceptably high burdens on employers and fire authorities. The use of regulations should, in our view, be less onerous and enable fire authorities to concentrate their resources on high-risk promises instead of having to inspect all workplaces, regardless of risk.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to change (a) the £1,000 lower limit, (b) the treatment of compensation payments as capital for benefit purposes and (c) the conduct and character of the victim rule as part of his review of the criminal injuries compensation scheme;

(2) when he expects to publish his review of the criminal injuries compensation scheme.

Mr. Maclean: The criminal injuries compensation scheme is not being reviewed. In his reply to a question from my right hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Sir J. Wheeler) on 23 November 1992, Official Report, column 457, my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Rushcliffe (Mr. Clarke) announced that the Government intended to replace the present criminal injuries compensation scheme with a tariff scheme next year to provide a more straightforward service to claimants. We intend to publish details of the new scheme, including decisions on a lower limit and on the relevance of the conduct and character of the victim, in a White Paper later this summer.

The treatment of compensation payments as capital for benefit purposes is a matter for the Secretary of State for Social Security. I understand that he has no plans to change the present arrangements.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many payments of between £1,000 and £1,500 were awarded under the criminal injuries compensation scheme in each of the last two years; and if he will provide a regional breakdown of such payments;

(2) how many payments of between £850 and £1,000 were made under the criminal injuries compensation scheme in each of the five years prior to the raising of the lower limit to £1,000; and if he will provide a regional breakdown of such payments.

Mr. Maclean: Details of awards made by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board within various bands are given in the board's published annual reports. Copies are held in the Library.

The number of awards between £850 and £1,000, and between £1,000 and £1,500, is not given, but the table summarises the most recent information about the nearest equivalent bands. Information about the regional breakdown of awards is not collected centrally.

Immigration Advice

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report the letter of 20 May from the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State to the hon. and learned Member for Burton containing the Government's response to the Home Affairs Committee's fourth report, Session 1992-93, on immigration advice post-UKIAS, HC 546.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The following is the text of the letter:

"In this letter, with the agreement of Kenneth Clarke, I am giving you the Government's response to the fourth report of the Home Affairs Committee published on 9 March entitled 'Immigration Advice Post-UKIAS'.

The Committee's Report commended the Planning Group led by Mr. Malins for producing their Report. As you are aware, in a written answer to a Parliamentary Question from Sir John Wheeler on 16 March, I announced that we had asked the Planning Group to take steps to implement their proposals and establish the new body outlined in their Report. We have drawn the Committee's Fourth Report to the attention of the Planning Group so that they may consider the recommendations it contains.

We have noted the concern expressed by the Committee on the proposal that the governing body of the Immigration Appeals Advisory Service should be entirely appointed. Our chief concern has to be that the new organisation should be constituted and structured so as to be able to meet its obligations under Charity Law and to satisfy us that there is proper accountability for grant paid. The proposals made in the Planning Group's Report satisfied these criteria and that Group is proceeding to implement them.

The Committee also refers to the recommendation contained in its Report 'Delays in the Immigration and Nationality Department' that the IAAS should take the lead in establishing a register of reputable agencies in the immigration field. It notes that the Planning Group's proposal on extension and maintenance of liaison with other advice groups and immigration law practitioners could be extended to meet this recommendation. The Government's response to the Committee's Report confirmed that this recommendation had been drawn to the attention of both the Planning Group and the Law Society and that, should such a list (or lists) be drawn up, the Government would be ready to consider making it available to applicants.

I am copying this letter to John Greenway and placing copies in the Library of the House."

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Bosnia

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the criteria for deciding whether and when military intervention is required when protecting Bosnian safe areas.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: UNPROFOR forces throughout Muslim-held territory in Bosnia will continue to closely monitor the situation on the ground and provide the UN command with judgments as to whether, and in what form, it would be necessary to counter any acts of aggression against the safe areas. We and others have declared our willingness, in accordance with United Nations Security Council resolution 836, to make air power available to protect UNPROFOR in the safe areas.

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals the Government have for strengthening the rules of engagement for troops guarding the safe areas in Bosnia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: United Nations Security Council resolution 836 authorises UNPROFOR, acting in self-defence, to take necessary measures including the use of force to reply to bombardment of the safe areas in Bosnia, armed incursion into those areas, and the obstruction of either relief convoys or of the troops themselves. The resolution also provides for the use of air power in and around safe areas to support UNPROFOR in the performance of its mandate. We and others have declared our willingness to make air power available for this purpose.

European Court of Justice

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many cases are currently proceeding against Her Majesty's Government at the European Court of Justice.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Four.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the waiting time for cases, involving Her Majesty's Government, to be judged by the European Court of Justice, over the past seven years; and what is the expected waiting time for cases commencing (a) this year and (b) in the next three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is not possible without disproportionate cost to give the waiting time for cases involving Her Majesty's Government over the past seven years. However, the court has confirmed that the average waiting time for references from all member states to the European Court in 1991 was 18·5 months, and 24·2 months for all direct actions. The average waiting time in 1992 increased to 18·8 months for references and 25·8 months for direct actions. It is not possible to make any predictions about future litigation before the European Court of Justice.

Human Rights

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on the details of the United Kingdom Government's policy towards devising or strengthening appropriate mechanisms or powers for implementing the universal adherence of existing United Nations human rights standards and the enforcement of international legal agreements on human rights in advance of the UN world conference on human rights in Vienna on 14 to 25 June;

(2) what current initiatives he is promoting within the United Nations to strengthen appropriate mechanisms or powers for implementing the universal adherence of existing United Nations human rights standards and the enforcement of international legal agreements on human rights; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will make a statement outlining the United Kingdom Government's policy and specific proposals to strengthen appropriate mechanisms or powers for implementing the universal adherence to UN human rights standards and the enforcement of international legal agreements on human rights;

(4) if he will make a statement on his policy towards the proposals before the United Nations conference on human rights to be held in Vienna on 14 to 25 June to give consideration to the creation of a UN permanent commissioner for human rights and an international court for human rights.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We regard the implementation of universal human rights standards as a high priority. We recognise the need to strengthen the role of the UN Centre for Human Rights which is the UN body mainly responsible for human rights work. With our EC partners, we have proposed that the post of director of the centre be upgraded to that of Under Secretary-General for Human Rights or High Commissioner for Human Rights. We have also co-sponsored resolutions at the UN General Assembly and the UN Commission on Human Rights calling for the centre to be given a greater share of the existing UN regular budget. We will continue to work towards these objectives at the world conference on human rights.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role his Department has played in preparations for the United Nations world conference on human rights in Vienna on 14 to 25 June.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have been represented at the four preparatory meetings held in advance of the UN world conference on human rights. We shall also play an active role at the conference itself.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he intends to make a substantive submission to the world conference on human rights in Vienna on 14 to 25 June.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I will lead the United Kingdom delegation to the world conference on human rights, and I will address the conference on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to receive a copy of the final agenda for the United Nations world conference on human rights in Vienna on 14 to 25 June; and if it will be made available to the general public.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The agenda for the forthcoming world conference on human rights was adopted as the annex to resolution 47/122 of last year's United Nations General Assembly. As such, it is freely available to the general public.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the list of (a) delegates and (b) observers who will represent the United Kingdom at the United Nations world conference on human rights in Vienna on 14 to 25 June, and the non-governmental organisation to which each belongs, where appropriate.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Lady to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Clydebank and Milngavie (Mr. Worthington) on 13 May, at column 559. The precise composition of the delegation is being finalised, and will be transmitted to the conference organisers in due course.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Industrial Heritage Tourism

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the growth and development of industrial heritage tourism.

Mr. Sproat: As the birthplace of the industrial revolution, Britain has a uniquely rich industrial heritage, which is of interest to both domestic and overseas visitors. The English tourist board has identified industrial heritage tourism as a growth area, and launched its promotional campaign "Experience the Making of Britain" earlier this year, in partnership with the private sector. The English tourist board will evaluate the effect of the campaign later this year. I understand that early indications are encouraging.

Conservation of Manuscripts

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on his policy for assisting the conservation of manuscripts.

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend and I recognise the vital importance of the conservation of manuscripts in preserving the nation's heritage. The Department provides an annual grant to the Royal Commission on Historical Manuscripts, enabling it to promote and assist the preservation of historical records. The Government were also instrumental in setting up in 1989 the National Manuscripts Conservation Trust for which they make annual funding available to provide assistance to owners and custodians in preserving manuscripts, documents and archives of national importance. In addition, Government funding for the new British Library building at St. Pancras will allow better preservation of the national collections for present and future users in a pollution-free environment.

Arts Council

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his statement of 11 December 1992, Official Report, columns 1123-33, when he expects to publish the consultant's report on the organisation and structure of the Arts Council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Last December, I announced my conclusions on the appropriate balance between central and local decision making on funding. I made clear that the delegation of additional funding responsibilities to the regional arts boards and the devolution of the Scottish and Welsh Arts Councils would have implications for the size and structure of the Arts Council. At my request, and with full co-operation at all levels of the Arts Council, Price Waterhouse has now examined these organisational issues. I have now published its report.

Price Waterhouse has conducted a very full analysis, involving wide consultation both within the Arts Council and outside. Its recommendations include:

- clarification of the Arts Council's relationships with Government, the Regional Arts Boards and clients;
- improvement in the planning system;
- changes to the composition of the Council itself, with an enhanced role as advocate for the arts.

The report also includes possible options for structural changes to the Arts Councils organisation and staffing.

I welcome the thorough way in which Price Waterhouse has undertaken its task. The broad range of its review and the radical nature of some of its recommmendations are fully consistent both with our manifesto commitment to examine the role of the Arts Council and with the terms of my statement on delegated responsibility last December.

I shall, of course, want to consider these recommendations carefully before I reach any decisions. But I should like to make clear now the Government's firm commitments: to the continuing relevance and importance of the arm's length principle; to the continuing central role of the Arts Council as spokesman and agent for the health of the arts in this country; and to ensuring that public funding for the arts is conducted effectively and with economy and efficiency.

The outcome of this review will determine the shape of the Arts Council for the rest of this decade and beyond. As a next step, I have invited the Arts Council to let me have its reactions to Price Waterhouse's report. Clearly, it is important for all concerned that decisions are taken soon, and I very much hope to be able to announce the conclusions I have reached before the summer recess.

Cash Limits

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what changes will be made to his Department's cash limits or running cost limits for 1993-94.

Mr. Brooke: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised and new estimates and of the National Lottery etc. Bill, the following changes will be made:

(i) The cash limit for Class XI, Vote 7 (Department of National Heritage administration) will be reduced by £1,426,000 to £25,294,000. The reduction in the cash limit is the net result of a transfer of £1,500,000 to a New Estimate for Class XI, Vote 8, to provide for the anticipated administrative and operational costs of the Office of the National Lottery, offset partly by an increase in provision of £74,000 for the introduction of the repayment for services provided by the Chessington Computer Centre.

(ii) The departmental gross running costs control limit will also be reduced by £1,426,000 from £31,282,000 to £29,856,000 as a result of these changes.

Historic Royal Palaces

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what targets he has set for the Historic Royal Palaces agency.

Mr. Brooke: The following targets have been set for the Historic Royal Palaces agency for the financial year 1993-94:

Financial Targets:
Commercial surplus—£4·5 million
Call on taxpayer—£7·6 million

Visitor Rating Targets:[1]
Value for money—0·7 to 1
Helpful and friendly staff—above 1·3

Efficiency Target:
2 per cent. on running costs

Conservation Target:
To complete surveys and draw up a programme of building work by November 1993.

[1] Visitor ratings are assessed from market research interviews with 900 visitors, undertaken by independent consultants each summer. 2·0 is Extremely Good; 1·5 is Very Good; 1·0 is Quite Good; 0 is OK; −1·0 is Quite Poor; −2·0 is Very Poor.

I am pleased to note that the agency's commercial income has increased from £14·7 million in 1990-91 to £18·7 million in 1992-93 and its call on the taxpayer is reducing. At the same time, the agency continues to set the highest standards both in conservation and in services to its visitors.

Noise

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of the United Kingdom population is estimated to be exposed to night-time noise levels in excess of 65 dB(A); what assessment he has made of the health effects of such exposure; and what plans he has to meet the targets for noise reduction contained in the European Community's fifth environmental action programme.

Mr. Yeo: Results from a noise incidence study of England and Wales carried out as part of my Department's noise research programme indicate that under 1 per cent. of the population is exposed to night-time noise levels above 65dB(A). Research in this area has not so far shown scientifically demonstrable links between night-time noise levels, loss of sleep and effects on health, but this area is being kept under review.

The importance of a quieter night-time noise environment is recognised in my Department's draft planning policy guidance note on planning and noise. It suggests a group of four noise exposure categories, in which different planning constraints on noise sensitive development are appropriate. Recommended noise levels for each category are set out in the draft guidance for both day-time exposure—07.00 to 23.00—and night-time exposure—23.00-07.00. Where relevant, the suggested noise level figures take account of, and broadly reflect, the EC fifth environment action programme. The draft guidance, a copy of which is in the Library, also offers more general advice on night-time noise exposure issues.

London Docklands

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of the London Docklands development corporation expenditure for 1992-93 broken down into (a) administration, (b) environmental improvements, (c) land acquisitions, (d) land reclamation, (e) services and utilities, (f) roads, (g) the docklands light railway, (h) industry support, (i) social facilities, (j) housing and (k) promotion and publicity.

Sir George Young: The London Docklands development corporation's estimated expenditure for 1992-93, comprised of grant in aid and receipts, was as follows:

	£ million
(a) Administration: (including estate management)	21·1
(b) Environmental Improvements	5·4
(c) Land acquisitions	7·7
(d) Land reclamation	3·8
(e) Services and Utilities	1·1
(f) Roads (including Limehouse Link)	82·1
(g) The Docklands Light Railway (Beckton extension)	52·7
(h) Industry support	0·1
(i) Social facilities	8·2
(j) Housing	4·0
(k) Promotion and publicity	2·7

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the cost to the London Docklands development corporation of the banquet to celebrate the completion of the Limehouse link road held on Friday 7 May.

Sir George Young: The LDDC's contribution to the Limehouse link community dinner was £27,750. Other costs were met largely through support from local businesses.

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the London Docklands development corporation's income from the sale of land in 1992-93; and what is the projected income for 1993-94.

Sir George Young: LDDC's income from the sale of land for 1992-93 was £20·014 million and the expected income for 1993-94 is £20·027 million.

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made towards the winding up of the LDDC.

Sir George Young: Discussions are taking place between LDDC and the three docklands boroughs about the progressive withdrawal of the LDDC from the more developed parts of the designated area.

Water Quality

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what action the United Kingdom is taking to prevent the eutrophication of those water bodies which will not be identified as sensitive areas under the EC urban waste water treatment directive because the source of nutrients is from a sewage works of less than 10,000 population equivalent in size;

(2) what mechanisms he will employ to protect sites of high nature conservation interest from damage due to nutrient enrichment water courses.

Mr. Yeo: The National Rivers Authority will continue to impose conditions in consents for discharges which do not come within the scope of the urban waste water treatment directive, to meet any water quality objectives in force for the receiving waters in question. Our proposals for the system of statutory water quality objectives include a specific special eco-system use class in recognition of the needs of nature conservation.

Environmental Protection Partnership

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what request he has received from the Conservation Foundation to support its initiative to foster an environmental protection partnership between the United Kingdom and the Russian Federation.

Mr. Yeo: The Conservation Foundation has written asking for support for its initiative and this request is under consideration.

Water Companies

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much has been spent by his Department on grants or loans to water companies under section 151 of the Water Industry Act 1991 each year since privatisation.

Mr. Yeo: Since privatisation, under section 151 of the Water Industry Act 1991 or the equivalent provisions of the Rural Water Supplies and Sewerage Acts 1944 to 1971, the following sums have been spent by my Department on grants:

	£ million
1990-91	5·95
1992-93	4·44

There have been no loans.

Waste Water

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the areas in England proposed to him as candidate sensitive areas under the EC urban waste water treatment directive by (a) English Nature and (b) the National Rivers Authority.

Mr. Yeo: In March 1993, my Department, together with the Welsh Office and the Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food, published its response to the consultation exercise it carried out on the criteria and procedures for identifying sensitive areas under the urban waste water treatment directive. The National Rivers Authority has been asked to compile a list of candidate sensitive areas using these criteria. Although English Nature has not made any proposals on the basis of the finalised criteria, it will be consulted about the NRA's list.

Women Council Staff

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many women are currently (a) chief executives and (b) directors of (i) metropolitan councils, (ii) non-metropolitan district councils, (iii) county councils and (iv) borough councils.

Mr. Baldry: My Department does not collect this information. The Local Government Management Board —the employers' organisation—however has produced the following statistics from its 1992 annual survey, based on responses from 375, out of 450, local authorities in England and Wales:

(a) Chief Executives—7 (out of 375)
Metropolitan districts—1 (out of 31)
Non-Metropolitan districts—4 (out of 278)
Non-Metropolitan counties—0 (out of 44)
London Boroughs—2 (out of 22)

(b) Directors—150 (out of 2,803)
Metropolitan districts—22 (out of 385)
Non-Metropolitan districts—68 (out of 1,670)
Non-Metropolitan counties—27 (out of 498)
London Boroughs—33 (out of 250)

Limehouse Link Road

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what monitoring his Department is undertaking of the proportion of cars using the Limehouse link road which are starting or completing their journeys in the docklands area.

Sir George Young: The LDDC, in liaison with the Department of Transport, is monitoring traffic flows on the new docklands roads, including Limehouse link and on other routes through the docklands area.

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people were employed on the construction of the Limehouse link road.

Sir George Young: The average number of people employed, during construction of the Limehouse link road, was 700.

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total cost of the construction of the Limehouse link road, broken down into (a) cost of relocation, (b) cost of land acquisition and (c) construction costs; and what was the additional cost of bringing the project back on schedule from the delays during the early part of the contract.

Sir George Young: The total construction costs of the Limehouse link road were as follows:

£ million

	Cost
(a) Cost of replacement housing	108·2
(b) Cost of land acquisition	12·6
(c) Final price of construction contract	255·1

There were no additional costs within the terms of the contract to recover the schedule from early delays within the terms of the contract.

Environmental Education

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to put into effect the proposals made in the report on environmental education commissioned from Professor Peter Toyne.

Mr. Yeo: The Government are considering the recommendations in Professor Toyne's report, most of which are directed to the educational establishment. My Department has encouraged industry to formulate its needs as clearly as possible, to help educational institutions to address them.

Relocations and Amalgamations

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the sections and organisations within his Department for which there are plans for relocation or amalgamation.

Mr. Gummer: Following the decision last year to demolish 2 Marsham street, Property Holdings has been asked to find alternative accommodation for the headquarters of my Department. There are also some 90 posts across the Department employed on programmes to be transferred to the Urban Regeneration Agency.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the buildings currently owned or rented by his Department, together with (a) the estimated value, (b) the annual rent and (c) the annual maintenance cost of each building in the current financial year.

Mr. Baldry: Property Holdings, part of the Department of the Environment, was set up in 1990 to manage the Government common user office estate and holds something in excess of 3,000 properties.

(a) An up-to-date capital valuation of these premises is not available but the estate was last valued at just over £2 billion in 1990. More detailed current information could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

(b) Individual rentals are commercial-in-confidence and cannot be released. However, Property Holdings total estimated rent bill for 1993-94 is £585·4 million.

(c) Maintenance responsibility for the common user estate is shared between Property Holdings and occupying Departments. Some Departments hold on full repairing terms whereas others occupy on an internal repairing basis. Individual maintenance costs therefore are not available within my Department. Property Holdings total maintenance costs for 1993-94 are estimated at £112·84 million.

Small Cetaceans

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the measures adopted in the agreement on the conservation of small cetaceans of the Baltic and North sea will apply throughout United Kingdom waters.

Mr. Yeo: The Government strongly support the agreement. We have also made it clear that we shall apply the spirit of the agreement in order to conserve dolphins and other small cetaceans in all our coastal waters. Work to implement the agreement is already being taken forward on that basis.

Housing, Liverpool

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he received representations from Liverpool city council concerning the level of discounts available on empty properties requiring substantial remedial work; what level of discount is being sought; when he expects to be in a position to make an announcement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Councillor Margaret Clarke wrote to my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Inner Cities and Construction on 26 March asking for consent to increase the discount percentages for the sale of empty properties included in the home opportunities programme from the 30 per cent. allowed under the general consent to 60 per cent.

That request is receiving careful consideration and I hope to reply shortly.

Waste Recycling

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contracts his Department has placed with consultants in the past year to evaluate the prospects for recycling of construction and demolition wastes; and what information he has on such recycling in other European Community member states.

Mr. Baldry: A contract was placed with Howard Humphreys and Partners Ltd. in November 1992 to carry out research on recycling of demolition and construction wastes in the United Kingdom. It will report towards the end of this year, and will advise on how greater use of these wastes might be achieved and on good environmental practice for recycling plants. The research will also yield information on current practice in other EC countries. The Government are also taking an active role in an EC priority waste streams project on recycling building and demolition wastes.

Local Government Finance

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his decisions on final caps for the authorities which he has designated for capping; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I have laid before the House a draft order, under section 57 of the Local Government Finance Act 1992, setting out my decisions on the final caps for the three authorities which have challenged their proposed caps and put forward higher alternatives.

For each of these authorities, I have considered all the available relevant information, including the case made by the authorities in support of a higher cap, before taking my decisions. For Castle Point and Gloucestershire, I have decided to confirm the caps which were initially proposed. In the case of Harlow, I consider that some relaxation would be justified and I have decided to increase its cap by £0·6 million.

These caps are, in my view, reasonable, appropriate and achievable in all the circumstances of the authorities concerned.

The caps for each of the designated authorities and the resulting reductions in a two-adult band D council tax in their area are as follows:

Authority	Final Cap (£ million)	Reduction in Council tax (£)
Castle Point	7·97	18
Gloucestershire	306·61	55
Harlow	11·80	263

Cash Limits

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes he proposes to make to the cash limit or running cost limit on PSA Services' vote in 1993-94.

Mr. Curry: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised estimate, the cash limit for class VII, vote will be reduced by £295,000 from £164,055,000 to £163,760,000. The running cost limit will be reduced by £607,000 from £104,203,000 to £103,596,000.

The reduction in the cash limit is due to the transfer of £205,000 to Property Holdings to cover expenditure on the maintenance of certain security equipment, and also to the transfer of £90,000 to the Welsh Office to cover the cost or redeploying surplus PSAS staff.

The reduction in the running costs limit also reflects a higher provision for running cost receipts as a result of more recent forecasts.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes he has to announce to his Department's cash limits and running cost limit for 1993-94.

Mr. Gummer: The DOE urban aid non-voted cash limit will be increased by £12,236,000 from £950,671,000 to £962,907,000. This includes increased grant in aid of £10,364,000 to the London Docklands development corporation for work on the Beckton extension of the docklands light railway. It also includes grant in aid of £2 million to the Tyne and Wear development corporation to provide additional industrial sites within its urban development area. There is also a decrease of £128,000 to reflect a transfer to the Department of Health in respect of urban programme health authority projects. This will be offset in part by a surrender of unallocated PES of £2,210,000 and the remainder will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Housing Associations (Land Purchases)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure that housing associations pay the proper value of land purchased from local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 26 May 1993]: Housing associations are now the main providers of new social housing. The Government encourage local authorities, in their role as housing enablers, to release land free—or at a reduced cost—to housing associations in return for increased nominations for people from their waiting list. The additional nominations assist the local authority in meeting its statutory obligations in respect of housing the homeless. It is for local authorities to decide in each individual case.

Coal

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide financial support to local authorities investing in coal-fired heating systems and other coal-burning equipment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 27 May 1993]: The Government have no plans to do so at present.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what would have been the impact per authority in 1993-94 if the weight of the additional educational needs index in distributing primary and secondary standard spending assessments had been reduced by (a) 0·5 per cent., (b) 1 per cent., (c) 5 per cent. and (d) 10 per cent.; and what implications this would have for the area cost adjustment.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 June 1993]: I have placed in the Library a table which shows the effects on each authority's education standard spending assessment for 1993-94 of reducing the weight on the additional educational needs index within the primary and secondary elements by (a) 0·5 per cent., (b) 1 per cent., (c) 5 per cent. and (d) 10 per cent. The area cost adjustment factors are applied after the results of applying the additional educational needs index.

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what would be the impact on each authority's standard spending assessment of reducing the weight of the ethnicity factor within the additional educational needs index to (a) 20 per cent., (b) 10 per cent. and (c) 2 per cent.; and what are the reasons for including the ethnicity factor within the additional educational needs index.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 June 1993]: The ethnicity factor has a weight of one within the additional educational needs index compared with 1·5 for the other two factors. I have placed in the Library today a table which shows the education standard spending assessment element for all authorities incorporating a reduction in the weight on ethnicity from 1 to (a) 0·2, (b) 0·1 and (c) 0·02. Ethnicity—or, more precisely, the country of origin of child or of the head of the household—is used to reflect the additional costs associated with educating children for whom English is not their first language.

Radon

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to make mandatory grants for payment to protect houses against radon.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 June 1993]: No. Local authorities have powers under the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 to award discretionary renovation grants to help home owners with radon remedial measures. The Government consider it appropriate for authorities to determine the need to grant aid such work in the light of local circumstances and priorities.

Planning Inquiries

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions in each year since 1979 he has overruled the result of a planning inquiry by an inspector appointed by him.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 June 1993]: The number of occasions on which the Secretary of State has determined a planning appeal, following a local public inquiry, contrary to the recommendations of the inspector, is as follows:

Year	Number
1980	15
1981	34
1982	20
1983	13
1984	16

1986-87[2]	26
1987-88	18
1988-89	19

Environmental Impact Assessments

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what steps he is taking to implement the recommendations for more satisfactory cost-effective compliance with Council directive 85/337/EEC contained in COM (93) 28 final—EC Cons Doc 5975/93;

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's report to the European Parliament and Council on the application and effectiveness of EC directive 85/337.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 7 June 1993]: The Government has made no report to the European Parliament or Council on the application and effectiveness of directive 85/337/EEC. The European Commission has recently submitted such a report in COM (93) 28 final. A memorandum on that document has been submitted by my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment and placed in the Library of the House.

Drinking Water

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which other EC countries publish national figures on the quality of their drinking water supply which are comparable to those of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 7 June 1993]: I am not aware of any information on the quality of drinking water supplies provided by other EC countries which is comparable in extent and detail to that published in the United Kingdom.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT AGENCY

Kenya

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list each of the aid projects in Kenya which are at present receiving financial assistance from the United Kingdom Government.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The table lists the capital and technical co-operation projects currently supported through the bilateral aid programme. In addition, funds are being provided for 17 projects under the joint funding scheme and two projects through the aid and trade provision.

Joint Funding Projects

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 19 April, Official Report, column 30, on joint funding scheme projects, what were the activities engaged in to which his Department had not agreed and which caused the request to reimburse the grant; and how this was discovered.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Concern arose over this project when it was discovered that it included an element of evangelism. It is not the purpose of the joint funding scheme to support such activities, and World Vision was asked to reimburse the grant advanced to this project. It accepted our decision and readily returned the funds. The problem came to light when a representative of the British embassy in Jakarta visited the project.

Mr. Chris Hani

Mr. Cabom: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from local authorities on the assassination of Chris Hani.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have received a number of letters from local authorities and other organisations following Mr. Hani's assassination.

Development Meetings

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Minister for Overseas Development last met her EC colleagues to discuss development issues; and what was decided.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development attended the Development Council in Brussels on 25 May. The Council agreed on future work to improve the co-ordination of EC development policies, starting with poverty and health issues. It agreed resolutions on emergency assistance, rehabilitation in some sub-Saharan African countries, South Africa and on human rights, democracy and development. The Council also discussed the situation in a number of specific African countries, the follow-up to the UN Conference on Environment and Development, women in development and population policy.

"Children of Iraq"

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response he has made to the study "Children of Iraq", commissioned by UNICEF by Dr. Eric Hoskins, Oxford epidemiologist, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 7 June 1993]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him today by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, column 226-27.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Pensions

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 26 April, Official Report, columns 292-94, what amounts of pension costs are attributable to current public sector pensioners (a) in 1979 and (b) the most recent year for each Department or pension scheme; and if he will list the source references which show how such items are disclosed in national accounts.

Mr. Portillo: The costs of benefits, including transfer values, paid by each of the main public service pension schemes in 1979-80 and 1992-93 are as follows:

	1979-80 £m	1992-93 £m
NHS Superannuation Scheme (England and Wales)	299·4	1,689·1
NHS Superannuation Scheme (Scotland)	36·4	243·4
Teachers Superannuation Scheme (England and Wales)	437·1	2,503·0
Teachers Superannuation Scheme (Scotland)	58·1	269·2
Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme	584·0	2,156·2
Armed Forces Pension Scheme	460·1	1,732·3
Local Government Superannuation Scheme (England and Wales)	543·3	[1]2,209·8
Local Government Superannuation Scheme (Scotland)	52·5	[1]220·4

[1] Figures for 1990-91, the most recent year for which figures are available.

For the NHS, teachers, civil service and armed forces schemes the source references are the appropriation accounts for 1979-80 and the supply estimates for 1992-93. For the local government schemes, the source references are the yearbooks of "Local Government Financial Statistics".

The costs above are not shown individually in national accounts, but are shown in aggregate in table 4·10 of the "United Kingdom National Accounts"—the CSO Blue Book, HMSO, 1992. Their treatment is described in the "United Kingdom National Accounts, Sources and Methods", HMSO 1985.

Pension Contributions

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the full-year yield in 1993-94 of taxing employers' pension contributions in excess of (a) £7,000, (b) £10,000, (c) £15,000 and (d) £20,000 per year as a benefit in kind;

(2) what is his estimate of the cost of tax relief for employers' contributions to occupational pension schemes and personal pension schemes in 1992-93 and 1993-94 for the top 1 per cent. of taxpayers; how many taxpayers are in receipt of contributions; and what is the average contribution;

(3) what is his estimate of the cost of direct income tax relief for occupational pension schemes and personal pension schemes in force in 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94 for (a) higher rate taxpayers and (b) basic rate taxpayers;

(4) what is his estimate of the cost of tax relief for (a) employers' and (b) employees' contributions to occupational pension schemes in 1992-93 and 1993-94 for (i) higher rate taxpayers and (ii) basic rate taxpayers giving in each case the number of taxpayers in receipt of employers' contributions and the average contribution.

Mr. Dorrell: I regret that this detailed distributional information is not available. Available statistics on the total costs are published in chapter 6 of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1992".

Business Enterprise Scheme

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the number of BES shareholders.

Mr. Dorrell: A reliable estimate is not available.

Tax Reliefs

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost of direct income tax reliefs in force in 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94 in respect of (a) higher rate taxpayers and (b) basic rate taxpayers, giving in each case the number of taxpayers concerned and their average income.

Mr. Dorrell: Available information on the major income tax reliefs is given in the table:

	Higher rate taxpayers			Basic or lower rate taxpayers

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 May, Official Report, column 284, to what investigations the Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise have been subject by the Data Protection Registrar in relation to a suspected breach of a data protection principle; if he will summarise the nature of each complaint with the date it was made; and what remedial action was taken by his Department to ensure future compliance with the principle subject to the investigation.

Mr. Dorrell: The Data Protection Registrar's records show that the Inland Revenue has received 17 complaints concerning suspected breaches of data protection principles. The principles involved and the dates on which the complaints were made are as follows:

Complaint Type	Number Received	Dates Received
Principle 1	2	19 October 1984 24 July 1989
Principle 5	6	29 July 1988 18 August 1989 16 February 1993 22 March 1993 12 March 1993 18 March 1993
Principle 7	5	31 December 1986 11 May 1988 8 May 1989 16 October 1989 3 February 1992
Principle 8	1	24 March 1993
Unauthorised disclosure	3	15 September 1989 31 October 1989 3 April 1992

The Data Protection Registrar has been satisfied in all cases in which investigations are not still in progress and no remedial action to ensure compliance with data protection principles has been necessary.

Between 17 December 1987 and 30 November 1992, the Data Protection Registrar recorded seven suspected breaches of data protection principles concerning Her Majesty's Customs and Excise. Details are as follows:

Complaint Type	Number Received	Dates Received
Principle 1	1	30 May 1989
Principle 3	1	12 September 1991
Principle 5	1	3 April 1989 17 December 1987 20 January 1989
Principle 7	3	10 November 1992
Unauthorised Disclosure	1	30 November 1992

In six cases the matter has been resolved to the satisfaction of the Data Protection Registrar. The seventh, a case of unauthorised disclosure, is under investigation.

European Community States (Expenditure)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest information he has on average public expenditure by member states of the EC, as a proportion of gross domestic product, on (a) education, (b) policing, (c) transport, (d) the arts and (e) science; what is the equivalent United Kingdom figure in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: Data on categories of public expenditure in EC countries are included in the OECD's national accounts, volume II.

Jubilee Line Extension

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what Treasury guarantees have been given in respect of the funding of the proposed Jubilee line extension; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The Treasury has issued no guarantees in relation to any part of the funding of the Jubilee line extension. Government funding has, however, been earmarked for the public sector contribution to the cost of the line—see, for example, "The Government's Expenditure Plans for Transport 1993-94 to 1995-96", Cm 2206.

Cash Limits

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the cash and running costs limits for 1993-94 in respect of the office of HM Paymaster General.

Sir John Cope: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for the office of HM Paymaster General—class XVII, vote 13—will be increased by £1,532,000 to £4,400,000, and the running cost limit by £113,000 from £25,178,000 to £25,291,000. These increases reflect the costs of capital investment in equipment associated with the development of a replacement pensions computer systems; take account of the full cost element of the Paymaster General's depreciation expenses repayable as Consolidated Fund extra receipts; and provide for additional VAT payments to Customs and Excise. The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed in the cash and running cost limits for 1993-94 for the Inland Revenue.

Mr. Dorrell: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised estimate, the cash limit for class XVII, vote 6 will be reduced by £26,765,000 from £1,690,968,000 to £1,664,203,000. There is no change in the Department's running costs limit. The change in the cash limit arises from an increase in the charges paid by the Department of Social Security to the Inland Revenue in respect of the administration costs of collecting national insurance contributions.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the Treasury's cash and running costs limits for 1993-94.

Mr. Nelson: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XVII, vote 1 1993-94 will be increased by a net £450,000 from £76,017,000 to £76,467,000. The increase is mainly to meet publication costs of the retail and institutional guides to investing in gilts. These costs will be fully offset by a reduction in the Bank of England's non-voted cash limit and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The running costs limit will be increased by £485,000 from £79,136,000 to £79,621,000 reflecting, in addition to the costs of publishing the gilts brochures, the transfer of staff and functions from the Department of Trade and Industry—class IV, vote 1—and to the Cabinet Office: Office of Public Service and Science—class XVIII, vote 1.

EDUCATION

Retired Teachers (Recruitment)

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what consideration he has given to assisting schools to recruit on short-term secondment retired teachers who will undertake the testing of seven and 11-year-olds in order to relieve classroom teachers of this duty.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department has not given consideration to this particular issue. However, the review that Sir Ron Dearing is conducting of the national curriculum and assessment framework has the specific remit to consider how the tests can be made more manageable. Decisions on how schools might best make arrangements for the tests will be taken in the light of the review.

School Transport (Safety)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to produce school transport safety guidelines for local education authorities.

Mr. Forth: The Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents published a report on school transport safety in 1991. It included a code of good practice. The Department contributed to the preparation of the report, and arranged for its distribution to all local education authorities.

Illiteracy

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what figures he has for the level of illiteracy in each EC member state.

Mr. Boswell: International comparisons with other countries of levels of illiteracy are not held centrally.

Mature Students

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) if he will list the local education authorities that currently make discretionary awards for mature students and the total sums budgeted for this purpose in the latest year for which figures are available;

(2) if he will make a statement as to the progress of his Department's policy regarding the award of discretionary grants for mature students.

Mr. Boswell: It is for each local education authority to determine its own policy and set its own budget for discretionary awards. My right hon. Friend does not seek to influence authorities in these matters and does not routinely collect detailed information on authorities' policies and budgets for discretionary awards.

Education Authority Staff

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many (a) officers and (b) other persons are employed by each education authority in England and Wales.

Mr. Forth: Information on the number of employees of each local education authority is currently being compiled by the Local Government Management Board from data collected on behalf of the joint staffing watch, a joint group of central and local government, and will be available in due course. I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Education Authorities (Administration)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the annual cost of administering each education authority in each of the last three years.

Mr. Forth: The information is given in the table. The table shows spending by each LEA on administration in cash for 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92, the latest year for which information on actual spending is available. Figures may not always be strictly comparable between LEAs due to differing local accounting practices.

Manor School, Byfleet

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he now expects to reach a decision on the application by the governors of the Manor grant-maintained first school, Byfleet to add a nursery class at their school.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend hopes to decide the proposals shortly.

Church Schools

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what guidelines he has issued on the admissions criteria for entry to voluntary controlled and voluntary aided Church schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend invited comments last December on a draft circular on school admissions. This stressed that admissions criteria for all maintained schools should be objective, clear and reasonable, and should give parents a good idea of the prospects of gaining a place for their child at their preferred school. My right hon. Friend is considering responses to the consultation.

Cash Limits

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what changes he has to announce to cash limits on votes within his responsibility for 1993-94.

Mr. Patten: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised estimate, the cash limit for vote 1, schools, will be reduced, by £313,000 from £743,210,000 to £742,897,000. The reduction takes account of the appropriation in aid of £321,000 from the Welsh Office as its contribution towards expenditure on certain joint England and Wales programmes. This is partly offset by a transfer of £8,000 from the Chessington Computer Centre for the provision of payroll services in respect of the European Schools on the centre's becoming an agency on 1 April 1993.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Sickness and Invalidity Benefit, Durham

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the latest statistics on the number of persons in the Durham city area who are unemployed and are receiving sickness and invalidity benefit.

Mr. Scott: The administration of sickness and invalidity benefit are matters for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Gerry Steinberg, dated 8 June 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking what are the latest statistics on the number of persons in the Durham City area who are unemployed and are receiving Sickness Benefit (SB) and Invalidity Benefit (IVB).

The information is not available in the format requested and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The latest statistics available from the Agency's Durham Branch Office within the North Durham District, which includes the Durham City area, relate to SB and IVB only.

A total of 5,224 customers are claiming these benefits currently, 1,011 claiming SB and 4,213 claiming IVB. These figures include customers who have claimed but are not in receipt of benefit.

As Agency District boundaries do not correspond with county or borough boundaries the figures include some customers living in areas other than Durham City.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report. A copy will also be placed in the Library.

National Insurance

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what estimate he has made of the value of employees' national insurance contributions illegally retained by employers each year;

(2) how many successful prosecutions have taken place of employers who have illegally retained employees' national insurance contributions in each year since 1977-78; and what have been the sums of money involved (a) in each region and (b) nationally;

(3) what plans he has to commission research into the extent of employers illegally retaining employees' national insurance contributions.

Mr. Hague: The administration of national insurance is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive of the Contributions Agency. She will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from George Bertram to Mr. Alan Milburn, undated:

As Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency, Miss Ann Chant is responsible for answering questions about relevant operational matters. However, in her absence I, as Deputy Chief Executive have been asked to reply to the points raised in your recent Parliamentary Questions about employees' National Insurance Contributions being retained illegally by employers. Because of the nature of the questions I have combined the responses.

At this stage, the Agency has no plans to commission research into the extent of employers' failure to pay over employees' contributions. However, such failures do come to light when the Agency's inspectors make survey visits. These visits are aimed at identifying employers not complying with National Insurance law and also providing advice and guidance to those employers requiring assistance. One of the Secretary of State's High Level Targets for the Agency is that in the 1993-94 year 121,000 such surveys should be made. This equates to approximately 10 per cent. of the employers in the country representing a considerable investment in effective monitoring and enforcement of employers' liabilities. Similar targets set for 1991-92 and 1992-93 were met and exceeded by the Agency.

Another means by which the Agency identifies the non-payment of contributions is based upon employees querying details shown on their National Insurance records. At the end of each tax year returns of payments made by employers are processed and employees' contributions are recorded on their individual National Insurance records. Following this, deficient records are identified and where appropriate, action taken to inform the people concerned. Steps are taken to obtain payment from employers, or an explanation as to why there has apparently been non-compliance. Where necessary civil proceedings or criminal prosecutions are instituted to recover any arrears.

Information is not available about the number of employers who are not currently meeting their liability timeously, nor of the monetary value of employees' contributions affected by such action.

In the tables attached as an annex I have provided details of the number of cases authorised for both civil and criminal proceedings against employers from November 1977 to March 1993 (the latest date for which figures are available). I must emphasise however, that these figures include proceedings that were authorised for a wide variety of reasons (for instance, failure to keep proper records, underpayments arising from incorrect assessment of NI liability) and do not relate soley to failure to pay over employees' contributions. Similarly, the monetary values relate to the total sums of NICs involved, and not just the employee's share of the contributions due.

I regret that I am unable to give you the specific information that you requested but I hope that the information that I have provided will prove helpful.

The annex has been placed in the Library.

Cash Limits

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proposed changes there are in the cash limit and running costs limit of his Department for 1993-94.

Mr. Scott: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XIII, vote 4 will be increased by £810,000 from £2,526,356,000 to £2,527,166,000. The increase takes account of a transfer into running costs of £952,000 from tourism, roads and transport, housing, other environmental services, including civil defence, education, arts and libraries and health and personal social services, and Wales—class XV, vote 5. This is partially offset by a transfer to Department of Health—class XII, vote 3—of £82,000 running costs and an increase in appropriations in aid of £60,000 and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

In addition to the running cost transfers included above, there is also a net reduction of £5,283,000 to take account of a transfer from running costs to other current expenditure—£5,227,000—and a £56,000 increase in value added tax refunds.

As a result of these changes, the running cost limit of the Department of Social Security will be reduced by £4,413,000 from £2,906,991,000 to £2,902,578,000.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Brewery Industry

Mr. Wareing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions on competition within the brewery industry have been held at his meetings with other European Trade Ministers; and if he will make a statement on how European competition policy relates to the United Kingdom brewery industry.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has had no specific discussions on competition in the brewing industry with other European Ministers, although other issues of relevance to the brewing industry, for example duty levels, have been discussed at the EC level. The United Kingdom brewing industry is subject to normal EC competition law; certain exclusive supply agreements in the brewing industry benefit from an exemption from article 85 of the treaty of Rome.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will consult the National Association of Inntrepreneur Lessees on the operation of the Beer Orders.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Neither I nor my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade have any plans to carry out consultation on the operation of the Beer Orders. In recent correspondence with my Department, members of the National Association of Inntrepreneur Lessees (NAIL) have already made known their concerns about recent changes in the brewing industry.

Cash Limits

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes are being made to his Department's cash limits for 1993-94.

Mr. Heseltine: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate the cash limit for class

IV, vote 4—privatisation of the coal industry—will be increased by £2,500,000 from £5,000,000 to £7,500,000. The increased provision is sought to meet further expenditure on advisers' fees required for the privatisation programme and for assistance for commissioning consultants by management and employee buy-out teams.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library a full copy of the transcripts of the proceedings of the Lord Justice Scott inquiry into exports of defence equipment and dual-use goods to Iraq.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 7 June 1993]: Yes.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Relocation and Amalgamation

Mr. Roberts Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the sections and organisations within his Department for which there are plans for relocation or amalgamation.

Mr. Mates: It is proposed to relocate the following functions from Belfast and Bangor to Londonderry in a phased way over the next 12 to 18 months:

the Northern Ireland Civil Service Commission;
Teachers Administration and Salaries Branch, Department of Education; Agriculture Improvement and Livestock Production and General Branches, Department of Agriculture; and Human Resource Directorate 6 (formerly Health Service Superannuation Branch) Department of Health and Social Services.

In addition, it is proposed to move the headquarters of the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland from the Stormont area to Belfast city centre later this year; and also relocate the Agricultural Development Service's Co. Down office from Knockbreda to Downpatrick when suitable premises are available.

There are no plans at present to amalgamate any functions.

Education Administration

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received from the South Eastern education and library board regarding the proposed restructuring of educational administration in Northern Ireland; what steps he intends to take to ensure full and comprehensive monitoring of education policy in Northern Ireland when the administrative structure is finally introduced; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: No formal representations have yet been made to me by the South Eastern education and library board. Arrangements for the monitoring of educational policy must reflect any new administrative structures, and can therefore only be determined when those structures have been decided upon. No decisions on these will be taken until after the end of the consultation period.

Pensions Payments

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received from people in Northern Ireland over the proposals to pay future pensions through banks and building societies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: A small number of representations have been received about steps taken to increase awareness of the advantages of automated credit transfer, mostly from hon. Members on behalf of several of their constituents and a few members of the public. The majority of representations have been on behalf of pensioners who mistakenly believed that they would no longer be able to receive their pension and benefits through post offices.

Eastern Health and Social Services Board

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland following the establishment of the internal inquiry by the Eastern health and social services board following the decision in Duffy v. Eastern health and social services board, if he will indicate (a) those findings of the inquiry he has endorsed, (b) those findings of the inquiry he has rejected, (c) those recommendations he has endorsed and (d) those recommendations he has not endorsed.

Mr. Ancram: My noble Friend Lord Arran has neither endorsed nor rejected any findings or recommendations of the internal inquiry conducted by the Eastern health and social services board following the decision in Duffy v. Eastern health and social services board.

Fair Employment

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide details of the expenditure in each area health board for the past financial year in defending or responding to fair employment cases showing (a) the total number of cases and total damages paid as a result of a Fair Employment Commission/Tribunal decision, (b) the number of cases and compensation paid to claimants who had lodged cases with the FEC/FET, (c) the number of cases and total compensation paid to members of staff who had indicated an intention of taking a case to the FEC/FET and (d) the total administrative costs, including legal and management costs, in defending or awarding complaints to the FEC/FET.

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

Expenditure by the health boards on defending or responding to fair employment cases—1992-93

(a) Total number of cases and total damages paid as a result of an FEC/FET decision

Board	Number of cases	Amount of damages
Eastern	Nil	Nil
Northern	Nil	Nil
Southern	[1]19	Nil
Western	Nil	Nil

[1] 12 cases withdrawn, seven are still ongoing.

(b) Number of cases and compensation paid to claimants who had lodged cases with the FEC/FET

Board	Number of cases	Compensation paid £
Eastern	5	73,000
Northern	Nil	Nil
Southern	[1]19	Nil
Western	4	[2]7,000

[2] One case from 1990 settled on 18 January 1993 (out of court).

(c) Number of cases and total compensation paid to members of staff who had indicated an intention of taking a case to the FEC/FET

Board	Number of cases	Total compensation paid
Eastern	Nil	Nil
Northern	Nil	Nil
Southern	[1]19	Nil
Western	Nil	Nil

[1] See (a).

(d) Total administrative costs, including legal and management costs, in defending or awarding complaints to the FEC/FET

It is not possible to determine any of the above costs because of the wide-ranging duties of the staff involved in these areas, and because of the number of people who become involved as a result of investigations of allegations of discrimination.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will specify the total amount of damages or compensation paid cases in which there was a no publicity clause and the number of times that such a clause was indicated in settlement terms of cases (a) held before the Fair Employment Commission/Tribunal, (b) lodged with the FEC/FET and (c) when it was intended a case was going to be brought before the FEC/FET.

Mr. Atkins: A "no publicity" clause has been included in 27 settlements where the applicant was assisted by the Fair Employment Commission. Six of these were settled during the course of the FET hearing; the remaining 21 were settled before the cases were heard by the FET.

As the parties to these settlements agreed to a "no publicity" clause, it would not be appropriate to publish details of the amount of the settlements reached.

Information is not available on whether there are any cases, not assisted by the Fair Employment Commission, which were settled on these terms.

Agricultural Research and Development

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what funds, in cash and constant prices, were allocated to the Northern Ireland Department of Agriculture research and development budgets for each year since 1978; what is the projected spending for 1993-94 and 1994-95; and what proportion of the departmental budget for research and development is accounted for by (a) the Central Science Laboratory, (b) the Veterinary Medicines Directorate, (c) the Central Veterinary Laboratory and (d) ADAS.

Mr. Ancram: The available information is given in the table.

The Department does not fund (a) the Central Science Laboratory (b) the Veterinary Medicines Directorate, (c) the Central Veterinary Laboratory and (d) ADAS.
Notes:
[1]Projected, 3 per cent. inflation assumed for re-pricing.
[2]Correct using the retail price index.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were employed, for each year since 1978, directly by the Northern Ireland Department of Agriculture on research and development programmes related to agriculture, fisheries and food; and how many people were employed, for each year since 1978 on Northern Ireland Department of Agriculture research and development programmes commissioned from outside.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Cash Limits

Mr. Molyneaux: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the 1993-94 running cost limit for the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland departments.

Mr. Mates: The running cost limit for 1993-94 for the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland departments is £723,455,000. Details of the provision for individual Northern Ireland departments are set out in the Northern Ireland estimates which were laid before the House yesterday.

WALES

Mortgage Assistance

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish figures showing numbers claiming income support for mortgage interest according to household type in Wales, indicating (a) the number of claimants and (b) percentage of all claiming households that were (i) pensioners of over 80 years, (ii) pensioners between 60 and 80 years of age, (iii) households entitled to disability premiums, (iv) households entitled to lone-parent premium and (v) unemployed households for each year from 1988.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Estimates of the number of claimants of income support who have mortgage interest considered in their assessment are shown in the table. These estimates are obtained from the income support statistics annual inquiries which is a sample of one in 100 claimants in May and are subject to sampling variability. Figures for 1988 are not readily available.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the buildings currently owned or rented by his Department, together with (a) the estimated value, (b) the annual rent and (c) the annual maintenance cost of each building in the current financial year.

Mr. Redwood: Buildings occupied for Welsh Office's own use on the civil estate are all rented from Property Holdings or other departments. Excluding executive agencies, these are given in the following list with available information on costs for the financial year 1993-94. Agricultural Research and Development

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what funds, in cash and constant prices, were allocated to his Department's research and development budget for each year since 1978; what is the projected spending for 1993-94 and 1994-95; and what proportion of the departmental budget for research and development is accounted for by (a) the Central Science Laboratory, (b) the Veterinary Medicines Directorate, (c) the Central Veterinary Laboratory and (d) ADAS.

Mr. Redwood: The Department does not have a single research budget, but funds are made available to support research and development programmes administered by various divisions within the Department. The totals for the years in question are as follows:

The cash figures for 1981-82 and preceding years were published in "Economic Trends" No. 359 page 114, September 1983. The figures for 1982-83 and subsequent years were published in "R and D 92"—tables 2.3.1 and 2.3.2—published by the Office of Science and Technology.

Funding for agricultural research and development relating to Wales and England is the responsibility of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. The Welsh Office Agriculture Department produces and sends to MAFF an annual strategy document setting out research and development priorities for agriculture in Wales, and discusses research and development programmes for individual sectors in detail with MAFF before they are implemented. It does not, however, fund direct research and development programmes itself.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people were employed, for each year since 1978, directly by the Welsh Department of Agriculture on research and development programmes related to agriculture, fisheries and food; and how many people were employed, for each year since 1978, on Welsh Department of Agriculture research and development programmes commissioned from outside.

Mr. Redwood: Funding for agricultural research and development relating to Wales and England is the responsibility of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. The Welsh Office Agriculture Department produces and sends to MAFF an annual strategy document setting out research and development priorities for agriculture in Wales, and discusses research and development programmes for individual sectors in detail with MAFF before they are implemented. It does not however employ people, either directly or on commission, to carry out research programmes.

Badger Setts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 30 March, Official Report, columns 140-41, on licences for the entry of dogs into badger setts, what other methods of fox control were tried; and how successful they were.

Mr. Redwood: Before submitting the application for a licence, the applicant had attempted to deal with the problem by other means including the use of snares and night shooting but with only limited success. This was taken into account in determining the application.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 30 March, Official Report, columns 140-41, on entry of dogs into badger setts, whether ADAS visited the site prior to the licence being issued.

Mr. John Redwood: Yes. ADAS was also present when the licensed activity took place and has made two subsequent visits to the site which indicate that there has been no adverse effect on the local badger population.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 30 March, Official Report, columns 140-41, on entry of dogs into badger setts, what were the permitted methods of interference under the conditions of the licence; how many dogs were permitted to be used; and what precautions were taken to ensure that there were no badgers present before dogs were entered.

Mr. Redwood: The licence conditions enabled one dog to be entered into a part of the sett considered by ADAS wildlife experts to have been previously abandoned by badgers.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 30 March, Official Report, columns 140-41, on licences for the entry of dogs into badger setts, what was the nature of the alleged problem with foxes in the area; how many foxes were involved; what claims the licence applicant made about lamb losses; and what evidence is available concerning the responsibility of foxes for lamb losses.

Mr. Redwood: Thirteen lambs had been killed over a period of 10 days. Although it was clear from description of the damage that foxes were responsible, it was not possible to determine how many foxes were involved.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he is to take to protect the interests of local government staff in the run-up to local government reorganisation in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: In the White Paper on local government reorganisation, "Local Government in Wales: A Charter For The Future", my predecessor announced his intention to establish a staff commission to help safeguard staff interests during the reorganisation process. I am committed to this. I plan to establish the shadow commission after Second Reading of the Local Government Bill. The staff commission will be formally established once the Bill receives Royal Assent.

It is essential that the implications of reorganisation for existing local government staff are considered at an early stage and I have decided to establish an advisory committee to consider the advice and guidance that will need to be given to the staff commission and, where appropriate, to issue advice on specific issues which need to be addressed in advance of the establishment of the commission.

The advisory committee will consist of a chairman and up to three other members. I am currently considering candidates and will be announcing the appointments shortly. Financial provision for the advisory committee is included in the cash limit increase for class XV, vote 9 announced today. The relevant supplementary estimate is subject to parliamentary approval.

Cash Limits

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes he proposes to make to the cash limits for his Department in the current financial year.

Mr. Redwood: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised and supplementary estimates, the cash limit on class XV, vote 2 will be reduced by £750,000 from £170,030,000 to £169,280,000; the cash limit on class XV, vote 4 will be increased by £4,576,000 from £146,740,000 to £151,316,000; the cash limit on class XV, vote 5 will be increased by £502,000 from £786,996,000 to £787,498,000; and the cash limit on class XV, vote 9 will be increased by £921,000 from £64,362,000 to £65,283,000. The running costs limit for the Department will be increased by £880,000 from £76,486,000 to £77,366,000.

The reduction in the cash limit of vote 2 is in respect of a transfer of £750,000 to vote 9 to provide for the running costs implications of the measures accompanying the reform of the common agricultural policy.

The increase of £4,576,000 for vote 4 comprises (a) £378,000 in respect of extra provision for business and enterprise support, (b) £660,000 in respect of additional resources for areas affected by coal closures, (c) £960,000 in respect of the new TEC Challenge Wales programme, (d) £2,474,000 in respect of the new learning for work programme and (e) £104,000 in respect of payments to the Department of Employment for employment services. With the exception of item (b), these increases form part of the special package of training measures announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his Budget speech on 16 March.

The increase of £502,000 for vote 5 represents a transfer from the Home Office in respect of capital provision for juvenile remand accommodation.

The increase of £921,000 for vote 9 comprises: (a) a transfer of £750,000 from vote 2, (b) a transfer of £90,000 from class VII, vote 11, (c) extra provision of £40,000 for the Local Government Staff Commission—advisory body —and (d) extra provision of £41,000 for other current expenditure. Items (a), (b) and (c) also represent increases to the running costs limit for the Welsh Office.

None of these proposed changes will add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Grants for Education Support and Training

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each of the last three years, the local education authorities which have not been able to take up GEST funding offered to them; for what purposes the unused funding was originally made available; and what it was used for subsequently.

Sir Wyn Roberts [holding answer 28 May 1993]: The GEST allocations in 1990-91 and 1991-92 and final expenditure for each local education authority are shown in the tables. Final expenditure information in respect of the 1992-93 GEST programme is not yet available.

The purposes for which grant was approved are set out in Welsh Office circulars 45/89 and 58/89 for 1990-91, 47/90 for 1991-92 and 36/91 for 1992-93. The reasons for underspends varied significantly between local education authorities, under the flexible arrangements for virement within GEST which are approved each year. Some underspends were reallocated to other authorities.

SCOTLAND

KS Construction Ltd.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is now in a position to make a final statement on the moneys loaned by the Scottish Development Agency to KS Construction Ltd.

Mr. Stewart: This matter is still under consideration.

Football Stadiums

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the report of the Scottish Stadia Committee regarding the implementation of the Taylor report.

Sir Hector Monro: No. The report is the property of the Scottish Stadia Committee and any decision to publish the contents of the report rests with that body.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the level of preparedness of each football club in the premier, first and second divisions for complying with the Taylor committee requirement for all-seated stadia by August 1994.

Sir Hector Monro: My right hon. Friend announced in September last year his decision that, following our review of the Taylor report requirements, only clubs in the premier division of the Scottish football league should be subject to the requirements for all-seated stadia within the prescribed timetable. I wrote on 22 April this year to the chairman of the Scottish Stadia Committee reinforcing our continued resolve on implementation of Taylor in respect of those clubs and confirming the target dates for individual clubs by which all-seated work should be completed.

Relocation and Amalgamations

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the sections and organisations within his Department for which there are plans for relocation or amalgamation.

Mr. Lang: The organisation of my Department, including amalgamations of sections, is kept under continuous review. As to relocation, the Government indicated in "Scotland in the Union: A Partnership for Good" (Cm 2225) that we are committed to seeking opportunities to relocate units of the Scottish Office where it is operationally and financially appropriate to do so.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the buildings currently owned or rented by his Department, together with (a) the estimated value, (b) the annual rent and (c) the annual maintenance cost of each building in the current financial year.

Mr. Lang: An up-to-date capital valuation of the Scottish Office's departmental estate is not available. The annual rental bill for the Scottish Office's departmental estate for 1993-94 is £370,572·73. Details of individual rentals are commercially sensitive. Maintenance responsibility is shared between my Department and Property Holdings, but my Department's maintenance costs for 1993-94, which also cover our responsibilities for buildings on the common user estate occupied by my Department, are estimated to be £2·427 million.

Electoral Rolls

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total parliamentary electorate of, respectively, Renfrewshire and Strathclyde.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The total parliamentary electorate for Strathclyde in the 1993 electoral registers is 1,740,266. There is no comparable figure available for the former county of Renfrewshire because its area now forms part of several parliamentary constituencies.

Smoke Alarms

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to make it his policy that mains-operated smoke alarms are fitted in all new publicly owned and privately owned dwellings and buildings; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have today signed the statutory instrument amending the Building Standards (Scotland) Regulations 1990 to make the fitting of mains-operated smoke alarms mandatory in all new dwellings from 23 July 1993.

In hotels and boarding houses designated under the Fire Precautions Act 1971, automatic fire detection equipment is a requirement of the fire certificate. As regards other buildings to which fire certificate arrangements under the same Act apply, depending on risk and occupancy factors, automatic fire detection systems may similarly be installed.

Quangos

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the average percentage increase in allowances, salary or honoraria payable to members of (a) local authorities, (b) health boards, (c) Scottish Homes or its predecessor and (d) other quasi-autonomous non-governmental organisations to which he appoints in each year since 1974; what other types of payment are made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 7 June 1993]: The rates of allowances paid to local authority members are reviewed on a regular basis. Details of the allowances paid to individual local authority members are not held centrally as each authority decides on its own arrangements within the requirements of the Local Authorities Etc (Allowances) (Scotland) Regulations 1991, as amended. Information about salaries and fees for members of non-departmental public bodies, including health boards and Scottish Homes and its predecessor bodies, for the period from 1982 is published annually in "Public Bodies", copies of which are in the Library of the House. The other information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the cost to date and the expected future cost of his Department's market-testing programme; how many staff are engaged full time in work relating to market testing; which firms of consultants have been used in connection with the market-testing programme; and how they were selected.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 7 June 1993]: With regard to the cost of the market-testing programme and staff committed to implementing the programme, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Dundee, East (Mr. McAllion) on 17 February 1993, at column 169. In the first four months of 1993 the expenditure on market testing, including staff costs and fees for consultancy work, is estimated at £370,000. It is not possible to give an accurate forecast of future costs; this will depend on the outcome of detailed scoping work, yet to be completed, and upon the level of internal and consultancy effort needed to complete the programme. The consultants Coopers and Lybrand, Deloitte advised my Department on the initial scoping exercise to identify possible activities for the 1992-93 market-testing programme and Capita Management Consultancy are assisting in its implementation in the Scottish Office. Both firms of consultants were selected following competitive tendering.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Arable Area Payments

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what checks his staff are making to ensure that farmers submitting claims for arable area payment under the integrated administration and control system are complying with the requirement set out in paragraph 129 of the advisory booklet to exclude from their claim land crossed by public footpaths and bridleways.

Mr. Jack: Farmers are required to provide certain information under the IACS. The arrangements under the IACS for dealing with uncropped or grazed land is outlined in paragraph 129 of the explanatory booklet. The information supplied will be subject to administrative checks which may be backed up by the use of field checks.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what conclusions were reached at the May EC Council of Agriculture Ministers, in relation to the CAP budget for 1993-94, 1994-95 and 1995-96; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The agreement on the CAP price-fixing reached at the May Council of Agriculture Ministers will add 137 mecu—£108 million[1]—to the costs of the CAP in 1993 and 146 mecu—£114 million[2]—in 1994. The increase in set-aside payments will add some 350 mecu—£274 million[2]—from 1995. The latest estimate of expenditure for 1993 is around 35·5 becu—£28·1 billion[1]—some 1 becu—£0·8 billion[1]—below the agricultural guideline, the legally binding ceiling on agricultural expenditure. For 1994, the Commission has adopted a preliminary draft budget at the level of the guideline, 36·5 becu—£28·6 billion[2]. Part of the agrimonetary costs arising from ERM realignments since last September may be funded in line with the conclusions of the Edinburgh European Council. The Commission confirmed that, on this basis, expenditure will be kept within the guideline in 1994. Decisions on the level of the 1995 budget will be taken next year.

Board for the Encouragement of Agriculture and Internal Improvement

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what activities she is proposing to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the Board for the Encouragement of Agriculture and Internal Improvement and the publication of the county reports.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: None; the board was not really a Government Department, and I understand that its true successor was the Royal Agricultural Society of England —RASE. Furthermore, the Department celebrated in 1989 the much more significant centenary of the establishment of the Board of Agriculture, which coincided with the 150th anniversary of the founding of the RASE.

Research and Development

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many people were employed, for each year since 1978, directly by his Department on research and development programmes related to agriculture, fisheries and food; and how many people were employed, for each year since 1978, on research and development programmes commissioned from outside.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Details of the number of people engaged by my Department on R and D can be found in table 2.5.1 on page 44 of the "Annual Review of Government Funded Research and Development 1992", a copy of which has been placed in the library of the House. Information is not available on the number of people employed on externally commissioned R and D.

Set-aside Land

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is her best estimate of the area likely to be the subject of set-aside provisions in each EC member state in 1993-94; and what proportion of this area is likely to be rotational in each state.

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Skipton and Ripon (Mr. Curry) on 14 December 1992, at column 70. It will not be possible to provide more reliable estimates until we know how much land has been set aside in individual member states in 1992-93 and what detailed arrangements will apply to non-rotational set-aside and to the incorporation of linseed in the arable area payments scheme.

Farmed Salmon

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions have been held or are to be held with the Norwegian Government concerning the United Kingdom salmon farming industry's initiative for the formation of producer organisations in the EC.

Sir Hector Monro: I have been asked to reply.

Officials of the Scottish Office visited Norway on 9 to 11 May for discussions with various interests there, including the Royal Norwegian Ministry of Fisheries, about the prospects for the European salmon market.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions have been held with the European Commission to secure stability in the farmed salmon market in the Community.

Sir Hector Monro: I have been asked to reply.

There have been a number of discussions between officials of the fisheries departments and the EC Commission services over the past year about various aspects of the salmon market.

DEFENCE

HMS Sovereign

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what time scale he has for the return to service of HMS Sovereign; of what other vessels the officer in command of HMS Sovereign is also in command; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: HMS Sovereign is expected to return to service in 1995. The refitting officer in command of HMS Sovereign is also in command of HMS Revenge while she, too, is in refit.

Nuclear Submarines (Commanding Officers)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy on appointing an officer to be in command of more than one nuclear-powered submarine while in refit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: In each yard it is established practice to appoint a commander (submarines) as the senior officer submarines (refitting) who carries out the duties of commanding officer of all submarines in deep refit in that yard until commanding officers are appointed to individual submarines as they near completion.

The duties of the senior officer submarines (refitting) are primarily to command the refit crews and ensure reactor safety of those submarines which are in deep refit. The appointment of one officer to command all submarines in deep refit in that yard is considered and proven to be entirely appropriate.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 8 June.

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 8 June.

The Prime Minister: This morning, I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Mr. Ghazanfer Ali

Mr. Madden: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 22 April, Official Report, column 195, what further information he has received concerning Ghazanfer Ali and the progress of his case; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 27 May 1993]: The two murder cases involving Mr. Ghazanfer Ali which opened on 13 and 14 March have been further adjourned until 13 and 29 June respectively. We understand from one of Mr. Ghazanfer Ali's lawyers that no evidence has yet been heard in the case. We understand that the court was ready to record the statement of the respondent at a hearing on 6 June, but witnesses failed to appear in court.

Iraq (Children)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what response he has given to the report sent to him by Dr. Eric Hoskins, Oxford epidemiologist, commissioned by UNICEF on the children of Iraq.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 7 June 1993]: Dr. Hoskins's report contains disturbing information about the suffering in Iraq. It reinforces our view that the responsibility for this lies with the Government of Iraq rather than with UN sanctions regime. Baghdad has imposed an internal economic blockade on northern Iraq, and has refused to implement the mechanisms provided under UN Security Council resolutions 706 and 712 for using the proceeds of oil sales for humanitarian needs, such as food and medicines, which are not covered by sanctions.

EMPLOYMENT

Equal Pay Claims

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications were made to United Kingdom industrial tribunals for each year since 1979; how many of those applications involved claims for equal pay for work of equal value; how many separate employers were involved in each year; how many employees were involved in each year; how many of those employees were women; and how many cases were successful.

Miss Widdecombe: The available information, which relates to Great Britain, is set out in the table. The number of employees is the same as the number of applications. I regret that figures for the number of separate employers and the number of women applicants are not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. The majority of applications disposed of do not reach an industrial tribunal hearing, being settled under the auspices of the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service or withdrawn.

Palace of Westminster

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will bring forward legislative proposals to bring the Palace of Westminster under the protection of the health and safety at work enactments; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: During recent discussions with the Health and Safety Executive the Palace authorities have agreed in principle to the extension of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 to the Palace of Westminster. This will be implemented as soon as a suitable legislative vehicle becomes available.

In the meantime, there is no suggestion that standards of health and safety at the Palace of Westminster are inferior to those of other employers. Under the current arrangements, the HSE inspects the Palace of Westminster at the invitation of the Palace authorities.

Long-term Unemployment

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what further steps she proposes to reduce the numbers of long-term unemployed.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: At the time of the Budget, a number of new programmes were announced which are aimed at helping long-term unemployed people, and which will start in the summer. They comprise:

Community Action which will provide 60,000 opportunities for people unemployed over 12 months to do voluntary work of benefit to the community, while looking for work.

Learning for Work which will provide 30,000 opportunities for people unemployed over 12 months to pursue vocationally relevant full-time education to enhance their skills and career prospects.

Workstart pilots which will test the effectiveness of giving employers a financial incentive to employ people who have been unemployed for a minimum of two years.

A TEC Challenge Fund which will support imaginative ideas to help unemployed people into work.

10,000 further opportunities on the Business Start-Up scheme in addition to the 40,000 which already exist to encourage unemployed people to set up their own businesses.

These are in addition to existing programmes which already provide extensive opportunities for long-term unemployed people, including:

Training for Work, offering 320,000 opportunities for skills training, work experience or shorter work preparation courses.

Jobplan Workshops and Restart courses offering a total of 410,000 opportunities for unemployed people to assess their employment prospects and skills and to rebuild their self-confidence.

Jobclubs offering practical advice and help to 295,000 long-term unemployed people who are looking for work.

Job Interview Guarantee offering 300,000 opportunities to unemployed people to acquire training in self-presentation or work trials followed by a guaranteed interview with an employer with suitable vacancies.

Retail Sectors

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will set out (a) the average hours worked per week and (b) the average gross wage for (i) full-time and (ii) part-time workers in the retail sector.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested for full-time employees is published in table X2.5 of part A of the 1992 new earnings survey. A copy is available in the Library.

In April 1992, the average weekly hours of part-time workers in retail distribution were 18·2 and their average gross weekly earnings were £68·60.

Redundancies

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proposals her Department has to introduce regulations which would penalise employers for failing to consult with trade unions prior to announcing redundancies.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Such penalties already exist. Any recognised trade union which considers that the statutory consultation requirements contained in chapter II of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 have been breached may complain to an industrial tribunal. The tribunal may make a protective award to the employees affected. The Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Bill contains a provision that such awards may no longer be offset against wages paid to the employees.

Relocation and Amalgamations

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will list the sections and organisations within her Department for which there are plans for relocation or amalgamation.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Employment Department's relocation programme to Runcorn and Sheffield is now complete. There are no present plans for further relocation or amalgamation.

A. H. Marks Ltd.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will call for a report by the Health and Safety Executive on the likely consequences of the removal of any buffer zone round A. H. Marks Ltd. of Wyke in Bradford, South and its replacement with industrial development.

Miss Widdecombe: The Health and Safety Executive has no plans to remove the consultation distance of "buffer zone" around A. H. Marks and Co. Ltd.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the latest estimates from the labour force survey for each standard United Kingdom region of the number and percentage of (a) all males, (b) all adults over 50 years and (c) all males between 50 and 65 years, who are recorded as economically inactive.

Miss Widdecombe: The available information from the labour force survey is given in the table:

EC Employment Council

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on matters discussed and decisions taken at the European Employment Council in Luxembourg on 1 June; and what proposals were put forward by the United Kingdom to the Council.

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes) on 7 June regarding the outcome of the EC Social Affairs Council held on 1 June.

Newspapers

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many people are directly employed by the national newspaper industry;

(2) how many people are directly employed in the newspaper publishing industry in Scotland;

(3) how many people are directly employed by the newspaper publishing industry in Wales;

(4) how many people are directly employed by the newspaper publishing industry in Northern Ireland.

Miss Widdecombe: The latest available information on regional employment for the newspaper publishing industry[1] is from the 1991 census of employment. The estimated number of employees in employment at September 1991 were as follows:

	Number
Great Britain	76,700
Scotland	7,900
Wales	3,000
Northern Ireland[2]	1,700

[1] Activity heading 4751 of the Standard Industrial Classification 1980.
[2] Figure supplied by the Department of Economic Development, Northern Ireland.

Manufacturing Jobs

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many manufacturing jobs there were in each region at December each year since 1979; and what proportion of the regional total number of jobs they represented.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The available information can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Fishermen (Redundancies)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many fishermen have received redundancy payments since 1973; what was the average amount paid to each; how many were paid directly by his Department; and what was the average amount paid.

Miss Widdecombe: Information is not available for payments made by employers or, in the case of departmental payments, by individual occupation.

Cash Limits

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what changes will be made to the cash limits or running costs limits of his Department for 1993-94.

Mr. David Hunt: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made:

- the cash limit for Class V, Vote 1—Employment Department: programmes and central services—will be increased by £60,647,000 from £2,438,620,000 to £2,499,267,000;
- the cash limit for Class V, Vote 2—Employment Department: Employment Service—will be increased by £35,562,000 from £603,00o7,00 to £638,569,000;
- the single running cost limit for the Employment Department—Class V, Votes 1 and 2 will be increased by £8,392,000 from £1,439,658,000 to £1,448,050,000.

The cash limit increases on class V, votes 1 and 2 are mainly the effect of the increased provision to fund the new employment measures announced by the then Chancellor of the Exchequer in his Budget statement to the House of Commons on 16 March 1993. The running cost limit increase is mainly to cover administration expenditure on the new measures.

The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Workstart

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how he intends to fund workstart and community action programmes announced in the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget statement on 16 March.

Mr.Michael Forsyth: In his Budget statement, my right hon. Friend the previous Chancellor announced a new package of employment measures.

The aim of the community action programme is to help long-term unemployed people back into work by providing opportunities for them to do part-time voluntary work of benefit to the community combined with active job search. Participants will continue to receive an allowance equivalent to their benefit plus £10.

The aim of the workstart scheme is to help the long-term unemployed people back into work by paying a temporary employment subsidy to employers for a year. The scheme will be piloted with 1,000 places between four locations, two of which will be run by training and enterprise councils and two run by the Employment Service.

Parliamentary approval for these new services will be sought in supplementary estimates for the Employment Department's programmes and central services vote—class V, vote 1—for workstart pilots provided by training and enterprise councils; and for the Employment Department's Employment Service vote—class V, vote 2—for workstart pilots and community action. Pending that approval, the following urgent expenditure estimated will be met by repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund:

Workstart (Class V, Vote 1)	3,000
Workstart (Class V, Vote 2)	7,000
Community Action (Class V, Vote 2)	200,000

Disabled People

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many disabled people under the age of 25 years are currently unemployed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 7 June 1993]: The labour survey—LFS—asks people of working age if they currently have any health problem or disability which limits the kind of paid work they can do. Estimates based on answers to this question will include people with short-term health problems and disabilities as well as those registered as disabled.

LFS estimates for autumn 1992, not seasonally adjusted, show that in Great Britain there were 105,000 people aged 16 to 24 with all such health problems or disabilities who were unemployed on the International Labour Organisation definition.

HEALTH

AIDS

12. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the future of funding for AIDS-related projects under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968.

Mr. Sackville: Voluntary organisations have played a crucial role in combating the epidemic in the United Kingdom and have been given substantial funds for this work—nearly £12 million to date. The Government will continue to make help available in this area while also ensuring that total funds available to voluntary bodies under section 64 continue to be distributed from year to year in accordance with developing health priorities.

Drug Abusers

14. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has as to the number of people aged between 10 and 18 years who have died because of drug abuse since 1979.

Dr. Mawhinney: The data are not available for the age range requested. However, from 1979 to 1991, 92 deaths were registered in the United Kingdom of people aged under 20 where the underlying cause of death was given as drug dependence or non-dependent abuse of drugs. This figure does not include deaths from alcohol, tobacco or volatile substances.

A breakdown of the figures by year is shown in the table.

Personal Social Services

15. Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was available to councils for spending on personal social services in 1979; what is the amount provided for 1993-94; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: Expenditure on local authority personal social services increased by 69 per cent. in real terms between 1978-79 and 1992-93. Standard spending for personal social services in 1993-94 including the special transitional grant for community care, is £5,585 million, an increase of 15 per cent. on 1992-93.

Patients, Wessex

16. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made reducing waiting times for patients in the Wessex region.

Mr. Sackville: Latest provisional waiting time figures for 31 March 1993 show that in the two years since 31 March 1991, the number of patients waiting for more than a year in the Wessex region has fallen by more than 40 per cent. from nearly 10,000 to just over 4,000. No Wessex patient has to wait more than two years for any treatment and patients needing hip, knee or cataract surgery are treated within 18 months.

Hospital Services, Dover

17. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the provision of hospital services in the Dover area.

Mr. Sackville: The South Kent hospital unit is conducting a review of the provision of acute clinical services currently provided at William Harvey hospital, Ashford, and the Buckland hospital, Dover.

Any changes to service provision that are proposed will be subject to full public consultation.

Patients Charter

18. Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the implementation of the patients charter waiting time guarantee in the North East Thames region.

Mr. Sackville: As at 31 March 1993, in North East Thames, as in all other regions, there was no one waiting more than two years for any treatment and no one waiting more than 18 months for a hip replacement or a cataract operation. Only seven patients were waiting more than 18 months for a knee replacement in North East Thames and the region is taking steps to ensure the guarantee is met in full as soon as possible.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the implementation of the patients charter waiting time guarantee in the north-western region.

Mr. Sackville: Latest provisional waiting time figures for 31 March 1993 show that in line with the patients charter there were no patients waiting two years or more for any in-patient or day case treatment in the region. In addition, as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health announced on 4 May, at 31 March 1993 there were no north-western patients waiting more than 18 months for either a hip or knee replacement or a cataract operation.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what extent under the patients charter commitment to providing NHS treatment to every citizen based on clinical need doctors may refuse NHS treatment without a change in the patient's lifestyle.

Mr. Sackville: The patients charter states that every citizen has the right to health care on the basis of clinical need regardless of the ability to pay. The assessment of clinical need of individual patient is a matter for the clinicians responsible for their care. In deciding what form of treatment is appropriate, clinicians will need to exercise their clinical judgment and decide the priority between different forms of treatment, having regard to the resources available.

Community Care

19. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her policy on the recording at local level of unmet community care needs.

Mr. Bowis: We have made quite clear to local authorities that they should share the results of assessments with clients and collect and record the information they need to plan to improve their services.

Infant and Perinatal Mortality

20. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest information about the rates of infant and perinatal mortality in the South East Thames region.

Mr. Sackville: The infant and perinatal mortality rates for the South East Thames regional health authority for 1992[1] are given in the table.

	South East Thames RHA	Nationally
Infant mortality rate 1,000 live births	6·4	6·6
Perinatal mortality per 1,000 total births	8·2	7·6

NHS Dental Treatment

21. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the availability of NHS dental treatment in Hampshire.

Dr. Mawhinney: In Hampshire, the proportion of patients registered with national health service dentists is above the national average and adult registrations have increased since last July.

NHS Staff

22. Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS staff were employed as (a) managers and (b) administrators and clerical officers in each year since 1989-90.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information available is shown in the table.

Whole-time equivalent general/senior managers and administrative and clerical staff in England at 30 September of each year

	1989	1990	1991
General/Senior Managers	4,610	9,680	13,340
Administrative and Clerical	116,840	120,040	127,370

Source: Department of Health non-Medical Workforce Census.
Notes:
1. In 1991 NHS Management accounted for less than 1·7 per cent. and Administrative and Clerical Staff for less than 16 per cent. of the total NHS workforce.
2. Some management posts are simply re-definitions and re-categorisations of jobs previously carried out by other staff groups.
3. The figures for 1991 are the latest available.

Oral Contraceptives

23. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement about the proposed inclusion of oral contraceptives in the selected list.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have asked the Advisory Committee on National Health Service Drugs to advise us on which contraceptives should remain available on NHS prescription in order to meet all real clinical needs as economically as possible.

London Ambulance Service

24. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will direct the London ambulance service to provide a transportation service separate from the vehicles used for rapid response to 999 calls.

Mr. Sackville: In April 1991, the London ambulance service—LAS—established the patient transport service. It is a separate organisation within the LAS, with dedicated control centres, management, staff and vehicles. The core service operates between 08.00 and 18.00 hours, Monday to Friday, to co-incide with the requirements of most hospitals and patients. In addition, the patient transport service operates up to 23.00 hours Monday to Friday and on Saturdays between 08.00 and 16.00 hours in areas where demand for the service warrants it. Outside these hours, patient transport is provided by the accident and emergency service, as part of the regional accident and emergency contracts. We are not aware of any evidence which would justify changing these arrangements.

Hospital Beds, Leicester

25. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are currently waiting for a hospital bed in the city of Leicester.

Mr. Sackville: Waiting time information is collected by health authority rather than by city or town. Latest figures for 30 September 1992 show that 90 per cent. of Leicestershire district health authority patients had been waiting for less than a year.

National Health Service Spending

26. Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the review of NHS spending.

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary announced the review to the House on 8 February at column 681. The aim of this review, as with those being conducted across the other major spending programmes, is to distinguish essential costs of high priority spending, which the Government will continue to fund, from avoidable spending which they cannot afford. The review of health spending aims to ensure that taxpayers' money spent on the national health service is used as efficiently as possible for the benefit of patients, within the context of the Government's commitments to continue to offer national health service care on the basis of need, not ability to pay; to increase year by year the level of real resources committed to the national health service; and to plough back savings generated by greater efficiency.

NHS Services

27. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total amount of income raised from users of NHS services in 1992-93.

Mr. Sackville: Final accounts for 1992-93 will not be available until later this year. At spring supply, a provisional estimate of income raised from users of national health service services in 1992-93 is £1,207 million. This figure includes some elements which are raised other than from users of NHS services, but which are not identifiable separately in the accounts.

Medical Negligence

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to strengthen the complaints procedure concerning claims of negligence against the medical profession.

Mr. Sackville: We are keen to seek improvements to the way in which medical negligence claims are handled by the national health service and have set up a joint departmental/NHSS working group to that end.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the buildings currently owned or rented by her Department, together with (a) the estimated value, (b) the annual rent and (c) the annual maintenance cost of each building in the current financial year.

Mr. Sackville: The only property owned or rented by the Department is the wheelchair test centre, opened in Blackpool in August 1992. This property has not yet been valued. Similarly, the annual maintenance cost is not known. The land on which the centre was built is on a 125-year lease. The opportunity cost rent payable to Property Holdings is £42,510 per year, including VAT. All other properties occupied by this Department are on the common user estate and are owned or rented by the Property Holdings directorate of the Department of the Environment.

NHS Funding

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received from the North Western regional health authority with regard to levels of funding to maintain standards of patient care.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Family Planning

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what savings would accrue to the national health service if (a) special fees to doctors were not paid in connection with contraceptive provision, (b) the full market costs were payable for contraceptive products prescribed and (c) her Department ceased to fund organisations which supply free condoms and contraceptive products.

Mr. Sackville: Information is not available in the form requested. The costs incurred in providing free contraceptive services have to be weighed against the increases in the cost of health and personal social services which would occur as a result of more unplanned pregnancies. The figures given relate to England only.

The cost of item of service fees paid to general practitioners for the provision of contraceptive services to women was £45·425 million in 1992-93.

The available information regarding the cost of contraceptive products prescribed relates to the net ingredient cost of contraceptive drugs and appliance prescriptions dispensed by retail pharmacists and appliance contractors, dispensing doctors and prescriptions submitted for items personally administered. In 1992 this cost was estimated at £44·580 million.

The cost to district health authorities and national health service trusts of providing national health service family planning services in 1991-92 was estimated at £40 million.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her estimate of the percentage of (a) general practitioners and (b) family planning clinics that provide condoms for patients.

Mr. Sackville: Although detailed information is not available centrally, the supply of condoms is generally part of the comprehensive service available from family planning clinics. It is for district health authorities to decide on what arrangements to make to supply condoms through general practitioners.

Infectious Diseases

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the prevalance of infectious diseases associated with poor water supply and sewage disposal.

Mr. Sackville: The incidence of infectious disease is constantly monitored.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the infectious diseases preventable by use of condoms; and what was the cost to the national health service of treating patients with each of these diseases in the last available year, and the number of patients in each case.

Mr. Sackville: Provisional figures for 1991-92 of new cases seen at national health service genito urinary medicine—GUM—clinics in England will be placed in the Library. Specific information on the cost to the national health service of treating people with sexually transmitted diseases is not available centrally. However, the annual financial returns of health authorities and national health service trusts in England for 1991-92 indicate that total expenditure on the GUM specialty which was attributable to out-patients amounted to some £70 million.

Condoms properly used do have an important role in family planning and in helping prevent the spread of sexually transmitted diseases, including HIV infection. However, not all sexually transmitted diseases—for example, candidasis, bacterial vaginosis, lice, etc.—can be prevented by the use of a condom. The Government are committed to reducing the number of cases of sexually transmitted disease and have set a target in "The Health of the Nation" of a 20 per cent. reduction in gonorrhoea in men and women aged 15 to 64 by 1995.

Homelessness

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton) of 24 May, Official Report, column 444, if she will list the names and locations of the 30 projects designed to improve access to primary health care for homeless people; what are the current and projected levels of funding her Department is committing to each of these projects; and what assessment has been made of the level of homelessness in the areas covered.

Mr. Bowis: There are 29 distinct primary health care projects for homeless people, with one, in Sheffield, having within it a separately identified and separately costed scheme for travellers. The projects have developed in three phases. The third phase was initiated in December 1991 when my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced that £3 million was being made available, over three years, to support new and existing projects. Not all the projects approved in the third phase, which started in 1992-93, were able to start during the financial year; others began towards the end of the year and received only a small amount of funding. The level of funding for most projects in 1993-94 is still under discussion. Information on funding in 1992-93 and 1993-94, where agreed, is shown in the table.

When regional health authorities were invited to bid for funding, they were asked to review the existing services for homeless people in their areas, to distinguish between different types of homeless people —for example, people sleeping rough in shelters and hostels and families in bed-and-breakfast accommodation—to review existing health care facilities and consider whether these should be better publicised. With this information, family health services authorities were able to identify gaps in the services they provided and develop proposals for closing them.

Regional health authorities were asked to submit bids in order of preference. FHSAs have been asked to provide reports on each project at six monthly intervals describing progress made and setting out expenditure incurred.

Unregistered Doctors

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether a doctor may work in private practice in the United Kingdom without registering with the General Medical Council; to what extent doctors struck off by the GMC may continue to practise; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The activities of doctors in the United Kingdom are regulated by the Medical Act 1983. All doctors seeking to practise medicine in this country, whether in the national health service, armed services or in private practice, must be registered with the General Medical Council.

A doctor whose name has been erased from the medical register by the General Medical Council is not permitted to continue practising medicine in this country. A doctor's registration may also have conditions imposed upon it.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what jurisdiction the General Medical Council has over unregistered doctors practising private medicine in the United Kingdom.

Dr. Mawhinney: The General Medical Council has no jurisdiction over doctors who do not obtain registration with it to practise in this country. Under section 49 of the Medical Act 1983, it is a criminal offence to pose as a registered medical practitioner and in such cases jurisdiction would rest with the courts.

Psychogeriatric Care Beds

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the availability of psychogeriatric continuing care beds for people with dementia.

Mr. Bowis: District health authorities are responsible for securing an appropriate range of locally based health services which should include provision for continuing care beds.

Cash Limits

Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes she proposes to the cash limits and running costs limit of her Department in 1993-94.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised and supplementary estimates, the cash limit for class XII, vote 1—hospital, community health, family health services (part) and related services, England—will be reduced by £39,126,000, from £19,977,328,000 to £19,938,202,000. This reduction allows for a transfer of £35,597,000 for an increase in the national health service trusts' aggregate external financing limit; an amount of £3,657,000 to class XII, vote 3—£3,570,000 net in respect of research and development and £87,000 for the Health Education Authority for work on "The Health of the Nation". These reductions are partly offset by a transfer of £128,000 from class VII, vote 3—Department of the Environment urban aid and derelict land reclamation, England—in respect of the urban programme.

The cash limit for class XII, vote 3—Department of Health, administration, miscellaneous health services and personal social services, England—will be increased by £3,790,000—from £1,437,435,000 to £1,441,225,000. This increase will be fully offset by transfers of £3,657,000 from class XII, vote 1, as mentioned earlier; £88,000 from class XIII, vote 4—Department of Social Security, administration and miscellaneous services—£68,000 for accommodation and £20,000 for postage; £45,000 from class V, vote 1—Department of Employment: programmes and central services—concerning a grant for the Alcohol Workplace Advisory Service and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The Department's gross running cost limit will be reduced by £6,838,000 from £259,694,000 to £252,856,000. This reflects a reallocation out of running costs of £6,926,000 in respect of the health benefit unit, offset by the effect of transfers from the Department of Social Security mentioned above.

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what changes she has for the cash limits and running costs limits for the Office of Population Censuses and Statistics for 1993-94.

Mr. Sackville: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XII, vote 6—Office of Population Censuses and Surveys—will be increased by £83,000 from £32,588,000 to £32,671,000 and the gross running costs limit will be increased by £112,000 from £46,583,000 to £46,695,000. This reflects a transfer of running costs provision of £112,000 from Chessington Computer Centre for payroll costs, and increased appropriations in aid of £29,000 from the Departments of the Environment, National Heritage and Education for transfers in respect of the general household survey.

Cot Deaths

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she is able to report the outcome of the work of the expert group on the sleeping position of infants and cot death.

Mr. Sackville: We have today arranged for the publication of the report of the Chief Medical Officer's expert group on the sleeping position of infants and cot death. Copies are being placed in the Library.

The main recommendations, confirming existing advice, are:

Infants should not be laid to sleep on their fronts, except in particular circumstances on medical advice, and that the great majority of infants should be nursed on their backs.

Infants should not be exposed to cigarette smoke either before birth or afterwards.

Infants should not be overwrapped or overheated, especially when they are feverish or unwell.

Since the launch of the Government's "Back to Sleep" campaign in 1991, the numbers of cot deaths in the post-neonatal period—from the end of the first month of life until the end of the first year—have halved from 1·25 per 1,000 live births in 1991 to 0·63 per 1,000 live births in 1992.

Cancer Services, London

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to announce her decision on the review of cancer services in London.

Dr. Mawhinney: No single decision rests on the results of the review of cancer specialty services in London. All the specialty reviews are due to be presented to Ministers, as independent advice, in June and will subsequently be published. Together with the review of special health authority research and the assessments of London's hospital sites, the specialty reviews will inform decisions on the future pattern of hospital services in the capital. The timetable is set out in "Making London Better", and any major changes in service provision would be subject to the normal statutory consultation process.

Food Hygiene

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the recent Food Safety Week initiative; and what action her Department is taking to promote food hygiene.

Mr. Sackville: The Food Safety Week initiative is very welcome. It will help everyone involved in buying and preparing food, whether for themselves or for others, to keep it safe. This reflects the Government's view that producers, manufacturers, caterers and consumers should all play their part in maintaining high standards of food hygiene.

The Government promote good food hygiene practice to the consumer through such publications as the "Food Safety" booklet in the "Food Sense" series, which incorporates the advice issued from the Chief Medical Officer on food hygiene measures, and the booklet "While you are Pregnant: Safe Eating and how to avoid infection from Food and Animals" targeted specifically at pregnant women. Copies of the publications are available in the Library.

Regulations under the Food Safety Act 1990 deal with food hygiene and the Government issue codes of practice to the authorities responsible for enforcing these regulations, encouraging them to focus on issues of public health and to apply the regulations consistently. Copies of the guidelines issued are available in the Library.

Government promotion of food hygiene to the food industry includes the publication of guidelines on temperature controls for certain foods and participation in food industry trade fairs to help provide food hygiene advice to industry. Copies of the guidelines will be placed in the Library. The Department is currently drawing up plans for a campaign of publicity and information to the food industry, local authorities and those representing consumer interests, in connection with the EC directive on the hygiene of foodstuffs, which is likely to be implemented in late 1994.

Repeat Prescriptions

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she takes to monitor the controls applied by family health services authorities to ensure that general practitioners fulfil their contractual obligation not to issue unnecessary repeat prescriptions.

Dr. Mawhinney: Guidance issued to regional health authorities for 1993-94—EL(92)74—emphasised that the clinical appropriateness of repeat prescribing was a key area to be addressed by general practitioners. Copies of the guidance are available in the Library. It is for regional health authorities to assess family health services authorities progress in monitoring these procedures.

Infant and Perinatal Mortality

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest information about the rates of infant and perinatal mortality in the North West Thames region.

Mr. Sackville: The infant and perinatal mortality rates for the North West Thames regional health authority for 1992[1] are given in the table.

	North West Thames RHA	Nationally
Infant mortality rate per 1,000 live births	5·5	6·6

Press and Public Relations

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total amount spent (a) by her Department and (b) within each regional health authority on press and public relations in 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Statute Law Database

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what progress is being made with the development of the statute law database; and what effect that work will have on the range of printed material published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office for the Statutory Publications Office.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Good progress is being made with the development of the database, which is due to provide immediate access to up-to-date statute law by April 1995. In order to meet this target, the Lord Chancellor has authorised the suspension of work done by the Statutory Publications Office in providing certain material for publication by Her Majesty's Stationery Office. Newly enacted Acts in the "Statutes in Force" series will continue to be available as at present, as will the annual volumes of public general acts and measures and of statutory instruments. However, work has been suspended on revised material for "Statutes in Force" and on other tables and indexes. The Lord Chancellor and Her Majesty's Stationery Office will keep under review the balance between printed material and information available from the database, having regard to the potential for improved facilities which the database is expected to provide.

Departmental Cash Limits

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what changes will be made to the cash limit and running costs limit of class IX, vote 1, administration of justice in England and Wales.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised estimate, the cash limit for class IX, vote 1 will be decreased by £1,389,000 from £796,918,000 to £795,529,000 and the running cost limit will be decreased by £1,389,000 from £431,979,000 to £430,590,000.

The revised estimate gives effect to a decrease of £1,466,000 in running costs, to allow for an increase in the external financing limit of the Land Registry Trading Fund.

It is also required to give effect to running cost transfers of £77,000 from other Government Departments in relation to the Lord Chancellor's responsibilities in respect of the magistrates courts.

Social Security Commissioners

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the average length of time taken by the office of the Social Security Commissioners to determine individual cases referred to them.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The average time is 5·5 months from the date a case is referred to a commissioner as ready for determination.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to visit Durham city in 1993 for the ninth centenary of Durham cathedral.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 12 March 1993, c. 752]: I had the pleasure of visiting the Durham cathedral ninth centenary celebrations on 5 June, coinciding with the 60th annual general meeting of the Friends of Durham Cathedral.

HOME DEPARTMENT

EC Home Affairs Ministers

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting of EC Home Affairs Ministers in Copenhagen on 2 and 3 June.

Mr. Michael Howard: The meeting of immigration and police Ministers took place in Copenhagen on 1 and 2 June.

Ministers considered progress in relation to the implementation of free movement of persons in accordance with article 8A of the treaty of Rome, and in pursuance of the conclusions of the European Council in Edinburgh, they considered the terms of their report to the European Council in Copenhagen.

Ministers took note of several papers submitted by the ad hoc group of immigration concerning the asylum work programme and preparation for the implementation of the Dublin convention on asylum, and the draft external frontiers convention. They approved a resolution on the reception of particularly vulnerable groups of people from the former Yugoslavia.

Ministers adopted a resolution on the harmonisation of national policies on family reunification, and a recommendation on checks on and the expulsion of third country nationals residing or working in member states without authorisation.

Discussion at the meeting of Trevi Ministers on 2 June focused on the establishment of EUROPOL and in particular the EUROPOL drugs unit. Ministers signed the ministerial agreement on the establishment of the EUROPOL drugs unit and invited the forthcoming European Council in Copenhagen to come to a decision on its location. They also discussed reports and proposals from working groups on matters including terrorism, organised attacks on foreigners, environmental crime, international motor cycle gangs, money laundering and co-operation with eastern Europe.

I am placing in the Library of the House copies of the recommendations and resolutions approved by the Immigration Ministers, together with the ministerial agreement on EUROPOL and the press communiqués issued following the meetings.

Firearms

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what restrictions exist on membership of gun clubs for persons who have had a licence to hold a gun withdrawn by the police.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Unless the club is one which my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary has approved under the terms of section 15 of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988, members of a rifle or pistol club require a firearm certificate in order to shoot. Revocation of their certificate by the police would effectively debar a person from membership. A rifle or pistol club which wishes to be approved by my right hon. and learned Friend so that its members may shoot without holding a firearm certificate must satisfy him that the members are of good character. Any club which had among its members a person who had had a firearm certificate revoked would be unlikely to satisfy this test.

Members of shot gun clubs should have a shot gun certificate. While individuals without such a certificate may, exceptionally, use a shot gun at a time and place approved by the local chief officer of police for shooting at artificial targets, this is not intended to provide opportunities for regular shooting by persons who do not possess a certificate. Before granting their approval to such shoots, chief officers must be satisfied that the arrangements involve no danger to the public.

Offender Support Organisations

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all those organisations funded by him which give support and assistance to (a) perpetrators of crime and (b) their families; and in each case state what funding from Government they have received in each of the last three financial years.

Mr. Maclean: The Home Office publishes each year a list of grants made by Government Departments to voluntary bodies. The list is broken down by subject area and includes a category comprising bodies working with offenders. The 1990-91 list has not yet been published, but I am placing in the Library, and sending the hon. Member, an extract setting out the Home Office's grants together with the index of categories. Full information about 1992-93 has not yet been collated, but I shall send the hon. Member the relevant extract as soon as it is available.

The main schemes for funding work with offenders are the probation supervision grants scheme and the probation accommodation grants scheme. The former provides for grants to voluntary bodies working in partnership with area probation services which run non-residential projects for offenders under supervision in the community. The latter scheme funds voluntary organisations which provide supervised accommodation for offenders. About 130 supervision projects and 5,000 bed spaces are funded under these schemes.

TRANSPORT

Trans-Pennine Crossing

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the Trans-Pennine Consortium about the proposed private crossing of the Pennines along the A628 corridor; and if he will make a statement on the criteria to be applied to the project.

Mr. Key: None. I would be willing to discuss any private sector proposal, but it would be considered in the light of current Government policy, including that on development in national parks.

EMPLOYMENT

Disabled People

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what further steps she intends to take to improve the employment prospects of disabled people.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State intends to announce as soon as possible the outcome of the review of the Employment Service's special schemes which will result in more effective arrangements for providing special employment help to disabled people. The Employment Service will also publish very shortly a document on the funding arrangements for sheltered employment with proposals which should increase the employment opportunities under the programme for severely disabled people.

Safety-at-Work Notices

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proposals her Department has to introduce regulations which would require safety-at-work notices to be in a particular colour.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Safety Signs Regulations 1980 require safety signs, which are defined as signs using shapes, symbols and colours to convey health and safety information, which are used at work, to conform to certain general rules regarding their shape and colour. These regulations implement EC directive 77/576/EEC.

The Health and Safety Commission is currently preparing proposals to implement EC directive 92/58/EEC on the minimum requirements for health and/or safety signs at work. This directive replaces 77/576/EEC. It maintains the same general rules concerning the colour and shape of signs of the earlier directive. However, it also specifically requires safety signs to be used wherever there are risks to health and safety which cannot be controlled adequately by other means. The directive has to be implemented by 24 June 1994.

Golf Safety

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the Health and Safety Executive expects to publish the guidance on golf course and range safety.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We expect that this document will be published in autumn 1993.

Passive Smoking

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what statutory provisions govern the extent to which or means by which a person can sue for damages or compensation for illness caused by passive smoking in the workplace; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 8 June 1993]: There are no statutory provisions expressly dealing with illnesses caused by passive smoking in the workplace. However,

—Regulation 6 of the Workplace (Health, Safety and Welfare) Regulations 1992, section 4 of the Factories Act 1961 and Section 7 of the Offices, Shops and Railway Premises Act 1963, which are in part repealed by the 1992 regulations, deal with the ventilation of workplaces; —Regulation 25(3) of the 1992 regulations deals with the provision of suitable arrangements in rest rooms and rest areas to protect non-smokers from discomfort caused by tobacco smoke.

Breaches of duty under these provisions are actionable in so far as they cause damage.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of the work force has been employed in (a) service industries, (b) the construction industry, (c) manufacturing industry and (d) agriculture in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The available information is for Great Britain and covers employees in employment and the self-employed. Employees in employment data can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library. Historical data for self-employed people is available in the Library on page 54 of Historical Supplement Number 3, issued with the June 1992 edition of the Employment Gazette. Recent estimates for the self-employed are as follows:

WALES

Agricultural Training Board

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to make a statement concerning the future funding arrangements for the agricultural training board in Wales; and what plans he has to increase funding levels.

Mr. John Redwood: The future funding arrangements for agricultural training in Great Britain were announced by the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 1 April 1993. My Department is having discussions with ATB-Land Base to establish whether additional support should be provided for agricultural training in Wales.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future composition and role of the Agricultural Training Board for Wales.

Mr. John Redwood: This is a matter for the directors of ATB-Land Base, who are considering it, in consultation with my Department.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current (a) budget and (b) staffing of the Agricultural Training Board for Wales.

Mr. Redwood: The direct administrative costs of the Agricultural Training Board-Land Base organisation in Wales in 1993-94 will amount to about £400,000 with additional overhead costs being borne centrally. There are currently 14 staff employed in Wales some of whom work on a part-time or short-term contract basis.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many farming apprenticeships are generated by the Agricultural Training Board for Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The agricultural apprenticeship scheme came to an end some years ago with the introduction of the youth training schemes. In Wales the board has continued to run a trainee of the year scheme, sponsored by National Westminster bank, and this draws on young people who are involved in YTS schemes, certificate courses and simply learning on the job interspersed with short courses.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to secure that the relationship between the Welsh Forum and the Agricultural Training Board in Wales is similar to the adopted arrangements in Scotland.

Mr. Redwood: Yes.

Nature Conservation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to introduce legislation to enhance the protection of wildlife and to give local authorities in Wales new powers to protect sites of nature conservation interest.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Pembroke (Mr. Ainger) on 26 May 1993, c. 553.

Newchurch Report

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a copy of the Newchurch report commissioned by the West Glamorgan health authority.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Copies of the report "West Glamorgan and Environs Service Review" published by West Glamorgan health authority and West Glamorgan family health services authority have been placed in the Library of the House. The role of the consultants, Messrs. Newchurch, was to provide independent advice to assist the authorities in compiling their report. The only element of the report that reflects the consultants' own judgment is chapter 13, the critique.

Diabetics

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 27 May, Official Report, column 711, how he assesses whether the target set in the St. Vincent declaration has been met without holding central information on the incidence of blindness among diabetics.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 17 May. However, the Welsh Office is committed to collecting information on a broad range of conditions, including diabetes.

Water Pollution

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of pollution levels of rivers and streams in Wales in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Water quality of rivers and streams in Wales is regularly monitored by the National Rivers Authority and the results of samples obtained are recorded on public registers maintained by the authority. The authority publishes comprehensive river quality surveys every five years, and pollution incident reports annually, copies of which are placed in the Library of the House.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Plutonium

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the current weight of plutonium, stored under safeguards, arising from foreign reactors (a) in spent fuel, (b) under reprocessing and (c) in separated form at Sellafield; what notifications to (i) the International Atomic Energy Agency and (ii) the European Atomic Energy Agency in regard to safeguards provision Her Majesty's Government have made regarding foreign origin plutonium at Sellafield; and if he will set out the responsibilities British Nuclear Fuels plc has to his Department and the respective international authorities in regard to safeguards.

Mr. Eggar: Details of the civil plutonium stocks, broken down into the categories specified by the hon. Member, are given in the plutonium figures published on 4 February 1993 and placed in the Library of the House. As operator of the Sellafield site, British Nuclear Fuels plc meets the requirements of the Euratom safeguards authorities by supplying, via my Department, inventory change reports, material balance reports and physical inventory listings as laid down in Safeguards Regulation 3227/76. These reports are forwarded by Euratom to the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what quantities of plutonium created in the Wylfa nuclear plant have been subject to application of export licences since 1975.

Mr. Eggar: I cannot answer for previous Administrations. Irradiated fuel from Britain's various civil Magnox reactors is reprocessed together and therefore the plutonium arising, whether in store or exported, is not linked to the specific power station in which it was created.

THORP

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what communications he has received from British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. regarding the future strategy for handling radioactive wastes from the thermal oxide reprocessing plant.

Mr. Eggar: I receive communications from British Nuclear Fuels plc on a wide range of issues, including the arrangements for the management of waste arising from reprocessing at Sellafield.

European Safeguards and Development Association

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 20 May, Official Report, column 288, what benefits and new information accrued to his Department as a result of the departmental representation at the European Safeguards and Development Association meeting; how many personnel from the Atomic Energy Authority were present at the meeting; and if he will make a statement on the costs incurred by the attendance at the meeting.

Mr. Eggar: The 15th symposium of the European Safeguards Research and Development Association included, inter alia, sessions on challenges and trends in modern safeguards, safeguards concepts and national programmes. These provided information important in the development of international safeguards policy, for which my Department has a responsibility. Other sessions dealt with technical aspects of safeguards implementation and technology. Full proceedings of the symposium will be published shortly.

In connection with the United Kingdom's programme of safeguards research and development my Department funded participation in the symposium of four AEA personnel and contributed to that of a fifth. The cost of this and departmental attendance was approximately £9,000. Attendance of other AEA personnel at the symposium is a matter for AEA.

Nuclear Decommissioning

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action he proposes to take following the National Audit Office report on decommissioning civil nuclear facilities.

Mr. Eggar: The National Audit Office report of 4 June is being considered by the Public Accounts Committee. The Department's accounting officer will be giving oral evidence to the Committee on 30 June. The Government will give a detailed response to the subsequent PAC report in the usual way through a Treasury minute.

Waste Incineration

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to examine the proposals put forward in the 17th report of the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution (Cm 2181) on the use of waste as fuel for energy in incineration plants.

Mr. Eggar: I welcome the 17th report of the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution (CM 2181) and note its view that incineration will prove to be the best practicable environmental option for municipal waste requiring disposal. Energy recovery is accepted as a legitimate means of recycling and I have already agreed with my hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside that we should re-examine the idea of setting waste-to-energy targets. The Government will be making a full response to the Royal Commission's report in due course.

Firework Injuries

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how long after 5 November estimated figures for the number of firework injuries are made available to his Department.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 27 May 1993]: Returns are usually received by the Consumer Safety Unit by the end of February the following year.

North Sea Licences

Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if consortia from the 14th licensing round who withdraw will be given the opportunity to resubmit their applications.

Mr. Eggar: No consortium has withdrawn as a whole from any application made under the 14th offshore licensing round.

Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what account his Department takes of withdrawal of consortia from one bid for North sea licences when considering granting approval to that consortia for other bids.

Mr. Eggar: No account will be taken of the withdrawal of a company from one or more of its sole or consortium applications under the 14th offshore licensing round when considering any other applications it has made.

Assisted Areas

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what weighting he will give to factors other than statistical measures of unemployment in determining the outcome of his Department's review of the assisted areas.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 27 May 1993]: The factors, other than statistical measures of unemployment, which will be taken into account in the review were set out in the review consultation document issued last year. A range of weights will be applied to these factors in determining the resulting status of the travel-to-work areas.

Inward Investing Firms

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many inward investing firms that had received financial assistance closed; how much grant they had received; and what was the total employment at the date of closure, in each region in each year since 1987-88.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 8 June 1993]: Since the beginning of April 1987 to date 651 projects by foreign owned companies supported by either regional selective assistance or regional development grant, were completed. £95·8 million was paid in grant in support of 18,269 jobs. A check on whether all these companies now continue to trade since their projects were completed would involve disproportionate cost.

Offshore Oil

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to make public the base line surveys carried out by oil companies in Cardigan Bay, St. George's channel and the Bristol channel prior to commencing exploratory drilling activities.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 7 June 1993]: Any surveys carried out by oil companies are provided to the Government in confidence. Any further dissemination is a matter for the companies.

Gas and Electricity

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to make regulations relating to price indications given in connection with the resale of gas and electricity.

Mr. Eggar: We have carefully considered this matter. There appears to be insufficient evidence to suggest that there is significant abuse. We therefore do not believe that there is a strong case for making regulations at this time. Nonetheless, we will keep the situation under review and we remain ready to reconsider the position at any time in the light of new evidence.

MV Braer

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish in full the details of all water samples analysed by Warren Spring Laboratory following the Braer disaster, together with the dates each sample was taken.

Mr. Norris: I have been asked to reply.

The Department of Transport's marine pollution control unit was the customer for the sampling work carried out by Warren Spring Laboratory during the Braer spill.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Domestic Energy (VAT)

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the impact on the retail prices index (a) during the 1994-95 financial year and (b) during the 1995-96 financial year, of increasing the rate of VAT on domestic fuel and power to 8 per cent. and 17·5 per cent. respectively.

Mr. Nelson: The extension of VAT to domestic fuel and power is estimated to add just under 0·4 per cent. to the retail prices index in 1994-95, and just over 0·4 per cent. further in 1995-96.

Pensions

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average public sector pension in payment and the average length of service of public sector pensioners in the current year.

Mr. Portillo: Information about average pensions and lengths of service of all public sector pensioners is not kept centrally. Estimates of the average pensions payable from the main public service schemes in the latest year for which information is readily available is as follows:

North Sea Oil and Gas

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the total amount of revenue which has accrued to the Treasury from the development of North sea (a) oil and (b) gas in each year since exploration and development began.

Mr. Dorrell: Revenues raised from United Kingdom oil and gas production are as follows:

[1] provisional estimate.

It is not possible to subdivide these amounts as to those derived from oil production and from gas production, or those from areas outside the North sea.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of projects which have specifically been funded by revenues from North sea oil and gas revenues in each year since tax revenues accrued from exploration and development.

Mr. Dorrell: None. It is not the policy of this Government, or any other in recent history, to hypothecate tax revenue to particular projects.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total corporation tax paid by the 25 largest United Kingdom companies, measured by turnover, in each of the last five years.

Mr. Dorrell: The 25 largest United Kingdom companies and company groups, based on the levels of turnover in their latest accounts, had corporation tax liabilities, including advance corporation tax, as follows in the years 1987 to 1991:

£ billion

Year	Number
1987	3·1
1988	3·0
1989	3·5
1991	3·3

Liabilities for 1992 are not available yet. Corporation tax liabilities exclude double tax relief for tax paid overseas.

Commemorative Coins

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans Her Majesty's Government have to issue new commemorative coins.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to approve the recommendation of my predecessor, the right hon. Member for Kingston-upon-Thames (Mr. Lamont), that a 50p coin be issued featuring a special design to commemorate the 50th anniversary next year of the D-Day landings of June 1944. It is intended that the coin should be available in 1994 for general circulation. There will also be collector versions in base and precious metal.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Cambodia

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Government policy in regard to the current activities of the Khmer Rouge in Cambodia; and what action will be taken to ensure that human rights initiatives are maintained in that country.

Mr. Goodlad: We deplore the Khmer Rouge's refusal to co-operate with the United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia (UNTAC) and the attacks on United Nations personnel and ethnic Vietnamese. We believe that the results of the election last month show that the vast majority of the Cambodian people reject the Khmer Rouge and its ways.

We co-sponsored the resolution at the United Nations Commission on Human Rights in Geneva in February requesting the United Nations Secretary General to appoint a special representative to co-ordinate the United Nation's human rights presence in Cambodia and mandating the centre for human rights to run a human rights programme in Cambodia after the withdrawal of UNTAC. The former President of the Philippines, Corazon Aquino, has been nominated special representative.

Israel

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Government have to ask the United Nations to intervene in the case of the 400 Palestinians expelled from Israel last December.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We voted for United Nations Security Council resolution (UNSCR) 799 which calls for the return of the deportees. We welcome the recent Israeli Government announcement that they have no plans to resort to deportations and their hope that compliance with SCR 799 can be achieved.

Nuclear Non-proliferation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the statement made by the head of the United Kingdom delegation to the first preparatory committee meeting for the fifth review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty held in New York in May.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) on 7 June, c. 86.

Cyprus

Mr. Deva: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will implement the recommendations of the Third report of the Select Committee on Foreign Affairs of Session 1986-87, HC 23, on Cyprus, in connection with contracts between northern Cyprus and the outside world.

Mr. Goodlad: Government policy on contracts remains as stated in the published observations on the report.

Paris (Visit)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what matters were discussed and decided during his most recent visit to Paris.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Discussion between the French Foreign Minister and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs concentrated on the situation in former Yugoslavia. They agreed to continue to work closely together for a solution.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the subjects discussed with the French Foreign Minister at the meeting in Paris on 1 June.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Discussion between the French Foreign Minister and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs concentrated on the situation in former Yugoslavia. They agreed to continue to work closely together for a solution.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will call for a specific investigation of alleged Croatian atrocities and war crimes in the former Yugoslavia at the next meeting of the United Nations Security Council.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The investigation into violations of international humanitarian law in the former Yugoslavia, by all parties to the conflict, is being conducted by the United Nations Commission of Experts established under United Nations Security Council resolution 780.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to support the principle of trials for suspected war criminals in the former Yugoslavia regardless of the ethnic origins of either the perpetrators or the alleged victims; and if he will make a statement on the United Nations Security Council's decision to set up an international tribunal to deal with such war crimes.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We fully support the UN Security Council's decision to establish an ad hoc tribunal to try those responsible for violations of international humanitarian law in the former Yugoslavia. The tribunal is mandated to bring alleged perpetrators from any of the parties to justice.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to support the reconvening of the London conference on the former Yugoslavia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There may be a case for reconvening the London conference at the right time. But, before going ahead, there would need to be prior agreement among all parties on objectives and a clear idea of the desired outcome. We would give particular weight to the views of the co-chairmen of the steering committee of the international conference on the former Yugoslavia, Lord Owen and Mr. Stoltenberg.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Croatian Government following the establishment of road blocks around the village of Kruscica; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None. We are investigating reports which suggest that Kruscica is being blocked.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with Lord Owen since the Foreign Ministers' meeting in Washington DC on 22 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs had an informal meeting with Lord Owen on 6 June and on 8 June attended the General Affairs Council in Luxembourg.

which Lord Owen briefed on his efforts to achieve a negotiated settlement in Bosnia. The normal arrangements will be made to inform the House of the outcome of the Council.

HEALTH

Doncaster Health Care Trust

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to receive the financial results of the Doncaster Health Care Trust for the year 1992-93; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Doncaster health care trust, in common with all other national health service trusts, is required to present its annual accounts to an annual public meeting no later than 30 September following the year-end accounts.

For the financial year 1992-93, the trust will need to hold this meeting on or before 30 September 1993.

North Western RHA

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on hospital closures in the North Western regional health authority.

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for North Western regional health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact Sir Bruce Martin, the RHA chairman, for details.

Equal Opportunities

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the equal opportunities guidance from the Department of Health management executive requires the completion of a job description prior to (a) advertising, (b) interviewing or (c) appointing persons to a post within a hospital or medical school.

Dr. Mawhinney: Departmental guidance EL(91)71, a copy of which is available in the Library, recommends that job descriptions should be issued to members of all hospital appointments committees to provide an objective basis for shortlisting and interviewing. Appointments to medical school posts are made by universities, which are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education.

Nurses

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current status of the consultation exercise being undertaken by the United Kingdom central council in conjunction with her Department concerning proposals to amend the criteria for community nurse status; and when she expects the United Kingdom central council to produce its final proposals.

Mr. Sackville: The United Kingdom central council's current consultation on its proposals for the reform of post registration education and practice finishes at the end of September. We would expect to receive its final proposals in the autumn.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the decision of the United Kindom central council not to recognise courses and seminars taken by practice nurses for accreditation towards community nurse status.

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for the United Kingdom central council as the body with statutory responsibility for the type and standard of nursing, midwifery and health visiting training.

Population and Mortality

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is (a) the population and (b) the standardised mortality rate for each health region.

Mr. Sackville: The information for 1991 (the latest year for which information is available) is shown in the table:

Population and standardised mortality ratios for England and Wales by regional health authority for 1991

	Provisional estimate of resident population at mid-1991 (thousands)	Standardised mortality ratio[1] 1991
England and Wales	50,954·8	100
England	48,068·4	100
Wales	2,886·4	101
Northern	3,084·2	113
Yorkshire	3,661·5	103
Trent	4,700·4	102
East Anglian	2,091·9	92
North West Thames	3,560·4	95
North East Thames	3,756·7	99
South East Thames	3,686·2	96
South West Thames	3,023·1	92
Wessex	2,983·0	91
Oxford	2,559·9	94
South Western	3,298·0	92
West Midlands	5,254·9	103
Mersey	2,407·5	108
North Western	4,000·7	111

[1] A standardised mortality ratio (SMR) is a single figure measure of mortality and is used to examine the relationship between: (1) the actual number of deaths in any given area and for any given period, and; in this instance (2) the number that would have been expected had that area experienced the sex and age specific mortality rates observed in England and Wales as a whole during that year. England and Wales in this instance is the 'standard' by which the other areas are measured and accordingly has an SMR of 100.

Health Authority Chairmen

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will discontinue the payments of salaries to health authority and trust chairmen and non-executive directors and replace them with payments for loss of earnings.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have no plans to do.

Triazolam

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the availability of products containing triazolam in the United Kingdom.

Dr. Mawhinney: All licences for triazolam products, including the brand named Halcion, to Upjohn Limited are being revoked on 9 June 1993. Triazolam products, which were available for the treatment of insomnia between 1978 and 1991, will therefore remain withdrawn.

On the advice of the Committee on Safety of Medicines, licences for Halcion were suspended in October 1991 on grounds of safety and all triazolam products were withdrawn from the market at that time, pending proceedings to revoke the licences.

The three bodies who have heard representations from Upjohn against the proposed revocation of the triazolam licences have given conflicting advice. The Committee on Safety of Medicines and the Medicines Commission were both concerned about the safety of triazolam and advised that the 0·25 mg product licences should be revoked but they differed as to whether or not the 0·125 mg licences should be revoked. In contrast, a panel of persons appointed by the licensing authority under the Medicines Act 1968 concluded that the benefits of both dose forms of triazolam outweigh the risks and appeared largely reassured by the revisions of the product information proposed by Upjohn.

The licensing authority has based its decision on consideration of the safety of triazolam. It has taken into account the views of each of the advisory bodies in reaching the decision and carefully considered the underlying reasons for the differences in the conclusions and advice received. The licensing authority has not accepted the conclusions of the panel and is not reassured of the safety of triazolam.

The licensing authority has examined measures alternative to revocation of the licences for triazolam but has concluded that restrictions in the dose, duration of treatment or availability of triazolam would not provide adequate safeguards against its hazards in normal use.

The first concern must be for patients. Because we are not satisfied as to the safety of triazolam, we believe it is right to be cautious.

In summary, the licensing authority has considered the basis of the panel's conclusions carefully but remains not reassured of the safety of the triazolam products, and considers that the risks of triazolam outweigh its benefits in normal use.

Copies of the report of the panel of persons appointed and detailed reasons for the licensing authority's decision are available in the Library.

NHS Estates

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the plans for the NHS Estates executive agency.

Mr. Sackville: We are pleased to report that the National Health Service Estates Management and Health Building Agency (NHS Estates) has had a successful year as an executive agency of this Department. We have agreed the agency's 1993-96 three-year corporate plan and the annual business plan. Targets for 1993-94 are to:

(i) Deliver all products and services on time and within cost.
(ii) Review with customers the quality of services provided, frequency and style depending on the nature of the contract terms.
(iii) increase revenues from the NHS and private sector to 67 per cent. of the cost of services purchased. (100 per cent. in 1995-96).
(iv) Increase income from United Kingdom consultancy services by 5 per cent. to £640,000.
(v) Untie £725,000 of Agency resources to the NHS (market test) and recover through sales. (Total £1·2 million now, £2·4 million 1995-96).
(vi) Achieve BS5750 quality assurance accreditation by 31 March 1994.
(vii) Explore the scope for market testing functions carried out on behalf of the NHS Management Executive by 30 September 1993.
(viii) Keep within agreed Public Expenditure Survey baselines and additionally make 4 per cent. (£400,000) efficiency savings on the running costs element.
(ix) Complete relocation of new headquarters to Leeds, saving £1·1 million per annum.
(x) Co-ordinate an induction and training programme for all staff (75 per cent. of agency staff are new personnel). This will be ongoing and will be incorporated in the appraisal programme.
(xi) Develop an overall measure of efficiency based on a cost weighted activity index by 1995-96.

National Health Service Staff

Mr. Roger Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement about her plans to publish new advice to staff in the national health service about relations with the public and the media.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Sir Duncan Nichol has now issued new advice, "Guidance for staff on relations with the public and the media", under cover of executive letter (93)51. The guidance has been issued to national health service employers, including regional, district and family health services authorities and national health service trusts. The guidance provides a framework within which local procedures can and should be developed to enable staff to raise legitimate concerns about health care issues in a responsible way. Copies of the executive letter and accompanying guidance have been placed in the Library.

National Health Service Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether NHS employees acting as non-executive directors of trusts may receive remuneration from both sources.

Dr. Mawhinney: National health service employees who are eligible to act as non-executive directors of trusts are entitled to receive the standard level of remuneration of £5,000 per annum, regardless of any other earnings.

National Health Service Employees (Cars)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her Department's policy about NHS employees being provided with foreign-produced cars.

Dr. Mawhinney: The decision as to which vehicle to provide to national health service employees required to travel regularly on official business is entirely for local management.

Ambulance Service

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the latest available response times for ambulances dealing with 999 calls in Bordon, Hampshire.

Mr. Sackville: Information on the Bordon area is not available centrally.

In 1991-92, the Hampshire ambulance service as a whole responded to 97 per cent. of emergency calls within the 19-minute patients charter standard.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received about providing paramedic cover in ambulances serving Bordon, Hampshire, in response to 999 calls.

Mr. Sackville: I have received one letter from my hon. Friend the Member for Hampshire, East (Mr. Mates).

Hampshire ambulance service, which includes the Bordon area, is well on the way to meeting the Government's target of having one paramedic on each front-line ambulance by the end of 1995.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Cost Increases

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what he estimates will be the increase in social security costs in the next year; and what is the breakdown of those costs between increases due to costs related to (a) unemployment and (b) other factors.

Mr. Scott: The estimated increase in social security expenditure from 1992-93 to 1993-94 is £6,152 million, of which £2,035 million is due to costs related to unemployment.

National Insurance

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many men and women paid both class 1 and class 2 national insurance contributions in 1991-92 and 1992-93; and what those figures represented as a percentage of the combined total of both classes of NI contributions in each year.

Mr. Hague: Figures for 1991-92 and 1992-93 are not yet available. The latest figures are in the table.

1990-91	Men	Women	Total
Mixed class 1/2[1] number of contributors	242,000	70,000	312,000
Percentage of total class 1 and 2	1·7 per cent.	0·7 per cent.	1·3 per cent.

[1] Figures show the number of contributors who paid at least one class 2 contribution and some class 1 contributions during the tax year. It is not possible to distinguish between those who were concurrently or consecutively employed and self-employed.

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to change the situation whereby a self-employed person who also works part-time for another employer is required to pay both class 1 and class 2 national insurance, regardless of the level of the combined incomes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: We have no such plans. The current arrangements ensure that where someone has earnings from more than one employment, regardless of the level of the combined incomes, the total contributions payable under class 1 and class 2 are subject to an annual maximum; currently £1,795·84.

If someone works for an employer and earns less than the lower earnings limit, currently £56 a week, no class 1 contribution is due. Similarly, self-employed people who expect their earnings to be less than a prescribed level, currently £3,140 a year, can apply to be excepted from paying class 2 contributions.

Where contributions from more than one occupation are payable, they are aggregated for the purposes of calculating entitlement to contributory benefits.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many awards of the higher rate mobility component of disability living allowance have been made to date under the severe mental impairment regulations which took effect from 1 April 1992.

Mr. Scott: As at 31 May 1993, 2,062 such awards had been recorded.

EDUCATION

School Transport

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when the current three-mile rule for free transport for children to schools was introduced; what plans he has to revise it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The present definition of "walking distance" —two miles for pupils aged five to seven, three miles for eight to sixteen-year-olds, measured by the nearest available route—was introduced in the 1944 Act. Section 39 deals with the grounds on which a parent is not guilty of an offence if his child fails to attend school regularly. It, along with other factors, is taken into account by local education authorities in considering, under section 55 of the 1944 Act, when free transport is necessary.

The Government have no plans to revise the present provisions.

Teacher Training

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proposals he has regarding the qualifications necessary before an individual may embark on a teacher training course; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has issued a consultation document today, containing proposals for reforming courses of initial training for primary teachers. The only major change proposed to entry qualifications is that there should be a new requirement that with effect from 1 September 1998 all entrants to such courses who were born on or after 1 September 1979 should have attained a standard equivalent to GCSE grade C in science. The qualifications for entry to initial training courses for secondary teachers were set out in DFE circular 9-92 and are unchanged. Copies of both documents have been placed in the Library.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the buildings currently owned or rented by his Department, together with (a) the estimated value, (b) the annual rent and (c) the annual maintenance cost of each building in the current financial year.

Mr. Mates: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Available information is detailed in Northern Ireland Estimates and United Kingdom Supply Estimates which are held in the Library.

Rates Arrears

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) business and (b) domestic rate payers are in arrears with their 1992-93 rates payments in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Atkins: Rate collection operational matters are the responsibility of Mr. David Gallagher, chief executive of the Rate Collection Agency. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. W. Gallagher to Mr. William O'Brien, dated 4 June 1993.

You recently asked a Parliamentary Question about how many business and domestic ratepayers were in arrears with their 1992-93 rates payments in Northern Ireland. As I am responsible for the Rate Collection Agency, the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to reply.

At 31 March 1993 there were 666,026 rated properties in Northern Ireland of which 171,237 were owned by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive which collects rates together with rent fortnightly from its tenants and pays the rates in bulk to the Rate Collection Agency. Of the remaining properties 5,852 non-domestic and 23,729 domestic had arrears outstanding at 31 March 1993.

Should you require any further information please let me know.

Fire Services

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the recommended complement of staff for the Northern Ireland fire brigade in each of the last five years.

Mr. Atkins: The recommended complements are as follows:

	Whole-time	Retained	Control	Others
1988	731	803	62	228
1989	733	980	62	229½
1990	733	980	59	218½
1992	847	980	59	222½

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many incidents the Northern Ireland fire brigade has responded to in each of the last five years.

Mr. Atkins: The number of incidents was as follows:

	Number
1988	22,970
1989	28,109
1990	25,099

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the operation of the pay formula as it applies to the Northern Ireland fire brigade and the impact of the 1·5 per cent. pay increase; and what steps are proposed to reinstate the departure in the current year from the agreed pay formula.

Mr. Atkins: The Government are not a party to the firefighters' pay agreement and have no role in the negotiation of firefighters' pay, which is negotiated on a United Kingdom basis within the National Joint Council for Local Authorities' Fire Brigades, on which employers' and employees' organisations are represented. The current pay agreement provides for annual increases in firefighters' pay to be linked to the upper quartile of movements in pay for skilled manual workers. However, the Government have made it clear that the fire service employers are expected to comply with the policy on public sector pay, that any increases in the 1993 pay round should not exceed 1·5 per cent. Resources for the Fire Authority for Northern Ireland for the 1993-94 financial year have been determined accordingly. It is too early to speculate about the operation of the fire service pay formula after the current year.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to how many incidents retained firemen responded to with below the Home Office recommended level of crews in each of the last five years.

Mr. Atkins: I am advised by the Chief Fire Officer that accurate figures on the number of incidents retained firemen responded to with below the Home Office recommended level of crews are not available on a Province-wide basis. However, I am assure that the number of such incidents in each of the last five years was negligible.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish details of manning levels in the Northern Ireland fire brigade over each of the last five years.

Mr. Atkins: The information is as follows:

	Whole-time pumping appliances	Retained pumping appliances	Emergency tenders	Aerial appliance	Foam tenders	Emergency support units
1988	5	6	5	3	2	2
1989	5	6	5	3	2	2
1990	5	6	5	3	2	2
1991	5	6	5	3	2	2
1992	5	6	5	3	2	2

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many fire stations have been upgraded in each of the last five years; and if he will list those stations which have been recommended for upgrading but have still to be upgraded.

Mr. Atkins: Ballymena fire station was upgraded in 1990, Bangor in 1991 and Lisburn in 1992.

The following stations recommended for upgrading have still to be upgraded.

Pensions Payments

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many future pensioners in Northern Ireland have received forms requesting information as to the payment of retirement pensions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: I have been asked to reply.

The administration of retirement pensions is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. William O'Brien, dated 8 June 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how many future pensioners in Northern Ireland have received forms requesting information as to the payment of retirement pension.

In any one year the Benefits Agency issues automatically to addresses in Northern Ireland, on behalf of the Social Security Agency in Northern Ireland, about 21,000 invitations to claim retirement pension for people approaching pension age (65 for a man and 60 for a woman). The claim form asks the person to choose the method by which they wish their pension to be paid. This can be either directly into a bank or building society account every 4 or 13 weeks or by weekly order book at a post office.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library. I am copying this letter to Mr. Alec Wylie the Chief Executive of the Social Security Agency in Northern Ireland.

ENVIRONMENT

Waste Incineration

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he received the recent report on incineration of waste by the Royal Commission on environmental pollution, Cm 2181; and what response he plans to make to the report.

Mr. Yeo: My Department received the report on the incineration of waste by the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution on 20 May 1993. The Government will publish their formal response to the report in due course.

Local Government Finance

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has (a) for each local authority, (b) for each region and (c) for England for the amount and proportion of local authority income coming from (i) council tax, (ii) national non-domestic rate, (iii) transitional relief and (iv) council tax benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: I have today placed in the Library figures for the amount of national non-domestic rate which authorities are entitled to receive from the non-domestic rate pool in 1993-94, the amounts in respect of council tax, including transitional relief and council tax benefit, which they have budgeted to receive, and the percentages of each authority's budget requirement which they represent. A summary for each region and England is given in the table.

Transitional relief grant and council tax benefit grant are paid only to billing authorities and together with receipts of council taxes from council taxpayers constitute the amounts in respect of council taxes which are payable to billing authorities and major precepting authorities. It is not possible to say what proportion of an individual authority's income from council taxes is made up of any particular component.

Region	Budget requirement (including parish precepts) £ million	Income from non-domestic rate £ million	Per cent.	Council tax requirement £ million	Per cent.
The South-West	3,180	1,140	36	900	28
West Midlands	4,020	1,260	31	910	23
Yorkshire	3,800	1,190	31	850	22
North-west	5,560	1,650	30	1,280	23
The North	2,090	620	30	470	23
East Midlands	2,850	970	34	680	24
East Anglia	1,370	500	37	340	25
London	7,270	1,670	23	1,460	20
The South-East	7,390	2,580	35	2,050	28
England	37,530	11,580	31	8,930	24

Notes:
The budget requirement is the amount authorities have budgeted to receive from revenue support grant, non-domestic rates and council taxes.
The income from non-domestic rates is the amount of redistributed non-domestic rates payable to an authority's general fund.
The council tax requirement either (a) includes income required to cover any estimated deficit on the collection fund brought forward from 1992-93 or (b) excludes income met from an estimated surplus on the collection fund brought forward from 1992-93.

THORP

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer by the President of the Board of Trade of 25 May, Official Report, column 488, if he will make a statement on the current timing of the decision in respect of revised discharge authorisations in connection with the commissioning of the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield.

Mr. Yeo: We have received the report of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and the radiological inspectorate of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on their public consultation on the draft authorisations for the Sellafield site including THORP. My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food are currently considering it.

Nature Conservation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce new powers for local authorities to protect sites of nature conservation interest.

Mr. Yeo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 7 June to the hon. Member for Pembroke (Mr. Ainger), Official Report, column 101.

Radioactive Discharge Limits, Sellafield

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has recieved on resolutions submitted to the Paris Commission on sea dumping on Sellafield's radioactive discharge limits for its annual meeting in Berlin on 14 to 19 June.

Mr. Yeo: As part of the normal distribution of papers for the Berlin meeting, my officials have received copies of recommendations tabled by the Danish and Irish delegations. Both recommendations make reference to discharges from Sellafield.

Gulf Ecology

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) of 19 May, Official Report, column 182, if he will place in the Library a copy of the United Nations environmental programme on ecology in the Gulf.

Mr. Yeo: A copy has been placed in the Library.

"Today" Interview

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a copy of his interview on BBC Radio Four's "Today" programme on 1 June.

Mr. Gummer: No.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what regulations govern the direct disposal of solid radioactive wastes to the sewage system from university laboratories; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: Disposals of any radioactive waste to the sewage system must be authorised under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960, unless the level of radioactivity is so low that the waste is covered by one of the exemptions to the Act. Authorisations are granted subject to such limitations and conditions as the regulator, the chief inspector of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, thinks fit.

Self-build Housing

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what proportion of the United Kingdom housing budget allocated to self-build housing was taken up in percentage and money terms in the latest year for which figures are available;

(2) what proportion of the United Kingdom housing budget was allocated to self-build housing in the United Kingdom in percentage and money terms; and what percentage was taken up in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 27 May 1993]: Within the United Kingdom housing budget there is no specific allocation made to support self-build housing. Therefore the figures requested are unavailable.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps are taken to ensure that the money allocated for self-build housing is available both to individual and to self-build groups.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 27 May 1993]: In England the Housing Corporation has a statutory function to promote and assist the development of self-build groups and help to arrange advantageous private finance for these groups. The corporation may also pay Housing Association Grant to self-build groups who are registered housing associations.

Office of Water Services

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with OFWAT as to the cost of water in the next financial year; and what are the criteria by which he will decide on the level of 'K' in OFWAT's price fixing.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 7 June 1993]: My right hon. Friend's predecessors have from time to time had discussions with the Director General of Water Services. Under the Water Industry Act 1991 the Director General has the duty to set limits to the prices companies may charge: my right hon. Friend has no powers to interfere in any way with the exercise of that responsibility.

The 1993-94 price limits have already been settled and are being implemented by the companies. The companies' licences set out the criteria for the scope of variations in price limits between periodic reviews. The Director General has published a number of consultation papers concerning his approach to setting price limits at the first full review in 1994, which will take effect from 1 April 1995. Under section 2 of the Water Industry Act 1991, the Director General must enable companies to obtain the funds to finance their duties while protecting the interests of their customers.

Rural Planning Permissions

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to repeal the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 to ensure that more consideration is given to environmental concerns during the consideration of planning permission by rural local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 7 June 1993]: Town and Country Planning legislation together with the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 ensures that full account is taken of the likely effects that development proposals would have on the environment. Guidance to local authorities and others on how the conservation of our natural heritage is to be reflected in land use planning and development control is set out in circulars 27/87 and 1/92. This will be updated in a planning policy guidance note, to be issued shortly. Nature conservation issues are frequently a material consideration in determining planning applications, especially those in or near sites of special scientific interest.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the cost to date and the expected future cost of his Department's market-testing programme; how many staff are engaged full time in work relating to market testing; which firms of consultants have been used in connection with the market-testing programme; and how they were selected.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 7 June 1993]: The total cost of the programme to date has amounted to approximately £1,329,000. It is not possible to estimate the future cost of my Department's programme.

There are 11 staff in my Department directly assigned to the market-testing programme.

My Department has used the following consultancy services to assist in the development of the market testing process since November 1991.

Dr. Alan Kemp
Shreeveport
Simon Thorpe Consultancy
Hoskyns Group plc
Prime Strategy Consultants
Symonds
Capita Management Consultancy
Coopers and Lybrand
Smith and Williamson
Mr. P. Dworkin
Touche Ross
Peter Burholt Consultancy Ltd.
Lane Whittlesey Business Consultants
Mouncy and Partners

The consultants were selected using the normal departmental competitive tendering procedures, with the exception of Dr. Kemp, who was at the time already employed as a special adviser to the then Secretary of State.

National Rivers Authority

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce the merging of the National Rivers Authority with Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 8 June 1993]: The 1992 Conservative manifesto committed the Government to bringing together the key regulatory functions of the National Rivers Authority and Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, and waste regulation functions of local authorities, in a new Environment Agency. The required legislation will be introduced as soon as the necessary parliamentary time can be found.

EC Environment Council

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he plans to put forward at the EC Environment Council meeting in Aarhus on 14 to 16 May.

Mr. Yeo: The meeting in Aarhus, at which my hon. Friend the then Minister for the Environment and Countryside represented the United Kingdom, was an informal Council. Ministers discussed three topics proposed by the Danish Presidency: transport and the environment, the review of the structural funds regulations, and employment and the environment. No formal conclusions were adopted nor decisions taken.

SCOTLAND

River Tay (Floods)

13. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the flood problems of the River Tay; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: More than 40 representations about flooding in Tayside have been received since the flooding in January. Most advocated that some form of flood management should be developed.

I am pleased to say that Tayside regional council has commissioned a comprehensive study of the Tay catchment which will enable flood management, warning and defence strategies to be assessed against criteria of cost and effectiveness.

For our part, the Government have agreed to meet 50 per cent. of eligible fees and associated expenses for the study up to a maximum contribution of £110,000.

Local Government

1. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how he intends to announce the future of local councils in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: I intend to announce my decisions on the new structure of local government in Scotland in a White Paper to be published before the summer recess.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his plans for the role of community councils in the structure of local government in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 7 June 1993]: Community councils can play a very effective representational role on behalf of their local communities. The second consultation paper "Shaping the New Councils" invited comments on the role of community councils. We are still considering the views expressed and any proposals to change the existing role of community councils will be announced later.

Construction Industry

16. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people are currently employed in the construction industry in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: The latest provisional estimates indicate that 114,500 people were employed in the Scottish construction industry in December 1992.

Training

17. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairmen of the enterprise companies in Scotland to discuss the funding of training programmes.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend and I frequently meet chairmen of local enterprise companies to discuss a range of economic development and training issues.

18. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairman of Scottish Enterprise to discuss training.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend and I met the chairman of Scottish Enterprise on 26 April 1993 to discuss a range of issues including training.

36. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the employment training programme in Kilmarnock and Loudoun and Ayrshire.

Mr. Stewart: This is a matter for Scottish Enterprise, which has a statutory duty to keep under continuous review the suitability and adequacy of such training where its provision is delegated to other bodies, such as local enterprise companies and their agents. Employment training was replaced by training for work on 1 April 1993.

Quangos

19. Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of people he appoints to quangos and the total remuneration given to them.

Mr. Lang: As at 1 September last year, I made just under 4,000 public appointments. The majority of them are not paid. For those where a salary is paid, the total amount of remuneration, at the same date, was £2·1 million. This figure does not include a number of appointments which are fee paid and where, of course, the amount of fee depends on the days of attendance.

Graduates' Employment

20. Dr. Bray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of graduates in Scotland gained a permanent home employment by 31 December after graduation in 1988-89 and in 1990-91.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Fifty-seven per cent. of those graduating in 1988-89 were in or had firm offers of employment by 31 December 1989. Of those graduating in 1990-91, 46 per cent. were in or had offers of such employment by 31 December 1991.

Gross Domestic Product

21. Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the gross domestic product per head in Scotland between the years 1981 and 1990.

Mr. Stewart: In current prices, GDP per head in Scotland in 1981 was £3,542. In 1990, it was £7,747. After allowing for inflation, this represents a real increase of 30 per cent.

Ferry Services

22. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on ferry services to the Scottish islands.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my right hon. Friend earlier today to the hon. Member for Renfrew, West and Inverclyde (Mr. Graham).

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements have been made to engage consultants to look at the privatisation of Caledonian MacBrayne; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 7 June 1993]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my right hon. Friend on 26 May, Official Report, column 589, to the hon. Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Robertson).

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy on the development of a roll-on roll-off ferry service between Scotland and northern Europe.

Mr. Stewart: The development of any service, and the choice of location of the relevant ferry port, must be a matter for the commercial judgment of the potential operator. As the hon. Member is aware from my letter to him of 8 January this year, Scottish Enterprise has commissioned consultants to estimate the financial, economic and environmental impacts of developing new east coast port facilities, in response to potential market interest. The final report of the consultants is, I understand, still awaited by Scottish Enterprise.

Defence Procurement

23. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the effect of defence procurement on Scottish industry.

Mr. Stewart: The Ministry of Defence's expenditure in Scotland on equipment in 1990-91 totalled £600 million, which was 8 per cent. of the MOD's total expenditure on equipment within the United Kingdom. It is estimated that MOD's equipment procurement accounted for 1·4 per cent. of Scottish GDP in 1990.

Associated employment in Scotland within contractors supplying MOD direct in 1990-91 was 13,000, 10 per cent. of the United Kingdom total and approximately 0·5 per cent. of the Scottish work force.

Gipsies, Cambuslang

24. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action was taken by his Department in connection with the representations made by the hon. Member for Congleton on Monday 10 May relating to gipsy encampments at the Cambuslang industrial estate.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office contacted the Crown Office, which confirmed that the police and the relevant local authority were aware of the situation. I understand that the level of activity on the industrial estate was not sufficient to warrant further action at that time.

Local Services

25. Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of public bodies to discuss the provision of local services.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend last met the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities on 18 January 1993.

Forestry Commission

26. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has held on the future of the Forestry Commission.

Sir Hector Monro: My right hon. Friend regularly meets individuals and organisations with interests in forestry to hear their views and discuss matters of mutual concern. In these discussions, issues such as the future of the Forestry Commission naturally arise.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether primary legislation is required if a decision is made to privatise the Forestry Commission in whole or part.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 26 May 1993]: Ministers have come to no decisions about the effectiveness of the current incentives for forestry investment or the ownership and management of Forestry Commission woodlands, which are the subject of review. Only once they have done so would they consider any consequent requirements for primary legislation.

National Environmental Agency

27. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes in responsibility or statutory duties he envisages for local authorities following the setting up of a national environmental agency in Scotland.

Sir Hector Monro: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Kincardine and Deeside (Mr. Kynoch) by my right hon. Friend on 25 February, Official Report, column 722.

We plan to transfer to the proposed Scottish environment protection agency the existing district and islands councils' responsibilities in Scotland for waste regulation and local authority air pollution control under part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the islands councils' responsibilities as river purification authorities.

Southern General Hospital, Edinburgh

28. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the expected starting date and completion date of the new Southern general hospital in Edinburgh.

Mr. Stewart: Policy on the provision of a new teaching hospital in Edinburgh is a matter primarily for Lothian health board, subject to public consultation and the approval of my right hon. and noble Friend. I understand that Lothian health board plans to issue proposals for public consultation in due course.

Road Haulage

29. Mrs. Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what safety restrictions he has laid down for movements of very large loads and convoys by road in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Secretary of State for Scotland lays down no safety restrictions for the movement of very large loads and convoys. In the United Kingdom, the Secretary of State for Transport is responsible for authorising abnormal indivisible load movements.

Water

30. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he now expects to make a statement on his policy on the future of the water industry in Scotland.

Sir Hector Monro: A decision on the future structure of water and sewerage services will be made when responses to the consultation have been fully considered. My right hon. Friend will make a statement in due course.

32. Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many of the submissions he has received to his consultation document on water and sewerage have been from the 10 regional water companies in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 22 March, Official Report, column 474.

Damp Housing

31. Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he intends to take to measure and reduce the health risk to children living in damp public sector housing.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In preparing their next housing plans and housing capital programmes, due by the end of August, all local housing authorities have been asked to set out strategies and targets for tackling housing in their areas subject to condensation and dampness.

Voluntary Organisations (Grants)

33. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the value of grants from his Department to voluntary organisations in each of the past three years, at constant prices.

Mr. Stewart: Grants paid to voluntary organisations by the Scottish Office in each of the last three years at 1991-92 prices, were £20·2 million in 1990-91, £20·7 million in 1991-92 and £24·7 million in 1992-93.

Stobhill Hospital, Glasgow

34. Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will next meet the Greater Glasgow health board to discuss the future of Stobhill hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no immediate plans to meet with Greater Glasgow health board to discuss Stobhill or any other hospital that is subject to the board's comprehensive review of acute and maternity services. He looks forward to receiving the board's detailed proposals in due course.

Angling

35. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the significance of the field sport of angling to the economy of Scotland; and what measures he is taking to encourage the sport.

Sir Hector Monro: I have made no assessment of the significance of the field sport of angling to the economy of Scotland. However, the governing body for angling received grants totalling over £30,000 from the Scottish Sports Council in 1991-92. In common with all other sports, the governing body has full autonomy and the responsibility for increasing participation and improving standards of angling in Scotland.

Homelessness

37. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his plans to deal with the homeless in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Local authorities have the statutory responsibility for dealing with homelessness. Their capital allocations this year total £513 million and homelessness is one of the three key issues which housing authorities have been asked to address in their housing strategies and output targets. In addition, the Government have made available extra capital allocations of almost £23 million earmarked for homelessness projects over the period 1991 to 1993.

Labour Statistics

38. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of the work force in each of Scotland's new towns is currently unemployed.

Mr. Stewart: Statistics for the area of each new town are not maintained by the Department of Employment. The following percentages have been provided by the development corporation:

	per cent.
Cumbernauld	9·7
East Kilbride	8·9
Glenrothes	11·7
Irvine	13·3
Livingston	9·0

Education Spending

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much is spent on average per pupil at (a) primary school level and (b) secondary school level; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In 1991-92, the latest year for which figures are available, net current expenditure per pupil in Scottish primary schools was £1,633. The comparable figure for secondary schools was £2,834. These figures do not include the cost of home to school transport, school meals, education authority central administration and loan charges.

Council Tax

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the average council tax payment due in each district council area in Scotland in the current financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 7 June 1993]: The table gives, for each district and islands council area in Scotland, estimates of the average amount of council tax billed per inhabitable dwelling in 1993-94. The amount billed includes district and region council taxes and excludes council water charges. In calculating the average, no allowance has been made for the effects of council tax transitional relief and council tax benefit in reducing the amounts that have to be paid.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what information he has concerning council tax appeals being made in each local authority area for the latest date for which information is available;

(2) how many proposals for changes in council tax banding have so far been made to valuation offices in each local authority; and what proportion of households this represents.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 8 June 1993]: This information is not yet available centrally.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his Department's forecast of the number of people in Scotland who were previously exempted from paying the community charge on the grounds of severe mental impairment and who (a) are liable for the water charge element of the council tax, (b) are liable for all or part of the property element of the council tax or (c) will be in receipt of 100 per cent. council tax benefit for the property element.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 May 1993]: Such estimates are not available. My Department does not make estimates concerning the personal circumstances of persons who may be liable to pay the council tax.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his Department's assessment of the number of people in Scotland who (a) will be in receipt of 100 per cent. council tax benefit for the property element of the tax and (b) will be exempt from payment of the personal element of the council tax on the grounds of severe mental impairment.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 May 1993]: My Department does not make any assessment of the circumstances of people entitled to council tax benefit.

Councillors (Payments)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to increase the level of payments to elected members of local authorities for (a) attendance, (b) special responsibility, (c) travelling and (d) subsistence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 7 June 1993]: All the payments to members of local authorities by way of allowances and travel and subsistence were increased earlier this year. The comments received from the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities on the first year's operation of the new system introduced in April 1991 are being considered in the wider context of local government reform and the review of internal management.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were waiting for urgent hospital treatment in each major specialty at 31 March in each regional health authority.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 7 June 1993]: Available information about waiting lists and waiting times is published quarterly in the "NHS Patient Treatment and Waiting Time Bulletin", copies of which are in the Library of the House. The information collected does not classify patients according to degree of urgency: this is for individual clinicians' judgment. We do know, however, that about half of all admissions are immediate, and that about half of all waiting list admissions are within four weeks.

Public Appointments

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list each occasion since 1987 when his Department has (a) appointed and (b) successfully nominated Michael Hirst to non-departmental public bodies; which such positions he currently holds; what salary, honoraria or allowances are attached to these positions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 7 June 1993]: Sir Michael Hirst was appointed to the board of governors of the Queen's college, Glasgow in 1989 for the period to 31 December 1992. The position carried no salary or fee. The college is now part of Glasgow Caledonian university and is no longer a non-departmental public body. Sir Michael has not held and does not currently hold any other appointment to a non-departmental public body in Scotland and my Department has not nominated him for membership of any other non-departmental public body.

Nurse Education

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he announced the proposal to review nurse education; what date he set at that time for announcing the results of this review; and when he now expects to make this announcement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 27 May 1993]: Following the announcement by my right hon. Friend on 24 July 1992 that NHS trust status was no longer an option for colleges of nursing and midwifery currently managed by health boards, general managers were advised on 24 September 1992 that they should continue meanwhile to be responsible for the management of the colleges. At that time the Home and Health and Education Departments were instructed to under a review. Its aim was to assess the educational and financial implications of the broad range of options for the future management and resourcing of nursing and midwifery education in Scotland, with particular reference to the role of the NHS and further and higher education. While, at that time, it was hoped to reach firmer conclusions by the end of the financial year 1992-93, complex issues have emerged which require very careful consideration and in-depth scrutiny. The review is almost complete. Once the implications of the various options have been considered, my right hon. Friend will advise health boards of his decisions.

Cockles

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what changes in legislation he envisages to extend the ban on cockle fishing by boat to land-based cockle tractors;

(2) what representations he has received on extending the ban on cockle fishing by boat to land-based cockle tractors; and how many were satisfied and unsatisfied with present arrangements.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 7 June 1993]: Cockle dredging by boat is subject to control under the provisions of the Inshore Fishing (Scotland) Act 1984. This legislation is kept under review. A number of representations have been received suggesting that similar powers be taken to control land-based cockle tractors. However, there are no current proposals to amend this legislation.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the operation of land-based cockle tractors during the ban on cockle fishing by boat; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 7 June 1993]: I am aware that land-based dredging takes place and of the strong local feelings to which this can give rise. Where it is judged to be a public nuisance, local authorities can promote byelaws to control or prohibit it.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what powers are available to him to control the dredging of cockle beds by land-based cockle tractors during the ban on cockle fishing by boat; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he intends to delay the resumption of cockle fishing by boat in order to allow sufficient recuperation time for cockle beds which have been dredged by land-based cockle tractors; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what further steps he intends to take to enforce a total ban on cockling; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what steps he is taking to keep the total ban on cockle fishing by boat under review; and what plans he has to extend the ban to land-based cockle tractors.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 7 June 1993]: The Inshore Fishing (Scotland) Act 1984 gives powers to control fishing activities from vessels in Scottish inshore waters. However, these powers do not extend to land-based activities. If land-based dredging activities are judged to be a public nuisance, local authorities can promote byelaws to control or prohibit them.

There is no evidence that a total ban on cockle fishing from vessels in Scottish inshore waters is justified and none is in force. Local management measures are introduced as and when circumstances require them. Such measures are reviewed regularly, taking account of scientific assessments of stock levels and the views of interested parties.

Housing

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has concerning the building of homes by housing associations in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole over the next three years; and what proportion of these dwellings is to be let to those people with (i) physical disabilities and (ii) learning disabilities.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 8 June 1993]: This information is not collected centrally. The assessment and funding of development proposals by housing associations are matters for Scottish Homes and private lenders and the hon. Member may wish to pursue the matter with Scottish Homes.

Agricultural Research and Development

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what funds, in cash and constant prices, were allocated to the Scottish Department of Agriculture, research and development budgets for each year since 1978; what is the projected spending for 1993-94 and 1994-95; and what proportion of the departmental budget for research and development is accounted for by (a) the Central Science Laboratory, (b) the Veterinary Medicines Directorate, (c) the Central Veterinary Laboratory and (d) ADAS.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 8 June 1993]: Successive volumes of the Cabinet Office "Annual Review of Government Funded Research and Development" contain information on outturn and planned expenditure by the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department on agriculture and fisheries research and development from 1977-78 onwards. Relevant figures extracted from the review are shown in the table. It should be noted that, for 1981-82 and later years, the figures are presented on a full economic cost basis.

	Cash £ million	Constant price[1] £ million
1977-78	18·2	55·3

The Central Veterinary Laboratory currently holds a subcontract—value £7,800—for one of the Department's commissioned agricultural research and development projects.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were employed, for each year since 1978, directly by the Scottish Department of Agriculture on research and development programmes related to agriculture, fisheries and food; and how many people were employed, for each year since 1978, on Scottish Department of Agriculture research and development programmes commissioned from outside.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 8 June 1993]: It is not possible to answer the first part of the question directly because the amount of time spent by relevant Scottish Office staff on research and development (R and D) programmes in the areas in question varies from time to time and from individual to individual.

However, for the period since 1981 the total staff numbers at the Department's Fisheries Research Services (FRS), at which the most substantial relevant R and D effort is carried out, have been as follows:

	Number
1981	248·5
1982	252·0
1983	256·0
1984	259·0
1985	257·5
1986	252·5
1987	254·5
1988	252·5
1989	255·0
1990	256·0
1991	252·0
1992	254·5
1993	256·0

(Figures for earlier years cannot be readily extracted).

Less than 10 per cent. of the overall effort of the Scottish Agricultural Science Agency (SASA)—whose staff are also directly employed by the Department—are on R and D and no members of staff are exclusively engaged on it.

Most of the non-R and D activities at FRS and SASA consist of monitoring, and the provision of scientific and technological advice and information to Government and other bodies.

Almost all of the Department's programme of agricultural and related R and D is carried out at the Scottish agricultural research institutes (SARIs), the Scottish agricultural college (SAC), and the royal botanic garden, Edinburgh (RBGE) which employ their own staff. Total staff numbers in the SARIs for the period from 1978 are as follows:

	Number
1978	1,397
1979	1,376
1980	1,345
1981	1,331
1982	1,338
1983	1,323
1984	1,328
1985	1,299
1986	1,390
1987	1,275
1988	1,176
1989	1,100
1990	1,179
1991	1,231
1992	1,270
1993	1,275

The number of SAC and RBGE staff wholly or partly engaged in research and development for the years 1989 to 1993 is as follows:

Year	SAC	RBGE
1989	301	46
1990	299	47
1991	270	48
1992	272	46·5
1993	270	47

Information on earlier years is not held centrally.

DEFENCE

French Security Services

Mr Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has made to his French counterpart on activities by the French security services in relation to British defence manufacturers.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave on 7 June, Official Report, column 12.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evaluation exercises were carried out to test the fire-resistant properties of the truck cargo heavy duty vehicles used by his Department.

Mr. Aitken: The truck cargo heavy duty vehicles are constructed from proprietary materials that have fire resistant properties. An engineering assessment has been undertaken which shows that the vehicles will resist fires to which they may be subjected.

Defence Equipment Exhibition

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the companies exhibiting products or services at this year's Royal Navy and British Army equipment exhibition; and how many of these companies are from outside the United Kingdom.

Mr. Aitken: The list of exhibitors has not yet been finalised, but is expected to number some 150.

Bosnia-Herzegovina

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what effects the road blocks established by Croatian forces around the village of Krusica have had on the assistance being given by the Prince of Wales's Own Regiment to the provision of humanitarian aid to the civilian population in that area of Bosnia-Herzegovina; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: A well-organised group of Bosnian Croat women have established a road block on the only road into the village of Kruscica, and are preventing Prince of Wales's Own Regiment and the UNHCR from crossing it to deliver aid. British forces on the ground are monitoring the situation within the village of Kruscica closely and they assess that the population of Kruscica, who are resourceful and resolute, are surviving well; some aid does reach the village via mountain tracks and as crops near harvest more food will become available. British forces also assess that it would be unwise to try to use force to cross the road block because it would probably destabilise an already volatile situation.

EDUCATION

Key Stage 3

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the weight and the number of packages involved in delivering the key stage 3 material to the average secondary school in England; and what assessment he has made of the capacity of such schools to store this material.

Mr. Robin Squire: The weight and number of packages of the tests delivered will depend on the size of the school. A typical school would need approximately 1,900 test papers and associated mark schemes in English, maths, science, and technology for all their pupils undergoing key stage 3 testing. This would weigh approximately 99 kgs.

As they were delivered shortly before the start of the tests, storage of the papers should not pose a long-term problem.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what percentage of schools conducted key stage 3 tests on 7 June; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what percentage of 14-year-olds sat key stage 3 tests on 7 June; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Patten: Precise information is not yet available. Parents and the public more widely will rightly question why all schools did not administer the test which was a sound and straightforward basis on which to measure pupils' reading and writing skills. It provides vital information for teachers to help children who are failing in these areas. Schools which carried out the test will gain a clear idea of how their pupils perform in reading and writing against national standards.

ENVIRONMENT

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent communications he has received from the chairman of British Nuclear Fuels plc in regard to the future of radioactive waste arising from THORP.

Mr. Yeo: The chairman of British Nuclear Fuels plc has written to the Secretary of State on only one recent occasion, about the timing of authorisations for the Sellafield site.

Electoral Registers (Sale)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information his Department has concerning the amounts of money raised by local electoral authorities through the sale of electoral registers.

Mr. Baldry: The information is not available centrally.

Beach Awards

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the national beach awards made by the Tidy Britain Group.

Mr. Yeo: The seaside awards scheme was introduced by the Tidy Britain group (TGB) in 1992. It recognises beaches which have attained high standards of facilities, management, beach cleanliness and the water quality requirements of the Bathing Water Directive (76/160/EEC). At present only those beaches which are entered for the scheme are considered for awards.

My Department supports TBG in its operation of this awards scheme which encourages high standards at both resort and rural beaches. The criteria by which entrants are judged are exacting and in some cases more stringent than for the Blue Flag scheme for resorts.

This year's awards, announced on 3 June, were presented by my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment on 7 June. One hundred and thirty-three beaches received awards compared with 94 last year.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the standard spending assessments of each district council in England and Wales as a sum per head of population numbered in descending order.

Mr. Baldry: The information requested for English shire district councils, has been placed in the Library.

Minister for Merseyside

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce the name of the new Minister with special responsibility for Merseyside.

Mr. Gummer: Shortly.

Poll Tax

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has of the amount of unpaid poll tax; what measures he is taking to encourage local authorities to collect the outstanding payments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 June 1993]: I estimate that the level of community charge arrears for local authorities in England at 31 March 1993 was £2·4 billion. Authorities have, however, made provision for non-collection of £1·6 billion.

We have provided authorities with a range of enforcement options. Once it has obtained a liability order from a court an authority may collect unpaid community charges by any of the following methods: an attachment of earnings order; distress; deductions from income support; charging orders (for collective community charges only); and bankruptcy and winding up. If, having attempted to levy distress, an authority is unable to find any or sufficient goods to distrain, it may seek to have the chargepayer committed to prison.

Common Land

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement of his policy in relation to common land.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 8 June 1993]: It remains our policy to safeguard the status of common land and to strengthen the ways in which we protect and use it. We recognise that this policy requires legislation but I cannot say when such legislation will be introduced.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Drugs and Arms

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what direct involvement Her Majesty's Customs has had in the three discoveries of cannabis on a location off the west Wales coast over the last three weeks; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what action he proposes to take to increase surveillance to prevent importation of drugs and arms on the west Wales coast.

Sir John Cope: The bales of cannabis were trawled from the seabed by a fishing vessel and the master promptly and correctly notified Customs on each occasion. Customs subsequently took possession of the cannabis when the trawler returned to port at Milford Haven.

Customs are constantly vigilant to prevent the importation of both drugs and arms on the west Wales coast as elsewhere and they deploy anti-smuggling teams, based at Swansea and Pembroke dock, to meet the assessed risk of such smuggling.

The Customs strategy in relation to anti-smuggling controls is based on flexible targeting of resources towards areas of the highest risk at any given time.

Debt Reduction

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his policy on the United States proposal to join the international consensus on debt reduction on Trinidad terms.

Mr. Nelson: The Government very much welcome the announcement by the United States Administration that it is seeking congressional approval for measures to enable the United States to join the Paris Club consensus for the implementation of debt reduction on Trinidad terms for the poorest and most indebted countries.

Debt reduction on Trinidad terms was originally proposed by the Prime Minister in 1990.

A modified version of the Prime Minister's Trinidad terms proposals, implemented by the Paris Club from December 1991, provide for 50 per cent. reduction in the debt payments due over a period of between one and three years. They also provide for consideration of the question of the country's whole stock of debt after three to four years, subject to satisfactory performance under IMF programmes.

Approval of the legislation and necessary appropriation measures by Congress should allow the United States to give the 50 per cent. debt or debt service reduction under the Trinidad terms as presently implemented. The United States proposal should also allow the United States to participate in a Paris Club stock of debt reduction.

If the United States is able to implement Trinidad terms this is good news. It implies full international consensus at the Paris Club in favour of debt reduction. Moreover this should also facilitate in due course progress on other key objectives of the United Kingdom's strategy for official debt.

The Government would like the present Trinidad terms improved so that they conform more closely to the proposals that my right hon. Friend the Member for Huntingdon (Mr. Major) actually put forward in Trinidad in 1990. In particular, we would like to see:

- an increase in the rate of relief in excess of 50 per cent. on a case-by-case basis. For some countries, relief of up to 80 per cent. might be justified;
- where a debtor has a good track record of performance under IMF programmes, immediate stock of debt relief should be given. There should be no need to have to wait three to four years.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Hong Kong

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the progress of the Sino-British talks on the future of Hong Kong.

Mr. Hurd: There have now been four rounds of talks between Britain and China about electoral arrangements in Hong Kong. We have the responsibility to ensure that the elections to be held in 1994 and 1995 are fair, open and acceptable to the people of Hong Kong. There should also be objective criteria for confirmation of members of the 1995 Legislative Council as members of the first legislature of the Hong Kong special administrative region in 1997. We are working hard for a successful outcome from the talks. But we also need to ensure that the elections are held on time. The talks will therefore need to be brought to a conclusion in good time to allow the practical arrangements for the elections to be made; they cannot go on indefinitely. We must make more progress.

Serbia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to discuss recent political events in Serbia with the Federal Yugoslav representative in London; and if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's view of recent developments in the Yugoslav Federation.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None. Recent developments in Belgrade were discussed at the EC General Affairs Council in Luxembourg on 8 and 9 June. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and his European colleagues condemned the repression evident in Serbia, in particular the physical abuse of the opposition leader, Mr. Draskovic and his wife, and the moves to ban opposition parties.

Latvia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Latvian Foreign Minister about the development of democracy in that country and the position of the ethnic Russian minority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: At the EC Troika ministerial meeting with Baltic Foreign Ministers on 19 April, we and our partners acknowledged the progress on political reform which Latvia had made. We also reiterated the importance we attach to the upholding of human rights. We do not accept Russian allegations of human rights abuses in Latvia, which have been shown to be unfounded by CSCE and UN fact-finding missions. However, Latvia needs to find fair formulae on citizenship and non-citizens' rights. We have urged Latvia to implement soon the recommendations of the report on Latvia by the CSCE high commissioner on national minorities.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports his Department has received on the conduct of the recent elections in Latvia; what were the nature of such reports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The elections were the first to have been held since Latvia regained independence. We are pleased that they were conducted successfully. Her Majesty's embassy in Riga has reported that the Council of Europe mission observing the elections concluded that they were free, democratic and independent.

Greece

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the Foreign Minister of Greece; what issues were discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs last met Mr. Papaconstantinou at the Foreign Affairs Council on 8 June.

Among the topics discussed were the former Yugoslavia, EC enlargement, structural funds and the GATT Uruguay round.

Asylum

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the United Kingdom post in Zagreb received from Mrs. Sadeta Draganovic and her children an application to be granted asylum in the United Kingdom; when that application was forwarded to the immigration and nationality department of the Home Office; if the post in Zagreb received information as to whether a decision on the application has been taken; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: Her Majesty's embassy in Zagreb received an application for entry clearance by Mrs. Draganovic on 28 April 1993. This was referred to the Home Office the same day. To date the embassy has received no response.

Angola

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the Government are taking to ensure that legitimate government in Angola is maintained.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We fully support United Nations efforts to promote dialogue between the democratically elected Government of Angola and UNITA leading to a ceasefire and full implementation of the Bicesse Peace Accords. On 1 June the Security Council extended the mandate of the United Nations operation in Angola for 45 days to allow these efforts to continue.

Somalia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with (a) representatives of non-Governmental organisations and (b) with commonwealth high commissioners about recent developments in Somalia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We maintain regular and close contacts with NGO's about the situation in Somalia, including the recent developments. Officials have been in contact with individual Commonwealth High Commissions.

We have also expressed our condolences over the recent tragic death of Pakistani United Nations troops in Somalia.

Malawi

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy towards the referendum in Malawi on 14 June.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We sent three observers to Malawi as part of a coordinated EC mission to monitor the referendum voter registration process beween 12 and 21 April. A further five United Kingdom observers arrived in Malawi on 3 June where they will remain until 18 June to monitor the latter stages of the referendum process, including the vote and declaration of the result. In addition, we have agreed to provide financial support through the United Nations development programme to supply equipment necessary for the holding of the referendum.

We are supporting the referendum process despite a number of concerns over reports of harassment, intimidation of individual multi-party advocates and lack of coverage of their views on the government controlled media. However we are encouraged that all the parties remain committed to continued participation in the referendum process. We have urged the Government of Malawi to ensure that the remainder of the campaign takes place under conditions which allow all Malawians to express their views freely.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Corrections Corporation of America

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the expected publication date of the report of the prison service investigation into the American prison firm CCA.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated June 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about publication of the report of our investigation into CCA.

Following various allegations about CCA in the media, the Prisons Board decided that one of its non-executive members, Mr. Bill Bentley, should visit the United States and investigate the background to these allegations. The results of Mr. Bentley's inquiries have been presented to the Board; in brief, he concludes that he was unable to find any evidence which would have affected the decision to award the contract from Blakenhurst Prison to UKDS, the consortium which includes CCA.

This conclusion has been accepted by Mr. Peter Lloyd, the Prisons Minister, who has written to Sir Ivan Lawrence reporting the outcome of the inquiry. A copy of that letter has been placed in the Library of the House. Beyond that, we have no plans to publish a report on Mr. Bentley's investigation.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will delay the opening of Blakenhurst prison pending the outcome of the prison service investigation into CCA.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated June 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the opening of Blakenhurst Prison.

Our initial review concluded that no information about CCA had come to light which would have affected our decision to award the contract to the UKDS, the consortium which includes CCA.

The opening of Blakenhurst Prison therefore went ahead as scheduled, with the first inmates arriving on 26 May.

Relocation and Amalgamation

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the sections and organisations within his Department for which there are plans for relocation or amalgamation.

Mr. Howard: The Home Office has no major relocation or amalgamation plans at present, but a number of minor moves are being planned. In particular, the central research and support establishment will move from Aldermaston to forensic science service headquarters in Birmingham and the prison service tactical management and planning unit (TMPU) will move from Birmingham to London, both in September 1993. TMPU will also be amalgamated with the prison service headquarters section responsible for the managements of category A prisoners.

Drug Abuse

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he plans to take to eliminate Temazepan capsule abuse.

Mr. David Maclean: The Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs (ACMD) has recently completed consultations on its proposed changes in the controls over Temazepam and I expect shortly to receive its conclusions.

Manchester Prison

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any member of the initial Manchester gaol tender evaluation panel has been recruited by any of the firms involved in submitting tenders for running that prison.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated June 1993.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question whether any member of the panel evaluating the bids for the management of Manchester prison has been recruited by any of the firms involved in submitting tenders.

No actual or proposed member of the evaluation panel has been recruited by any of the tendering companies.

Security Guard Uniforms

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take legislative action to prevent the staff of security companies from being uniformed so as to resemble police officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: It is already an offence under section 52 of the Police Act 1964 to impersonate a police officer with intent to deceive.

North Sea Camp Prison

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what savings would be made by using prisoners at HMP North Sea camp to drive lorries to deliver vegetables to other prisoners:

(2) what plans there are to use convicted inmates as lorry drivers at HMP North Sea camp; what assessment has been made of the security implications; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what discussions have taken place with the Prison Officers Association and the Prison Governors Association about the use of prisoners in jobs previously held by paid staff.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 10 June 1993.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about North Sea Camp.

The Governor of North Sea Camp open prison is examining a proposal to use a suitably qualified prisoner to make vegetable deliveries to neighbouring prisons. This will release a prison auxiliary driver to take more prisoners to work placements in local communities, thus meeting an increased demand for such opportunities.

There would be no financial savings since the auxiliary driver will be employed on other duties.

North Sea Camp holds Category D prisoners who are judged to be able to be trusted not to abscond or commit further offences, and to present little risk to the public.

The governor has consulted widely on the question of the use of prisoners as drivers. Members of the local Branch of the Prison Officers Association have not objected to the scheme. Likewise members of the Prison Governors Association at North Sea Camp have no objection. The governor is continuing to consult governors of neighbouring prisons to which deliveries would be made before he reaches a final decision.

I am not aware of any other schemes which will use prisoners to undertake work previously done by paid staff.

Doncaster Prison

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if a decision has yet been made on the date for sending out tenders for Doncaster prison; who will be sent the tender documents; and what is the closing date for bids.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 10 June 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply directly to your question about the tendering arrangements for the management of Doncaster Prison.

The intention is to send out invitations to tender on 16 July 1993 with a closing date for the return of bids in mid September. The composition of the bidders' list will depend upon the response to the notice advertising the tendering exercise in the Official Journal of the European Community and a subsequent qualification assessment of the applicants.

Group 4

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what clauses exist in the present contract with Group 4 escort services to allow renegotiation of the contract; and what would be the additional cost of renegotiating the contract in line with the increased number of prisoner movements;

(2) what talks Group 4 has had with his escort duties; what projections were made about the number of prisoner movements by his Department as the basis for the contract with Group 4 escort services; what are the actual numbers of prisoner movements at the latest available date; and if he plans to amend the contract accordingly.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 10 June 1993.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply directly to your two Parliamentary Questions about the contract for court escort services with Group 4 Services Ltd.

The resources needed for the court escort service depend both on the numbers of prisoners to be escorted and on the distribution of their points of origin and their destination. These were measured in surveys carried out prior to the issue of invitations to tender and immediately prior to contract signature. The contract price was based on the findings of the latter survey.

The contract recognises, however, that costs will vary with the requirement, and mechanisms exist to adjust the contract price in line with changes in requirement. Analysis of the present workload is underway in order to determine whether either the resource levels or the contract price, or both, need adjustment, and, if so by how much.

Murder Cases

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many murder cases in the last two years there has been a delay of (a) more than 10 weeks, (b) less than 10 weeks, (c) less than eight weeks and (d) less than four weeks after death before defence solicitors agreed to the release of the victim's body to the family.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I regret that this information is not available. Coroners, with the encouragment of the Home Office, do all they can to keep to the minimum the delay in releasing bodies. I deeply sympathise with the families of victims to whom distress is caused by any delays.

Asylum

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Immigration and Nationality Department received from the visa section of the British embassy in Zabred an application for asylum in the United Kingdom by Mrs. Sadeta Draganovic and her children; when the Immigration and Nationality Department is going to take a decision on this application; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: An application by Mrs. Draganovic and her three sons for visas to join members of their family admitted exceptionally under the special arrangements for ex-detainees was referred by the visa officer to the asylum division of the Immigration and Nationality Department on 28 April. A decision on the application will be made shortly.

EC Immigration Meeting

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the main decisions taken by EC Immigration Ministers meeting recently in Copenhagen.

Mr. Howard: I refer to the answer which I gave the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 9 June 1993 at column 246.

Mistreatment of Prisoners

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of the inquiry into the allegation of mistreatment of prisoners in the United States in establishments controlled by the Corrections Corporation of America.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 17 May 1993]: Mr. Bentley has now completed his inquiries and has reported his findings to Derek Lewis, the director general of the prison service.

In addition to the original allegations made against CCA and some of its senior management, I understand that consideration has also been given to further allegations contained in The Observer newspaper.

From Mr. Bentley's findings it is clear that there is nothing to suggest that CCA or its senior managers are unfit to be shareholders in a company holding the contract to operate Blakenhurst or any other prision. In the circumstances, the contract awarded to UKDS for the operation and management of Blakenhurst prison will continue.

I have written in similar terms today to Sir Ivan Lawrence, Chairman of the Home Affairs Committee. A copy of my letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Polytetrafluoroethylene

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department and the Department of the Environment will produce a guidance document on the use of polytetrafluoroethylene (PTFE) based and composite buildings products both under construction and in existence; what representations on the potential dangers to the public and firefighters of this substance have been made by the joint fire prevention committee of the Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council over the last three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle [holding answer 9 June 1993]: The research to establish whether there are potential additional hazards to firefighters and the general public from fires involving structures roofed with PTFE-based materials concluded that in the event of a fire the probability of any additional threat would be minimal. Guidance for fire brigades on the use of such materials in buildings will be issued shortly by my Department and we understand that guidance for building control officers will be published in the autumn by the building research establishment.

Progress of the research project and on the preparation of guidance notes has been reported at meetings of the joint fire prevention committee on 2 October 1990, when the interim conclusions of the research were available, 15 October 1991, 7 April 1992 and 6 October 1992. The final results were made available to the committee on 23 March 1993.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Network Marketing

Mr. McMaster: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what studies he has undertaken into the concept of network marketing; what evidence there is to link this concept with associated marketing techniques, such as pyramid selling; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: A network marketing scheme is subject to the same legal requirements as pyramid selling if it includes the elements specified in section 118 of the Fair Trading Act. We are reviewing the legislation governing pyramid selling and similar trading schemes.

Transonic Wind Tunnel

Mr. Caborn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will list the countries that have contracted to use the European transonic wind tunnel cycle programme; for what amount of time; and at what charge;

(2) when the European transonic wind tunnel cycle programme will be ready for use; and what access countries outside the partnership have to the tunnel;

(3) who are the European partners in the European transonic wind tunnel cycle programme; and what is each country's contribution in cash terms.

Mr. Sainsbury: The partners in the European transonic wind tunnel (ETW) are United Kingdom, France Germany and the Netherlands.

They are providing funds in the following proportions:

	Construction/ Commissioning/ Calibration Per cent.	Initial Operation Per cent.
United Kingdom	28·0	31·0
France	28·0	31·0
Germany	38·0	31·0
Netherlands	6·0	7·0

Forecast final costs of the projects are as follows:

	DM million
Construction, commissioning and calibration	665·1
Initial operation	149·7

The partners' contributions are therefore as follows:

	Construction/ Commissioning/ Calibration DM million	Initial Operation DM million
United Kingdom	186·23	46·41
France	186·23	46·41
Germany	252·74	46·41
Netherlands	39·90	10·47

ETW management has decided that the tunnel will be operated on a fully commercial basis, with charges set accordingly, and will be accessible to customers worldwide.

Initial operation is scheduled to commence on 1 July 1994, with full commercial operation planned from 1 July 1997.

The project has not yet reached the stage when contracts for use have been negotiated. Manufacturers in each partner country have, however, indicated their intention to use the tunnel in the early stages of initial operation.

Trademarks

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to amend the law on trademarks.

Mr. McLoughlin: A Bill to implement the proposals in the White Paper "Reform of Trade Marks Law" (Cm 1203) has been fully drafted, and will be introduced as soon as the parliamentary timetable permits.

Warren Spring Laboratory

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the research contracts awarded to Warren Spring Laboratory in each of the last two years relating to all aspects of transport policy.

Mr. McLoughlin: The information requested is as follows:

Polly Peck

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has required the administrator of Polly Peck to furnish him with a report under section 6 of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986.

Mr. Heseltine: The joint administrator reported to the Secretary of State on 16 June 1992.

Mr. Asil Nadir

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will now make a direction to proceed under section 6 of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 against Mr. Asil Nadir.

Mr. Heseltine: On 25 November 1991 a bankruptcy order was made against Mr. Asil Nadir and he is disqualified from acting as a company director until discharged—normally three years. The Official Receiver is considering applying to the court to suspend the discharge period until Mr. Nadir has fully co-operated.

If the suspension is granted then an application under section 6 of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 will not be necessary.

British Standards Institution

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what level of grant-in-aid the Government will pay to the British Standards Institution this year; and if he will make a statement about BSI's role in relation to industrial competitiveness.

Mr. Heseltine: The British Standards Institution (BSI) is an independent body incorporated under royal charter. BSI has made an important contribution towards industrial competitiveness over the past 90 years in providing a framework for the setting of standards for industry. I am pleased to announce that the Government will make a grant-in-aid of £4·5 million for 1993-94 and that my Department will contribute a further £2·7 million in support to industry for standards making purposes.

In view of the changing nature of BSI standards, as a result of the increasing emphasis over recent years on the writing of standards at European and international level, and of the growth in BSI's quality assurance and testing activities, I have decided to review the need for Government financial assistance and the appropriate mechanisms for any future financial assistance, bearing in mind the need to ensure best value for money from public expenditure. This review is due to be completed by the end of September.

My officials are consulting all interested parties about future funding arrangements and about ways in which BSI and standards can contribute further to improving the competitiveness of British industry. They are seeking views on such questions as the value of national and international standards in support of competitiveness; the effectiveness of BSI as a standards-making organisation in a world market; the need for new types of product standard, or for new product testing, certification and marking schemes in the United Kingdom; and possible alternative approaches to standards writing at national level and to United Kingdom representation at international level. I have placed in the Library of the House a copy of the consultation note which has been issued.

Offshore Licensing

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was his Department's expenditure in 1992-93 on monitoring compliance with offshore licensing conditions; what is its projected expenditure in 1993-94; and what other bodies have a role in monitoring compliance with conditions.

Mr. Eggar: The monitoring of compliance with the conditions contained in offshore oil and gas licences is an integral part of the licence administration and technical support activities carried out by my Department, and monitoring is not separately costed. Other governmental bodies involved in monitoring particular aspects of the licence conditions include the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Scottish Office, the Health and Safety Executive, the Ministry of Defence, and the Department of Transport.

Warren Spring Laboratory

Mr. Robathan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he has taken to maintain the knowledge and expertise in wastes management and recycling developed by Warren Spring Laboratory after the sale of its site in Stevenage.

Mr. Heseltine [pursuant to his reply, 27 May 1993, c. 692]: I am announcing today the formation of a new national environmental technology centre (NETC). This is to be created by bringing together at Culham and Harwell the country's two main centres of environmental research, those of my Department's Warren Spring Laboratory (WSL) and AEA Technology. Together they will form a single centre of excellence in environmental technology.

WSL and AEA Technology has each established national and international reputations in environmental science and consultancy, serving customers in Government, in the private sector, and overseas. They are already working together in certain environmental areas. The NETC will provide a more comprehensive service for all these customers, and better value for the taxpayer's money. It will combine the complementary strengths of WSL and AEA Technology in the environmental field. It will aim to provide the full range of services provided in the past, and will develop and extend them. The Government will remain an important customer, and will deal with the NETC on a fee-paying basis.

This decision follows advice from PA consulting group on options for the future of WSL. The proposed relocation of WSL from its existing site at Stevenage to a greenfield site at Welwyn Garden City will not now proceed.

WSL has now been an executive agency of the Department of Trade and Industry for four years. I have been impressed by its progress within this framework towards becoming a more customer-oriented and cost conscious body, and I am confident that this progress will continue following the merger with AEA Technology.

The NETC will negotiate with all WSL's customers with the aim of taking on to the fullest extent possible the whole of WSL's business. WSL staff required to work on the business to be transferred will be expected to transfer to the AEA with their work. I am eager to see the greatest possible number of such staff transfer. The Department will seek to redeploy other staff, though some redundancies are likely.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Energy announced on 1 April that consultants were being appointed to advise on the practicability of privatising the AEA. I will want to consider the prospects of privatising the NETC activities in the light of that study.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade to what investigations his Department has been subject by the Data Protection Registrar in relation to a suspected breach of a data protection principle; if he will summarise the nature of each complaint and state when the complaint was made; and what remedial action was taken by his Department to ensure future compliance with the principle subject to the investigation.

Mr. Eggar [pursuant to his reply, 20 May 1993, c. 288-89]: My further inquiries have revealed that the complaint concerned a subject access request which was not promptly responded to. By the time the Data Protection Registrar brought this to the attention of the office which received the subject access request a response had already been provided. No further action was necessary.

EC Grants

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of EC grants available for 1992 remain unclaimed by the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have been asked to reply.

As EC grants made under the structural funds are allocated on a multiannual basis, no annual figures for grants actually claimed are available. However, of the structural funds allocated to the United Kingdom for the period 1989-93, approximately 80 per cent. have been committed to projects. The remaining 20 per cent. is expected to be committed before the end of the year. Since there is no allocation specific to the United Kingdom in respect of other EC expenditure it is not possible to say what percentage of grants intended for the United Kingdom has been claimed.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Ballet Companies

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the current level of support from Arts Council funds to (a) the London City Ballet and (b) the National Ballet.

Mr. Brooke: This year's Arts Council grant to London City Ballet is £250,000. The grant to English National Ballet is £3,603,000.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Set-aside

12. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total acreage of arable land put into set-aside during the last three years.

Mrs. Shephard: A total of 54,317 hectares (134,000 acres) of land have been entered into the five-year scheme and 14,118 hectares (35,000 acres) into the one year scheme in the United Kingdom during the years 1990-92.

I will publish details of the amount of land set-aside under the arable area payments scheme as soon as possible.

Wildlife Habitats

13. Ms Quin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new measures her Department is considering to encourage or require farmers to promote wildlife habitats.

Mr. Jack: We are considering the results of consultations which we have just held on a range of new measures to benefit wildlife habitats, including new environmentally sensitive areas, a scheme to improve the condition of moorland and a habitat improvement scheme.

Mr. Milligan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make provision under the new set-aside scheme for the preservation of good wildlife habitats created under the existing scheme.

Mr. Jack: We expect that farmers with land in the five-year set-aside scheme or in rotational set-aside will be able to enter land directly into non-rotational set-aside under the new arable area payments scheme. In addition, as part of our agri-environment programme, we are proposing a new scheme for the withdrawal of land from production for 20 years. Habitats of particular value created under the five-year scheme would be eligible for this new long-term scheme.

Potato Marketing Board

14. Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received from farmers in Cheshire on the future of the Potato Marketing Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: We have received 19 representations by or on behalf of farmers in Cheshire, all expressing support for the continuation of the Potato Marketing Board.

Poultry Industry

15. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she next expects to meet representatives of the poultry industry to discuss the state of the sector.

Mr. Jack: I hope to be in regular contact with representatives of the industry. My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary recently addressed the annual conference of the British Poultry Meat Federation.

Agricultural Trade

16. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the balance of trade in agricultural produce between the United Kingdom and France and the United Kingdom and Germany; and what are the main British products involved.

Mrs. Shephard: In 1992 we had a trade deficit of £624 million with France and £403 million with Germany.

Wine was the largest single import in each case.

The largest British exports to both countries were meat and whisky.

Agricultural Tenancy Law

17. Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals she intends to bring forward for the reform of agricultural tenancy law.

Mrs. Shephard: The objective of agricultural tenancy reform would be to encourage more letting of land by giving landlords and tenants greater freedom to negotiate the terms of their own agreements. The industry has been consulted on proposals and its views are now being considered. The introduction of the necessary legislation will depend on parliamentary time becoming available.

Farm Incomes

18. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the average level of farm income in 1992; and what is the projected figure for 1993.

Mr. Jack: Aggregate farm income for the industry as a whole rose by just over 10 per cent. in 1992. It is too early to forecast figures for 1993.

Bananas

19. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how she is monitoring the price of bananas.

Mrs. Shephard: Data on the price of bananas at all stages in the marketing chain from the point of import into the United Kingdom to final retail sale are collected on a regular basis and allow comparison with prices in other countries.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received about the proposed EC banana regime.

Mrs. Shephard: We have received a wide range of representations from interested parties at all stages in the marketing of bananas.

These have included representatives of producer interests and companies involved at all stages in the marketing of bananas in the United Kingdom.

24. Sir Donald Thompson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions are taking place on the criteria to be used for measuring quality within the new EC banana regime; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Shephard: Council regulation 404/93 on the common organisation of the European banana market provides for the development of quality and marketing standards for bananas marketed in the Community.

Details of these standards and how they will be applied will be decided by the Commission in consultation with member states.

No discussion of quality standards has yet taken place.

Deregulation

20. Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on progress on deregulation.

Mrs. Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Scarborough and Whitby (Mr. Sykes).

Scotch Whisky

21. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will arrange to meet representatives of the Scotch whisky industry to discuss the prospects for the industry and the workers employed in it.

Mr. Jack: My right hon. Friend hopes to have frequent contacts with representatives of the Scotch whisky industry.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

22. Mr. Spring: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of the United Kingdom is now designated as environmentally sensitive areas.

Mrs. Shephard: Just over 9 per cent. of agricultural land in the United Kingdom is now designated under the environmentally sensitive areas scheme.

The Government have announced proposals for further designations which together are expected to bring the total area covered to approximately 15 per cent. by the end of the year.

Food Labelling

23. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps she will take to improve the accuracy of food labelling.

Mr. Soames: It is already an offence under the Food Safety Act 1990 falsely to describe a food or to give information which is likely to mislead as to its nature, substance or quality.

Food Advisory Committee

25. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she next intends to meet the chairman of the Food Advisory Committee to discuss the committee's membership.

Mr. Soames: I have no plans at present for such a discussion.

The views of the chairman of the Food Advisory Committee are always taken into account when appointments to the committee are being considered.

Less Favoured Areas

26. Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she will next visit Dartmoor hill farmers to discuss the less favoured areas.

Mr. Jack: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary (Lords), Earl Howe, chaired a meeting of the Hill Farming Advisory Committee on 2 June. Two of the members of the committee farm on Dartmoor and a range of issues related to farming in the less favoured areas was discussed.

Equine Viral Arteritis

Mr. Spring: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the outbreak of equine viral arteritis.

Mr. Soames: On 7 June the Animal Health Trust confirmed an outbreak of equine viral arteritis (EVA) on a non-thoroughbred stud in Nottinghamshire. The trust is investigating a number of associated suspect outbreaks at various locations in Great Britain. This is the first reported incidence of EVA in the United Kingdom. The source of the infection is still under investigation and, although some reports have indicated a possible link with a stallion imported from Poland in September last year, this link has not yet been positively confirmed.

EVA is not a notifiable disease in Great Britain and statutory disease control measures and movement restrictions do not apply. Similarly, the disease is not specifically covered by EC animal health rules governing movements of equidae between member states. However, EC rules in relation to the import of equidae into the Community from third countries, to be implemented in Great Britain with effect from 1 July 1993, require that uncastrated males must either originate from countries which have been free of EVA for at least six months or the stallion blood or its semen must have been tested with negative results for EVA prior to import.

The United Kingdom equine industry operates a voluntary code of practice for the prevention and control of EVA which is issued by the Horserace Betting Levy Board. In addition, importers are free to seek from the exporter or vendor the provision of private veterinary certification in respect of EVA.

Officials attended a meeting organised by the industry last week. At that meeting it was confirmed that an application for an inactivated vaccine had been received by the veterinary medicines directorate and that it was being assessed as quickly as possible. In addition, the state veterinary service will increase the level of post import testing of stallions imported from third countries. All those giving seropositive results will be re-exported to their country of origin.

We will continue to monitor the situation extremely carefully.

Integrated Administration and Control System

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received from the European Agriculture Commissioner concerning her proposed visits by Commission staff to member states to discuss the extent and nature of implementation difficulties concerning the integrated administration and control system procedure.

Mr. Jack: The Agriculture Commissioner has indicated that Commission staff will be visiting all 12 member states during June and July to monitor implementation of the integrated administration and control system in each member state. The Commission team will be visiting the United Kingdom in the week beginning 5 July.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps were taken by her Department to prepare the farming community for the introduction of IACS forms.

Mrs. Shephard: We kept farming organisations informed of the progress of the EC regulations governing the integrated administration and control system. We subsequently consulted them during the preparation of the explanatory booklet designed to help farmers complete their IACS application forms.

THORP

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the answer by the President of the Board of Trade of 25 May, Official Report, column 488, if she will make a statement on the current timing of the decision in respect of the revised discharge authorisations in connection with the commissioning of the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield.

Mr. Jack: My right hon. Friend and the Secretary of State for the Environment have recently received a report from the inspectors in response to consultation on draft radioactive discharge authorisations for BNFL Sellafield. Their report is currently under consideration and a decision on how we intend to proceed will be made as quickly as possible.

Producer Organisations (Discipline Rules)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps require to be taken to implement the European Community regulation No. 3759/92 in the United Kingdom with particular reference to the extension of discipline rules with respect to producer organisations in the fisheries sector, including aquaculture.

Mr. Jack: Regulation 3759/92 does not require member states to extend the discipline rules of fish producer organisations to those who do not belong to such an organisation. It allows member states the option of doing so. There are no present plans for doing so in the United Kingdom.

Brazilian Beef

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what restrictions are placed on the importation of beef from Brazil to deal with environmental concerns at point of production.

Mr. Jack: Only beef produced in certain premises in Brazil, which are approved by the Commission, can be imported into the Community. All consignments of beef are subject to a documentary check on entry to the Community to ensure that the meat was produced at an approved plant. A percentage of consignments are also subject to physical checks carried out under the supervision of an official veterinary surgeon.

Sheep

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current population of sheep; and what was the figure 10 years ago.

Mr. Jack: The total number of sheep and lambs on agricultural holdings in England estimated from the June 1992 agricultural census was 20,529,478. The corrresponding figure for June 1982 was 15,456,436. These figures include estimates for minor holdings.

Fishing (Days at Sea)

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the average number of half days at sea provisionally allocated to fishing vessels (a) in each fishery and (b) in the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mrs. Shephard: The average of provisional allocations to fishing vessels licensed by MAFF, SOAFD and DANI is 275 half-days. Individual vessels may prosecute a variety of fisheries and therefore figures for the average provisional allocation per fishery cannot be given.

Codex Alimentarius

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the implications for food standards and for food standards regulations in the EC and in the United Kingdom of GATT proposals concerning the UN FAO/WHO Codex Alimentarius.

Mrs. Shephard: Under the terms of the proposed GATT Uruguay round agreement on sanitary and phytosanitary measures, any trade restriction imposed in conformity with internationally agreed standards such as the UN FAO/WHO Codex Alimentarius shall automatically be considered to be consistent with GATT rules. This shall not prevent the imposition of tighter standards where they are scientifically justified.

Moorland Destocking

Mr. Milligan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received on which areas to target for support under the moorland destocking scheme.

Mr. Jack: I have received a number of representations supporting the Government's proposal that the scheme should be targeted on specific moorland in the less favoured areas where a reduction in sheep stocking would be most likely to achieve environmental benefit. Some respondents suggested particular areas or moorland types for inclusion.

Veterinary Surgeons

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many veterinary surgeons are currently employed in his Department on questions of animal welfare, and at what cost; what was the figure 10 years ago; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: All veterinary staff of the animal health and welfare group are involved with animal welfare as part of their normal duties.

In 1992-93 this work amounted to 10·3 per cent. of veterinary time, which is the equivalent of 43 man-years at a cost of £2,274,872 per annum.

Ten years ago animal welfare work amounted to 10·5 per cent. of veterinary time, the equivalent to 57·6 man-years. Estimated cost then was £1,523,635 per annum.

TRANSPORT

Maritime Safety

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which countries voted for and against the United Kingdom proposals for ferry survivability in the Maritime Safety Committee of the International Maritime Organisation on 24 to 28 May.

Mr. Norris: The United Kingdom proposal was not put to the vote, however the vote for a consolidated proposal put forward by Canada, Denmark, Belgium, Norway and Sweden and supported by the United Kingdom was 16 for and 10 against. A detailed record of the voting was not taken. Sixty-five countries attended the meeting.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what decisions taken at the 62nd session of the International Maritime Organisation's Maritime Safety Committee meeting 24 to 28 May will have a bearing on improving the safety of shipping in the English channel and in the shipping lanes for ferries between British ports and those in Belgium and the Netherlands.

Mr. Norris: Routeing and other navigational issues, including ferry routes, for the English channel were not discussed at the 62nd session of the Maritime Safety Committee.

British Trent (Collision)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how and when he was informed of the collision between BP tanker British Trent and the bulk carrier Western Winner.

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport's marine emergency operations room was notified by Dover coastguard of the incident by telex message at 07.36 on Thursday 3 June. The operations room informed Lord Caithness, the Minister for Shipping, who informed the Secretary of State at approximately 09.30.

North Sea Supply Vessels

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many Norwegian ships are operating or have operated under contract or charter in the United Kingdom sector of the North sea supplying oil rigs (a) at present, (b) one year ago, (c) 18 months ago and (d) two years ago;

(2) how many British ships are operating or have operated under contract or charter in the Norwegian sector of the North sea supplying oil rigs (a) at present, (b) one year ago, (c) 18 months ago and (d) two years ago.

Mr. Norris: The Government do not collect details of contracts placed in the North sea, but I have seen the following figures:

	Norwegian ships in United Kingdom sector	British ships in Norwegian sector
(a)	27	1
(b)	24	0
(d)	33	0

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, has recently written to the Norwegian Minister for Trade and Shipping about this apparent imbalance.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how the channel tunnel terminal will be described on road signs on the principal motorways and trunk roads in the direction of Folkestone; what effect including the tunnel terminal on road signs will have on the current level of references to Folkestone on such road signs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The new fixed channel link will be described as "Channel Tunnel" on trunk road signs. This is a change from the earlier proposal to sign it as "Eurotunnel".

The inclusion of "Channel Tunnel" on the signs does not itself affect the number of signs on which "Folkestone" will be shown, but the reclassification of the town in the mid 1980s from a super primary to a primary destination does.

As signs are now being changed for other purposes, the references to Folkestone will be made consistent with its primary destination status. The major change will be on the M20 motorway. The town will continue to appear on all signs eastward from the western side of Ashford. Westwards from there it will no longer appear on advance direction signs but, in the light of recent representation made to my Department we have agreed to retain it on all distance signs on M20 and M26 back to M25. These are the signs which are located between junction and show destinations and the countdown mileages to them.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the Government's plans for rail freight travel and handling to take advantage of the opening of the channel tunnel.

Mr. Freeman: We have supported investment by British Rail of over £400 million in preparation for channel tunnel freight services, and have asked BR to explore further the opportunities for maximising private sector involvement in their development. It remains the Government's objective to secure the transfer of this business to the private sector as soon as possible.

Emergency Action Codes

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 17 March, Official Report, column 265, what progress was made at the United Nations working group meeting held in mid-April to consider proposals for incorporating the Hazchem warning system into proposed European legislation; what further action he proposes to take; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: An informal UN working group meeting was held on 19-22 April at the United Kingdom Fire Service college to examine possible ways of devising and displaying on road tank vehicles and rail tank wagons carrying dangerous goods throughout Europe a form of action code to be used by the emergency services in the event of an accident. The meeting was a result of United Kingdom initiatives in recent regular sessions of the WP.15 group of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe, at which the need for emergency action in the first few minutes of an incident and for coded information to be the same in all languages had been acknowledged.

The meeting was arranged by the Home Office and chaired by my Department. It was attended by a wide representation from signatory countries to the UNECE's ADR agreement concerning the international carriage of dangerous goods by road and from relevant international associations. A number of presentations illustrating from experience the benefits of the United Kingdom's Hazchem action code were made by United Kingdom interests. I am grateful to the commandant of the college and his staff for the efficient arrangements, including the vital practical demonstrations on the fireground. Although some participants remained satisfied with the present Kemler code in the ADR or that the UN substance identification number would be sufficient in future or that use of reference books was not a problem, a majority declared an interest in developing an emergency action code to be included additionally in the ADR. My Department and the Health and Safety Executive therefore will continue to promote formally our detailed proposals for amending the ADR agreement to include a composite placard.

A representative of the European Commission recalled the succession of approaches to the Commission and questions in the European Parliament on this subject. He conceded that with this level of political concern in a member state, a derogation would have to be proposed for inclusion in the draft Council directive currently under informal discussion between the Commission services, member states and other parties that would, in effect, apply the provisions of the ADR to domestic transport. Following further discussion with the Commission, a provision has now been included in a new draft which would allow the continued use of existing emergency action codes for domestic journeys until an internationally agreed code is developed.

I have placed a copy of the official report of the UN working group in the Library.

A249

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about progress on the preparatory work for the dualling of the A249 from the M2 to the Kingsferry bridge; when he expects tenders to be invited; and what are the latest estimated dates for commencement and completion of this project.

Mr. Key: Tenders for the construction of the A249 (M2 to Iwade) improvement are expected to be invited later this summer with a view to starting work around the end of the year. The work is expected to take about two years to complete.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister is he will list his official engagements for Thursday 10 June.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 10 June.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today.

Political Advisers

Mr. Hain: To ask the Prime Minister what was the number of Government political advisers for each year since 1980-81.

The Prime Minister: The information requested has not been regularly collected centrally. The available information on the number of special advisers—including expert advisers—is as follows:

	Number
July 1988	30
October 1989	31
October 1990	33
November 1991	39
November 1992	38

Mr. Hain: To ask the Prime Minister what was the total expenditure on Government political advisers broken down into salaries and other costs for each year since 1980-81 in (a) cash and (b) 1992-93 prices.

The Prime Minister: Precise total salary bills and aggregate figures for 1980-81—1987-88 are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The aggregate figures for 1988-1993 available are as follows:

As at	Paybill[1] £ million	1992-93 prices[2] £ million
June 1993	1·37	1·34
September 1992	1·30	1·30
September 1991	1·10	1·14
July 1990	0·95	1·05
June 1989	0·93	1·11
September 1988	0·74	0·94

[1] Not including ERNIC and other personnel overheads.
[2] Calculated using the GDP deflator.

School Visits

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 27 May, Official Report, column 663, if he will give the date and name of each school which he has visited since taking his present office.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to my reply to the hon. Member on 27 May at column 663.

Ministers (Severance Pay)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister how much in severance payments the right hon. Members for Kingston upon Thames (Mr. Lamont) and for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones) will receive following their departure from ministerial office; and to what extent such payments are free from income tax.

The Prime Minister: Severance payments for Ministers are determined under the provisions of the Ministerial and other Pensions and Salaries Act 1991. Under the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988, severance payments of less than £30,000—including those to former Ministers—are exempt from tax.

Government Departments (Sub-contractors)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to require contracting suppliers of goods and services to Government Departments to exercise good practices in the prompt payment of their sub-contractors; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Following the announcement during the 1992 Budget, all Government contracts have been required to contain a clause requiring the supplier or contractor to pay its subcontractors promptly. In the absence of normal practice to the contrary for that type of contract or other special circumstances, the commitment should be to pay the subcontractor within 30 days of receipt of a valid invoice or similar demand for payment as defined by the contract.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Good Government

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement defining Her Majesty's Government's concept of good government as a principle governing the United Kingdom's relations with other states; and if he will state what Her Majesty's Government's policy is towards those states which do not meet the good government criteria.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Good government includes the legitimacy, accountability and competence of the processes and institutions of government, along with respect for human rights and the rule of law. It is an important consideration in our relations with other countries. In consultation with our EC partners and others, we seek to encourage Governments not meeting good government criteria to take appropriate action.

Good government issues significantly influence the effectiveness of aid and are therefore an important criterion, alongside other factors, for the allocation of aid between and within countries. We use our aid programme in positive ways to improve the quality of government. Where standards are not met, for example where human rights are persistently abused, we are prepared to withdraw or reduce our assistance.

Bosnia

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will arrange talks with British-based voluntary groups involved in supplying aid to Bosnia to discuss action the Croatian Government could take to facilitate British aid reaching Bosnia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We maintain contact with a wide range of British voluntary agencies who are active in Bosnia-Herzegovina. However, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees is responsible for co-ordinating the international community's response to this crisis, which includes regular dialogue with voluntary agencies and the various authorities in Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Croatian Government about interference from Croatia with United Kingdom aid to Bosnia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have urged and continue to urge all interested parties to respect the right of international humanitarian agencies to free and unimpeded access to all parts of Bosnia-Herzegovina. We seek at all times to co-operate fully with them and to ensure the safety of their personnel as embodied in UN Security Council resolution 820 of 17 April.

Mozambique

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further assistance the United Kingdom will be providing to Mozambique.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: At the Maputo Donors conference this week we pledged £7 million of humanitarian assistance of which some £4 million will be for food aid. With the £3 million we pledged following the signature of the peace accords this will bring the United Kingdom's contribution to £10 million. The non-food aid assistance will be channelled mainly through British non-governmental organisations in the form of seeds and tools provision and for demining work in Zambezia Province. Our delegation at the conference stressed the vital importance of effective donor co-ordination and the key role to be played in this by the UN's Department of Humanitarian Affairs.

EMPLOYMENT

Lady Victoria Pit

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if a decision has been reached on the most appropriate location of mining records currently deposited in Lady Victoria pit at Newtongrange by British Coal on behalf of HM inspectorate of mines and quarries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am not aware of any such decision. It is a matter for the Health and Safety Executive and the British Coal Corporation.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what discussions he has had with (a) HM inspectorate of mines and quarries and (b) British Coal on the most appropriate location of mining records currently deposited in Lady Victoria pit at Newtongrange by British Coal on behalf of HM inspectorate of mines and quarries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We have had no such discussions on this matter.

Public Sector (Strikes)

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans Her Majesty's Government have to introduce measures which would render it more difficult for public sector workers to take (a) strike action and (b) any other form of industrial action.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Government have no immediate plans for legislation beyond the Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Bill currently before Parliament. We continue to keep all aspects of industrial relations law under review.

HEALTH

Road Accidents

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis the fee for emergency treatment under section 155 of the Road Traffic Act 1972 has been calculated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The emergency treatment fee, collected under section 158 of the Road Traffic Act 1988, is payable for immediate medical attention following a road traffic accident. The fee represents a contribution towards the actual costs incurred. Orginally set at 12s 6d in 1934, it was not raised until 1969, since when it has been periodically uprated in line with inflation.

BMA

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she last met British Medical Association officials; and what matters were discussed.

Dr. Mawhinney: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State last met representatives of the British Medical Association (BMA) on 18 May. The meeting was held at the request of the chairman of the General Medical Services Committee (GMSC) of the BMA to discuss a range of issues of current concern to the profession, including the patients charter, violence against general practitioners and complaints arrangements.

I met the GMSC chairman on 24 May to discuss complaints arrangements.

Contraceptives

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average cost to the NHS of prescribing the contraceptive pill to one woman for a year:

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available. The costs of different brands of oral contraceptives are listed in the "British National Formulary", a copy of which is available in the Library.

General Practitioners

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her recommended maximum GP list size in the London implementation zone; what is the average GP list size; how many GPs there are in the zone; and how many have list sizes of (a) over 2,000, (b) over 2,500, (c) over 3,000, (d) over 3,500 and (e) over 4,000.

Dr. Mawhinney: The maximum number of persons which a general practitioner may have on his list in all localities is specified in the National Health Service (General Medical Services) Regulations 1992. Regulation 24(2) provides that the maximum number shall be (a) 3,500 for a single-handed doctor (b) 4,500 for a doctor practising in a partnership, subject to a maximum average of 3,500 for each of the partners in the practice; and, where the doctor employs an assistant, a further maximum number of 2,000 for each assistant. There are no recommended maxima specifically for the London initiative zone.

The London initiative zone comprises five complete family health services authorities (FHSAs) and seven part-FHSAs. The information requested is not available for part-FHSAs.

As at 1 October 1992, there were 3,186 unrestricted GPs in the 12 complete FHSAs which lie wholly or partly within the London initiative zone. The average list size was 2,092. The number of GPs by average list size is shown in the table:

	Over 2,000	Over 2,500	Over 3,000	Over 3,500
General practitioners	1,713	643	239	94

No data are available on GPs with a list size over 4,000.

West Midlands RHA

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the vacant post of chairman of the West Midlands regional health authority was advertised publicly; and in what journals.

Dr. Mawhinney: No.

Prostate Cancer

Ms Lynne: To asks the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of deaths per year from prostate cancer for males (a) between the ages of 55 and 65 years and (b) of 65 years and over.

Mr. Sackville: The number of deaths from a malignant neoplasm of the prostate (International Classification of Diseases, ninth revision, code 185) for 1991, and for earlier years, can be found in the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys publication "Mortality statistics: cause' Series DH2", copies of which are available in the Library. The number of deaths in 1992 for males aged: (a) 55 to 64 (inclusive) is 600; and (b) 65 years and over is 8,069. These figures are for England and Wales.

Trent RHA

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the chairman of the Trent regional health authority is expected to retire or reach the end of his term of office; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Sir Michael Carlisle's current term of office ends on 31 July 1994.

Food Hygiene

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the recent Food Safety Week initiative; and what action her Department is taking to promote food hygiene.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 8 June at cols. 242-43.

Occupational Therapy

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been (a) the average and (b) the maximum waiting time for occupational therapy for patients within each district health authority in each of the last 10 years; and how many people were on each waiting list.

Mr. Sackville: Many patients waiting for occupational therapy are admitted under another specialty and are not recorded on separate occupational therapy waiting lists. For this reason information on the number of patients waiting for occupational therapy is not available centrally.

Radon Gas

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many homes in Wales are estimated to have radon gas contamination above 200 becquerels per cubic metre of air.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The National Radiological Protection Board survey estimates that up to 3,000 homes in Wales may have radon levels above the Government action level of 200 becquerels per cubic metre of air.

As measurements are completed, householders whose homes are found to have concentrations above the action level, (which is half that recommended by the European Commission), are advised of the actions which they should consider.

The results of further research, to more accurately delineate areas where concentrations may be higher than average, are expected in the spring of 1994. Meanwhile, free tests of radon levels are available to concerned householders living in areas where concentrations may be elevated.

Diabetics

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the incidence of renal failure among diabetics, expressed as (a) the total number and (b) the percentage of all diabetics in each area health authority in Wales.

1990-91	51	3
1992-93	67	8

[1] From 1 October 1973.

Complaints are often made up of more than one grievance. Information on those aspects of the complaint that are either upheld or not upheld is not collected separately for Wales.

The information is available in the annual reports of the Health Service Commissioner, copies of which are held in the Library of the House.

Consultant Surgeons

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what action he intends to take to ensure that consultant surgeons in Wales are giving the NHS value for money during their contracted sessions;

(2) by what method he intends to monitor the hospital trusts in Wales to ensure that consultant surgeons are required to reach a threshold of operating time during their NHS contracted sessions.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: It is a matter for individual health authorities and NHS trusts to satisfy themselves that consultant surgeons are fulfilling the terms of their NHS contracts.

Lead Water Pipes

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information his Department holds on the number of households in each local authority area that have lead pipes through which drinking water flows.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The most recent available information is from the 1981 Welsh house condition survey. Estates, for each county, of the number of dwellings with a lead service pipe to the cold water tap in the kitchen are shown in the following table. District information is not available.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The most recently available information on the numbers of children in local authority foster care in Wales relates to the numbers placed at 31 March 1991 under the Boarding Out Regulations 1988. The numbers of age group are shown in the following table:

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 7 June 1993]: Detailed breakdowns of nursing staff employed by district health authorities and national health service trusts into occupational groups such as those requested are not considered reliable. Public Appointments

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the names of public appointments that he has made, in each of the past six years, within the Strathclyde region, detailing in each case the organisation to which the appointment was made, the position held, the relevant qualifications of each appointee and the remuneration that each receives.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 8 June 1993]: The addresses of appointees to non-departmental public bodies are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. A full list of the names of appointees to NDPBs at 1 September 1992 was placed in the Library of the House in response to the question from the hon. Member for Angus, East (Mr. Welsh) at column 392.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Lone-parent Families

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the latest figures for the number of lone-parent families living on income support; and what proportion they make up of all lone-parent families.

Mr. Burt: In 1991 there were about 1·3 million lone parent families in Great Britain[1] of whom 0·871 million (67 per cent.) were living on income support[2]. In May 1992 there were 0·957 million lone parent families on income support[2]; no estimate is yet available of the number of lone parents in Great Britain in 1992.

[1] Office of Population Censuses and Survey.
[2] Income Support Statistics Annual Enquiries May 1991 and 1992. Figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

Maternity Allowances

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the level of (a) the maternity grant and (b) the maternity expenses payment would be in 1993-94 if they had been uprated in line with inflation since their introduction.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is:
(a) maternity grant £75·30; and
(b) payments for maternity expenses £113·55.

Asbestos Claims

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the cost of a medical tribunal concerning the assessment of an asbestos claim.

Mr. Scott: The information is not available in the form requested.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to require the Benefits Agency to publish in its business plan and customer charter the precise arrangements for compensation and ex-gratia payments.

Mr. Burt: The contents of the Benefits Agency customer charter are currently being reviewed. The next version of the agency's business plan will be published in spring 1994 and decisions on its contents will be made nearer the time.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to act upon the recommendation made by the Social Security Committee in its third report of Session 1992-93 on the priority which should be afforded under the new community care arrangements and by the new independent living funds to people prevented from making a claim to the original independent living fund due to delays in processing claims for disability living allowance and attendance allowance.

Mr. Scott: All applications to local authorities and to the new independent living (1993) fund will be dealt with on their individual merits. However, we will ensure that the trustees of the fund are aware of the committee's recommendations.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many disabled people had one or more of the weekly additional requirements for heating or laundry included in their supplementary benefit at the latest available date.

Mr. Burt: Such information as is available is for May 1987. At that date 189,000 people received an addition in respect of heating on the ground of disability. This figure does not include those disabled people entitled to a heating addition of a higher amount for reasons other than disability.

A total of 553,000 people recieved a laundry addition. It is not possible to say what proportion received it on the ground of disability rather than other criteria such as illness, infirmity or inadequate washing facilities at home.

The complicated arrangements of the supplementary benefits scheme were replaced in 1988 by the simpler income support scheme. This aims to direct extra help via premiums to groups identified as likely to have extra needs, such as the disabled.

Source: Supplementary Benefit Statistics Annual Enquiry, May 1987.

Disability Benefits

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many requests for a review of disability living allowance have been received to date by his Department; and how many and what percentage of awards were (a) maintained, (b) allowed, (c) disallowed, (d) increased, (e) varied, (f) reduced and (g) outstanding.

Mr. Scott: The information is in the table. The figures are for the period up to 31 May 1993 which are the most recent available.

Disability living allowance

	Number of Reviews	Percentage
Received	133,234	—
(a) Maintained (Original award upheld)	46,316	34·8
(b) Allowed (Original disallowance overturned)	28,926	21·7
(c) Disallowed (Original disallowance upheld)	3,794	2·8
(d) Increased (Original award increased)	11,501	8·6
(e) Varied (Rate of award unchanged but duration varied)	1,631	1·2
(f) Reduced (Original award reduced)	124	0·1
Others[1]	3,029	2·3
(g) Outstanding	37,913	28·5

Notes:
[1] Others include reviews that are withdrawn, lapsed, defective or where there are no grounds for a review to be made.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were in receipt of (a) disability premium and (b) severe disability premium at the latest available date.

Mr. Burt: The latest available information for income support relates to May 1992.[1] At that time the number of people whose applicable amount included a disability premium was 425,000. The severe disability premium was included in 100,000 cases.

For housing benefit (HB) and community charge benefit (CCB) the latest information relates to May 1991.[2] The number of HB and CCB cases not in receipt of income support with a disability premium or severe disability premium is in the table. Many CCB cases are also in receipt of HB.

	Housing benefit cases	Community charge benefit cases
With disability premium	163,000	217,000
With severe disability premium	15,000	26,000

Note:
[1] Source: Income Support Statistics Annual Enquiry, May 1992.
[2] Source: Housing Benefit and Community Charge Benefit Management Information System Annual Sample, May 1991.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the numbers of people who claimed disability living allowance or attendance allowance prior to 3 September 1992 who would have met the qualifying criteria for the former independent living fund but had still not been notified of the outcome of their claim for either of these benefits by 25 November 1992.

Mr. Scott: It is not possible to make a reliable estimate.

Income Support

Mr. Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, in the light of the recent report by the National Audit Office on income support for the self-employed, what conditions apply to people who claim income support and are engaged in self-employment.

Mr. Lilley: A person claiming income support may carry out some part time work, but this must generally be for less than 16 hours per week. This is regardless of whether the person is an employee or self-employed. In general, however, they must be registered as unemployed and available for and actively seeking work as an employed earner. In addition, earnings above £5 per week (£15 for lone parents) reduce income support entitlement pound for pound. Some of the coverage of the national audit report in the news media did not sufficiently emphasise these conditions and may therefore have created a misleading impression of the extent to which support for those conducting their own business is available from income support.

The principal benefit for people with children and who are working for 16 hours or more per week is family credit. Family credit is currently paid to 70,000 self-employed people, who receive an average of £55 per week each.

Walsall Council (Bus Passes)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the latest position regarding his Department's contact with Walsall council over the latter's refusal to allow blind persons in receipt of the disability living allowance to have the concessionary bus pass.

Mr. Scott: On 24 May, the council wrote to the Department with its further observations on section 73(14) of the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992. The Department replied on 25 May and remains engaged in discussions with the council.

Invalidity Benefit

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what plans he has to introduce regulations on the basis of European Court of Justice Case No. 328/91, 30 March; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he now expects the House of Lords to resume the proceedings of the case concerning Evelyn Thomas et al which was referred to the European Court of Justice; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The European Court has remitted case No. 328/91 back to the House of Lords for final determination. We have not been notified of a hearing date. Legislative proposals will be developed in the light of that determination.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide an estimate of the expenditure and caseload take-up of (a) housing benefit for people who are not on income support and (b) community charge benefit.

Mr. Burt: The latest available take-up estimates for income-related benefits are for 1989. Take-up of housing benefit for people not on income support is estimated at 83 per cent. by expenditure and 74 per cent. by caseload. Estimates for community charge benefit are not available.

Smoke Alarms

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what studies have been made of the cost-effectiveness of providing deaf and hard of hearing people on low incomes with financial support to purchase smoke alarms.

Mr. Burt: No studies have been made.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Asil Nadir

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General how many (a) written and (b) oral representations he received from hon. Members regarding the case of Mr. Nadir before his departure from the United Kingdom.

The Attorney-General: I and my predecessor have received written representations from five hon. Members and can recall oral representations from two hon. Members about the Polly Peck investigation and prosecution.

DEFENCE

Defence Analytical Services Agency

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Defence Analytical Services Agency for 1993-94.

Mr. Hanley: The agency's key targets for this financial year and beyond have been revised to reflect the continuing need to secure economies in defence spending and an increased capability to meet the Department's evolving needs. They build on progress already made by the agency in meeting those targets set at its launch in July 1992. The revised targets are as follows.

Delivery of customer service

(a) About three-quarters of the Agency's business is suitable for coverage by Service Level Agreements with customers, which set out targets and standards for the level of service, timeliness and quality of work. For this part of the business key targets are:

(i) to increase the coverage to 75 per cent. for Service Level Agreements in the areas suitable;

(ii) to meet at least 95 per cent. of the timeliness and quality targets set in the established Service Level Agreements.

(b) For the remaining parts of the business (for which Service Level Agreements are not appropriate) the target is to meet at least 95 per cent. of the timeliness and quality targets in each Project Agreement.

(c) For all parts of the business, a key target is to achieve, in the annual Customer Satisfaction Survey, at least 90 per cent. of customers expressing themselves satisfied or better with the timeliness, quality of work, and helpfulness of staff.

Efficiency and use of Resources

(d) The Agency will be expected, by using improved information technology, to produce its routine output more efficiently. The Chief Executive is therefore required to increase efficiency in the production of regular statistical reports by 5 per cent. in 1993-94 and by 10 per cent. over the two years 1993-95. In line with general Ministry of Defence manpower reductions the Chief Executive is, by 1 April 1994, required to complete a reduction in manpower to a level 20 per cent. below the 1990 baseline manning level.

RAF Personnel

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Wimbledon (Dr. Goodson-Wickes) of 10 December 1992, Official Report, column 800, if he can now announce further conclusions about personnel numbers in the Royal Air Force.

Mr. Hanley: All service manpower requirements, including that of the RAF are kept under continuous review.

Over the next two years, the impact of civilianisation, market testing, developments in technology, economies in the support area and other efficiency measures, will lead to a reduced number of personnel required in the RAF. This reduction is made possible largely because of better use of manpower and resources.

We are taking steps to bring down numbers in line with this changing requirement. In part, this can be done by natural turnover and by reducing recruitment. A number of redundancies will also be required to help adjust imbalances between manpower categories: in certain areas there is a surplus of manpower; in other areas there are shortages. The precise number will remain under review, but we estimate that up to 2,200 redundancies will be sought before 1 April 1995. The majority of these redundancies are attributable to factors which do not affect the operational capability of the service.

The same redundancy terms will apply as for the previous phase of redundancies. Volunteers will now be sought. We hope that, as in the past, the majority of those selected for redundancy will be volunteers.

These arrangements will allow the RAF to reduce its support costs while retaining the ability to meet its operational commitments.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to strengthen British forces in the former Yugoslavia theatre of operations.

Mr. Rifkind: Following the adoption of resolution 836 by the United Nations Security Council on 4 June, a squadron of Jaguar aircraft of the Royal Air Force is being offered to NATO to participate if necessary in air operations to support UNPROFOR authorised by paragraph 10 of the resolution.

We have a battalion group deployed in Bosnia as part of UNPROFOR. We have no plans to send additional major units. We maintain contingency plans to provide additional protection for our forces should circumstances warrant, through both maritime and land based assets. To complement these existing arrangements, a number of Army units and individual officers and men are being placed at readiness to move to former Yugoslavia at short notice to provide a range of options should the need to protect our forces make this necessary. It will not be necessary to deploy them to theatre as part of this precautionary plan.

Tomahawk Missiles

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his United States counterpart on the possible procurement of Tomahawk cruise missiles by his Department.

Mr. Aitken: My right hon. and learned Friend has had no such discussions.

Porton Down

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many liaison officers from the United States Department of Defense have been stationed at his Department's chemical and biological warfare establishment at Porton Down since 1963; if he will outline the functions undertaken by such visiting liaison officers; and how many came as part of the technical co-operation programme;

(2) what collaboration has taken place between his Department and the Government of Australia in relation to chemical and biological defence since 1962;

(3) how many achievement awards have been granted under the technical co-operation programme at the chemical and biological defence establishment at Porton Down in each year since 1963; what was the scientific purpose behind each award made; and if he will make a statement on the role and function of the technical co-operation programme.

Mr. Hanley: These are matters for the chief executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment and I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Graham Pearson to Mr. Elfyn Llwyd, dated 10 June 1993

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking how many liaison officers from the United States Department of Defense have been stationed at his Department's Chemical and Biological Warfare Establishment at Porton Down since 1963; if he will outline the functions undertaken by such visiting liaison officers; and how many came as part of the Technical Co-operation Programme (Question 16, Order Paper, 27 May 1993) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. Four US Army liaison officers were stationed at Porton Down from 1963 to 1973. After 1973, liaison has continued at a much reduced level through the US Army Standardisation Office in London. The original US Army liaison officers were first appointed in 1942 and pre-date the Tripartite Conferences and the later TTCP. They have their roots in informal World War II co-operation. Their functions appear to have been to act as a channel for the exchange of information and to observe and participate in relevant trials of interest to the United States.

3. Since 1973, there have been a number of attachments of US civilian and military officers to Porton Down who have been engaged in the work of particular Divisions; they have not had a general liaison responsibility. These attachments have been under either the Technical Co-operation Programme or the UK/US/Canada Memorandum of Understanding on chemical and biological defence. During the past 10 years we have had some six attachments lasting for about a year or longer in addition to short term visits.

Letter from Graham Pearson to Mr. Elfyn Llwyd, dated 10 June 1993:

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what collaboration has taken place between his Department and the Government of Australia in relation to chemical and biological defence since 1962 (Question 18, Order Paper, 27 May 1993) has been passed to me to answer as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. Collaboration between the United Kingdom and the Government of Australia on chemical and biological defence has taken place under the following international agreements which include chemical and biological defence in their scope:

a. The United Kingdom-United States-Canada-Australia American, British and Canadian Armies (ABCA) agreement between the armies of the four countries. This includes a group known as the Quadripartite Working Group (QWG) which has a Panel on NBC defence.
b. The United Kingdom-United States-Canada-Australia Air Standardisation Coordinating Committee which has a sub group addressing CB defence.
c. The Technical Cooperation Programme which involves the United Kingdom, the United States, Canada, Australia and New Zealand is concerned with collaboration in defence research and has a sub group that is active on CB defence.
d. The Anglo-Australian Memorandum of Understanding on Research (AAMOUR) which was preceded by the Australian/UK Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in Defence Research and Development and which contained some CB defence related topics.
e. A Memorandum of Agreement between the UK and Australia relating to a joint programme of reseach, investigation and material testing at the JTTRE which was an out-station of the Materiels Research Laboratory (MRL) of the Australian Department of Defence and is now designated as MRL-Queensland.

3. In addition, I would refer you to the replies to several recent questions on the testing of chemical and biological defence equipment in Australia (29 June 1992, Offical Report, Column 412; 16 July 1992, Official Report, Column 937; and 1 December 1992, Official Report, Column 162).

Letter from Graham Pearson to Mr. Elfyn Llwyd, dated 10 June 1993:

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking how many achievement awards have been granted under the Technical Co-operation Programme at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down in each year since 1963; what was the scientific purpose behind each award made; and if he will make a statement on the role and function of the Technical Co-operation Programme (Question 21, Order Paper, 27 May 1993) has been passed to me to answer as Chief Executive of the Chemcial and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. At their 25th Anniversary meeting in October 1983 the Non-Atomic Military Research and Development (NAMRAD) Principals agreed that they should establish an award to mark outstanding collaboration in defence research undertaken under the auspices of the Technical Co-operation Programme (TTCP). The basic purpose of the award is to provide recognition to defence scientists and visibility to defence research which adds to the defence postures of all countries. Only outstanding co-operative research work is considered for such awards and must represent original research which can provide breakthroughs in defence technologies. The first award was made in 1985 and there have been three awards to CBDE scientists as follows:

(a) In 1985 an award was made for research in the field of "Ion mobility spectrometry for chemical warfare agent detection".
(b) In 1990 an award was made for research on the chemcial and biological threat of aerosolized agents.
(c) In 1991 an award was made for work on the specification for ASC/TEDA charcoal.

3. Insofar as to the role and function of the Technical Cooperation Programme are concerned, I would refer you to the reply given by the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, The Right Honourable Archie Hamilton, MP, of 1 December 1992, Official Report, column 160 which sets out the original purpose behind the TTCP. The Technical Co-operation Programme provides a means of acquainting the participating countries with each others defence research and development programmes so that each national programme may be adjusted and planned in recognition of the efforts of the other nations. This process supplements each programme with the knowledge and capabilities of the other countries, avoids unnecessary duplication among the national programmes, promotes concerted action to identify and close important gaps in the collective technology base, and assure to each country the best technical information available for advice to their Governments and military forces on all matters related to defence research and development.

Bowman Project

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the allocation of the development contracts for the Bowman project.

Mr. Aitken: I expect to announce the award of the contracts for the project definition phase of the Bowman combat radio system within the next two to three months.

Warheads (Plutonium)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) of 24 May, Official Report, column 456, what is his estimate of the amount of fissile plutonium contained in the 12,000 warheads to which he refers.

Mr. Hanley: It is difficult to give a precise figure but about 30 to 36 tonnes of fissile plutonium are contained in the 12,000 warheads.

Nuclear Non-proliferation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what matters were discussed and what decisions taken in regard to nuclear non-proliferation in NATO's defence planning committee and nuclear planning group in Brussels on 25 to 26 May.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 17 of the communiqué issued after the meeting, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

F3 Tornado

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the number of F3 Tornados to be modified under the Airwork Services contract prior to the termination of the Airwork Ltd. F3 Tornado modification contract.

Mr. Aitken: Up to 134 Tornado F3 aircraft were due to be modified under the contract with Airwork Ltd.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he expects to decide on legal action against Airwork Ltd. with respect to damage caused to F3 Tornados in the course of the modification contract carried out at RAF St. Athan in 1992-93;

(2) what estimates he has made of the cost of rectification of the damage done in the course of the F3 Tornado modification contract carried out by the Airwork Ltd. at RAF St. Athan.

Mr. Aitken: The Department intends to claim against Airwork Ltd. for the cost of rectifying damage to Tornado F3 aircraft and other financial penalties arising from Airwork's failure properly to execute the aircraft modification contract. It will take some time to establish the full extent of these costs.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the commission given to Royal Aeronautical Establishment, Farnborough, with respect to the damage caused to F3 Tornados in the course of the Airwork Ltd. modification contract carried out at RAF St. Athan in 1992-93.

Mr. Aitken: The Defence Research Agency has been tasked by my Department to provide independent advice on the structural assessment which has been requested from the aircraft design authority—Deutsche Aerospace —for the relevant sections of the airframe.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact on United Kindom defence capabilities of the grounding of non-airworthy F3 Tornados damaged in the course of the modification contract carried out by Airwork Ltd. at RAF St. Athan.

Mr. Aitken: It has no significant impact on United Kingdom defence capabilities. The fleet strength includes an allowance for aircraft which are lost or grounded as a result of accidents or in-service modification programmes.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations were made by Airwork Ltd. regarding the termination of the contract for F3 Tornado modification work carried out at RAF St. Athan in relation to the company's maintenance contracts in the middle east.

Mr. Aitken: I am not aware of any such representations.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations were made by Airwork Ltd. for an extension of the turn-round time for F3 Tornado modification work carried out at RAF St. Athan; what response was made by the RAF; and what was the final decision in relation to possible extension.

Mr. Aitken: Officials in my Department did receive representations from Airwork Ltd. requesting a relaxation in the turn-round time requirement of this contract. These were being considered at the time the contract was terminated.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what investigations were undertaken into the ultimate ownership and credit worthiness of Airwork Ltd. of Hurn airport, Bournemouth, before the award of the contract for modification of the F3 Tornados for 1992-93.

Mr. Aitken: Airwork Ltd. is on the defence contractor's list, and as such has been the subject of our normal inquiries as to ownership and credit worthiness. We are satisfied that the company's financial position was adequate for a contract of this nature.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the termination of the Airwork Ltd. contract for F3 Tornado modification.

Mr. Aitken: The contract with Airwork Ltd. for Tornado F3 fatigue modification work was terminated when it was established that the company's performance was sufficiently unsatisfactory to justify such action on the grounds of breach of contract.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals he has for assessment of the relative value of quality assurance certificate ISO9001 as against active quality assurance trials in subcontracted RAF aircraft modification work.

Mr. Aitken: My Department's investigation into the contract with Airwork Ltd. for modification of RAF F3 Tornados will include a review of the adequacy of the quality assurance arrangements.

Combat Aircraft (Modifications)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals he has to re-assess the use of market testing, privatisation, compulsory competitive tendering, and contractorisation in modification work on RAF combat aircraft; and what proposals he has to include RAF in-house tenders in all such combat aircraft modification work.

Mr. Aitken: I have no plans to reassess these programmes which are intended to achieve better value for money from defence expenditure. It remains our policy to contractorise work which could be done by industry where it is cost effective to do so in a way that fully meets our requirements; we will encourage in-house bids where appropriate. We continue to place a heavy emphasis on ensuring that work carried out by contractors meets our exacting quality standards, and we will take firm action where we judge that this is not the case.

Iraq

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 510, if he has now obtained a copy of the CIA report on Iraq's military capabilities.

Mr. Hanley: No; although requested, a copy has not yet been passed to the United Kingdom.

Military Presence Overseas

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria are used for deciding which countries retain a British military presence and in which this presence is curtailed or abandoned.

Mr. Hanley: British forces are stationed overseas to ensure the protection and security of our dependent territories; as part of our contribution to the North Atlantic Alliance; and to contribute to promoting the United Kingdom's wider security interests through the maintenance of international peace and stability. These correspond to the three overlapping defence roles set out in the 1992 "Statement on the Defence Estimates". Overseas commitments are entered into, adjusted or ended only after lengthy consideration, and where appropriate consultation, on a case-by-case basis.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the annual costs of retaining a British military presence in each overseas country in which United Kingdom troops were stationed in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Hanley: I will write to the hon. Member.

Brunei

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost of (a) British military personnel and (b) British military equipment in Brunei in (i) 1979, (ii) 1985 and (iii) the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Hanley: The costs of military personnel or equipment stationed in Brunei under the current memorandum of understanding with HM the Sultan of Brunei are met in full by the Government of Brunei. Records of the costs for these forces are not available in the form requested but the following information is available by financial year:

£ million

	1981-82	1984-85	1985-86	1992-93
Personnel	3·6	6·1	9·0	11·0
Equipment	1·1	2·9	[1]3·2	4·2
Total	4·7	9·0	12·2	15·2

[1] This figure includes elements that are not included in the equipment costs for other years but which are not separately identifiable.

The costs of the Army's jungle training school in Brunei are met by the Ministry of Defence. The available full cost figures for this facility are as follows:

£ million

	1989-90	1990-91
Total cost	2·3	1·9

Desert Storm Syndrome

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the United States authorities on the subject of Desert Storm syndrome.

Mr. Hanley: There have been no such discussions.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will establish an investigation into the illness known as Desert Storm syndrome amongst members of the British armed forces who served in the Gulf conflict.

Mr. Hanley: The health of all service personnel is monitored as a matter of routine and regular medical checks are carried out. There is currently no evidence of members of the British armed forces who served in the Gulf conflict suffering from any unexplained symptoms which would call for such an investigation.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the British armed forces who served in the gulf war have reported sickness popularly known as Desert Storm syndrome; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The armed forces medical services are not aware of any such reports being made by individual service patients. Nor are the armed forces medical services aware of changes in patterns of morbidity among the United Kingdom service population which would indicate the sickness popularly known as Desert Storm syndrome.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the buildings currently owned or rented by his Department, together with (a) the estimated value, (b) the annual rent and (c) the annual maintenance cost of each building in the current financial year.

Mr. John M. Taylor: On 1 April 1993, the Lord Chancellor's Department occupied some 512 buildings. These comprise:

Departmental Estate[1]		Common User Estate[2]
Freehold	Leasehold	Freehold	Leasehold
138	95	72	207

[1] Departmental Estate: LCD has full responsibility for maintenance of these buildings and meeting the terms and conditions of any leaseholds, including payment of rent to landlords.

[2] Common User Estate: The responsibility for meeting the terms and conditions of any leaseholds, including payment of rent to landlords, is with Property Holdings. LCD has some maintenance liability but the extent of this will vary according to the maintenance option appropriate to each building.

Due to the substantial number of buildings occupied, these have not been listed, but a full list is available should the hon. Member require it.

Estimated value is not available. To carry out a full valuation would incur disproportionate costs. In common with most other Government Departments, my Department is required to pay annually the full opportunity cost rent to Property Holdings for all properties except those held leasehold on the departmental estate. For the latter, the actual rent due under the terms of the lease is paid direct to landlords. If this is lower than the opportunity cost rent, the balance is payable to Property Holdings. This ensures that we are fully aware of the estimated current market rent of all accommodation occupied. In 1993-94, our opportunity cost rent and actual liability is expected to be some £76 million. We also expect to spend some £11 million on maintaining our estate.

EDUCATION

School Meals

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the level of public expenditure on the school meal service in each year since 1979 in cash and real terms.

Mr. Forth: Expenditure on school meals by local education authorities in England is given in the table.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will publish a table showing the latest figures for the number and proportion of children receiving school meals broken down into (a) paid and (b) free in each region of England.

Mr. Forth: The information requested is shown in the table.

Drug and Alcohol Advisers

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) how many health education co-ordinators advising on drugs and alcohol have been funded by his Department in Cheshire since 1979;

(2) how many health education co-ordinators advising on drugs and alcohol have been funded by his Department in the whole of the United Kingdom since 1979.

Mr. Forth: The Department made education support grant to local education authorities in England for drug education from 1986-87 to 1989-90, and for preventive health education from 1990-91 to 1992-93. During that seven-year period, most LEAs, including Cheshire, used the grant to employ at least one drug or health education co-ordinator.

Expenditure

Sir Rhodes Boyson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the total amount of expenditure on services within the responsibility of his Department in (a) England, (b) Greater London and (c) the south-east, excluding Greater London, for each year since 1982-83 and his estimate for 1992-93, distinguishing between current and capital expenditure and excluding local authority credit approvals/capital allocations.

Mr. Forth: The information is not wholly available in the form requested. For part (a), table A gives details of central and local government expenditure on education in England since 1982-83. For parts (b) and (c), figures are readily available for local authority expenditure by region only from 1989-90: these are shown in table B. It is not possible to estimate the proportion of central Government expenditure relating to these regions.

Notes to Table A

Central Government

1. Figures include grants for universities in Great Britain distributed by the University Grants Committee (up to 1988-89) and the Universities Funding Council. Other figures are for England only.
2. Figures exclude expenditure on mandatory awards and specific grants, which appear in the Local Government column.

Local Government

3. Figures for 1991-92 and 1992-93 are taken from local authority RA returns as submitted in 1991-92.
4. Figures include some spending financed by grants which are the responsibility of other Government Departments—TVEI, work-related FE. Figures also include receipts from PCFC and mandatory awards. Figures for mandatory awards include expenditure in Wales.
5. Figures for 1990-91 exclude £366 million in unspent balances held by schools under LMS schemes.
6. Figures for capital are gross capital spending and include schools, FE and Youth and other educational services.

Table B
Total local authority expenditure on education (£ million) (cash)

	Recurrent	Capital	Recurrent	Capital

Notes to Table B

[1] Figures for recurrent are net recurrent expenditure, which includes total expenditure other than capital financing charges, less income other than from Government grants. Figures are drawn from local authority revenue outturn reports and therefore those for 1991-92 are not directly comparable with the corresponding figures in Table A.

[2] "Greater London" consists of the 13 inner London LEAs (ILEA for 1989-90) and the 20 outer London LEAs. "South East" consists of Bedfordshire, Berkshire, Buckinghamshire, East Sussex, Essex, Hampshire, Hertfordshire, Isle of Wight, Kent, Oxfordshire, Surrey and West Sussex LEAs.

Education Authority Staff

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many (a) officers and (b) other persons are employed by each education authority in England and Wales.

Mr. Forth [pursuant to his reply, 8 June 1993, c. 206.]: Tables showing the number of teachers and lecturers and of other staff employed in the education service of each local authority have been placed in the Library. These have been compiled by the Local Government Management Board from the March 1992 joint staffing watch return, and cover all staff in the LEA-maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools sector, special and further education, and central administration.

WALES

Welsh Language Board

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the terms of reference, remuneration, length of appointment and working hours of the chairman-designate of the Welsh Language Board.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Subject to Parliament's approval of the Welsh Language Bill, Lord Elis-Thomas will be appointed chairman for a three-year term beginning on the date on which the board is established. His work as chairman will involve a time commitment of two days a week and remuneration of £20,544. I will, in due course, issue the board and its chairman with broad strategic guidance based on the framework which the Welsh Language Bill establishes.

Urban Investment Grant

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all projects in receipt of urban investment grant in each of the past eight quarterly periods, the amount of grant given and the value of the development, the estimated jobs to be created and the business names and addresses of the companies making the application.

Mr. Redwood: A list of all projects in receipt of urban investment grant in the last eight quarterly periods and the amount of grant given is set out in table 1, together with a list in table 2 giving the name of the developer, total amount of grant approved, private sector investment and estimated jobs to be created. The addresses of the applicants have not been included, as it is not the Department's policy to divulge such information.

School Transport

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to review safety practices for school transport.

Sir Wyn Roberts: It is the responsibility of school authorities to satisfy themselves that the school transport operatives with whom they contract maintain and operate their vehicles safely. Nevertheless, the Government are concerned to improve the safety of children travelling on school transport and continually seeks ways to ensure their safety. In particular, regulations are to be introduced shortly to require certain buses, carrying children to and from school, to display a distinctive warning sign. In addition, the Government are pressing the European Community to require seat belts to be fitted to all seats on new coaches and minibuses.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many maintenance assessment forms have been issued by the Child Support Agency since 5 April; how many completed forms have been returned to the agency; and how many maintenance assessments have been calculated and put into operation.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Mrs. Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Barry Jones, dated 10 June 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Child Support Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how many maintenance assessment forms have been issued by the Agency since 5 April, how many completed forms have been returned to the Agency and how many maintenance assessments have been calculated and put into action.

It is as yet very early days in the setting up of the Agency but we do have reliable figures for the month of April which, allowing for the Easter break, covered the Agency's first 17 working days. For that period, from 5 April to 30 April, more than 45,000 Maintenance Application Forms were issued and over 19,000 completed forms were returned. Twenty-five maintenance assessments were calculated and the parents notified.

The process of assessing maintenance under the Child Support Act of its nature takes some time, as it involves first the parent with care completing a form (the Maintenance Assessment Form) to enable the absent parent to be traced and sent a second form (the Maintenance Enquiry Form) for completion. Both forms need to be checked for accuracy before a computer assessment can be made.

In a straightforward case, when both parents reply quickly and fully and supply all the necessary information, we have estimated that it will take 6-8 weeks from the date of application to assess the maintenance which is payable. Many cases are not straightforward, however, and further enquiries are necessary from either or both parents. This lengthens clearance times but I am confident the Agency has got off to a successful start.

I hope this reply is useful. It will be published in the Official Record and a copy placed in the Library.

Social Security Tribunal

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give his reasons for exercising his power under regulation 37 of the Social Security (Claims and Payments) Regulations 1987 not to carry out a decision of the social security tribunal in the case of a Woolwich constituent, NI. No. NA 46 48 05 A.

Mr. Burt: The administration of family credit is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. John Austin-Walker, dated 11 June 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking if he will give his reasons for exercising his power under Regulation 37 of the Social Security (Claims and Payments) Regulations 1987 not to carry out a decision of the Social Security Tribunal in the case of a Woolwich constituent, NI No. NA 46 48 05 A.

As you will be aware, your constituent made a claim to Family Credit on 25 February 1992 which was subsequently disallowed by the Adjudication Officer, and was the subject of three independent tribunal hearings between 29 July 1992 and 7 April 1993; the result of which was that the Tribunal ruled that your constituent was to be treated as an agent of the Post Office. This was contrary to a Commissioner's Decision (RFC 1/93) which ruled that sub-postmasters are to be treated as employees of the Post Office. The Adjudication Officer considered that the Tribunal had erred in law by not taking account of the Commissioner's decision and therefore exercised his right under Regulation 37 of the Social Security (Claims and Payments) Regulations 1987 by seeking further advice from the office of the Central Adjudication Services with a view to ascertaining if any aspects of the Tribunal decision could give rise to a further appeal to the Commissioner. In this case however, the Central Adjudication Services (CAS) considered that the Tribunal had erred in law, but that the circumstances of the case were the same as the existing Commissioner's Decision and there was therefore no need to seek further leave to appeal, and the Tribunal decision is to be implemented. I shall write to you separately and in greater detail about this matter.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Disability Working Allowance

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will provide a breakdown by number and percentage of the total number of (a) initial and (b) renewal claims for disability working allowance received by his Department that were refused on the grounds that (i) the claimant was not in remunerative work, (ii) the claimant's income was above the limit, (iii) the claimant was not in receipt of a qualifying benefit, (iv) the claimant was receiving family credit, (v) the joint income of the claimant and his or her partner exceeded the limit, (vi) the claimant was working less than 16 hours a week and (vii) for other reasons;

(2) how many people are currently getting the disability working allowance; and if he will break this total down by (a) average age, (b) sex, (c) marital status, (d) average hourly earnings, (e) average hours worked, (f) householder status and (g) qualifying benefit.

Mr. Scott: The administration of disability working allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 11 June 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking (1) if he will provide a breakdown by number and percentage of the total number of (a) initial and (b) renewal claims for disability working allowance received by his Department that were refused on the grounds that (i) the claimant was not in remunerative work, (ii) the claimant's income was above the limit, (iii) the claimant was not in receipt of a qualifying benefit, (iv) the claimant was receiving family credit, (v) the joint income of the claimant and his or her partner exceeded the limit, (vi) the claimant was working less than 16 hours a week and (vii) for other reasons; and (2) how many people are currently getting the disability working allowance; and if he will break this total down by (a) average age, (b) sex, (c) marital status, (d) average hourly earnings, (e) average hours worked, (f) householder status and (g) qualifying benefit.

In answer to your first question the majority of the information is routinely placed in the Library with the exception of that relating to persons receiving Family Credit (FC) which is detailed below.

	Total of disallowed applications to Disability Working Allowance (DWA)	Number disallowed because customer receiving Family Credit (FC) expressed as percentage of total
New claims	21,375	583 (2·7)
Renewals	325	0
Others	938	11 (1·2)

All figures are as at 26 March 1993.

In answer to your second question the information is as follows with the exception of householder status which is not routinely recorded.

- Average age = 37

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many staff have been allocated to the home visiting service; and how many home visits have been made to date by Benefits Agency staff in connection with claims for disability living allowance or attendance allowance received on or after 3 February 1992 by each disability benefit centre and in total;

(2) how many people who claimed disability living allowance or attendance allowance on or after 3 February 1992 had still not heard the outcome of their claim by 1 April.

Mr. Scott: The administration of disability living allowance and attendance allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 11 June 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to the points raised in your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking (i) how many staff have been allocated to the Home Visiting Service; and how many visits have been made to date by Benefits Agency staff in connection with claims for disability living allowance or attendance allowance received on or after 3 February 1992 by each disability benefit centre and in total, and (ii) how many people who claimed disability living allowance or attendance allowance on or after the 3 February had still not heard the outcome of their claim by 1 April.

Firstly, I should explain that the staff on the Customer Service Sections in the Disability Benefit Centres (DBCs) are involved in general duties to help customers, including forms completion work for both benefits. This may involve telephoning the customer to help in completing a claim form or it may involve a visit. Currently there are around 170 staff working on the Customer Service sections in the DBCs. Since February 1992 to date 5,085 home visits have been made to assist in the completion of claim forms. We are unable to provide a breakdown between DLA and AA65+. The breakdown between DBCs is shown in Annex 1.

The number of DLA and AA claims outstanding at 31 March 1993 is shown below. This information also includes special Rules claims. I have also included the number of DLA and AA claims outstanding at 31 May 1993, which you may find helpful.

	31 March	31 May
DLA New Claims	32,662	28,050
DLA Top Up Claims	9,615	1,869
AA New Claims	38,725	29,657
Total	[1]81,002	59,576

[1]This figure represents approximately 4 weeks intake of DLA and AA claims

I hope you will find this reply helpful. A copy of this letter will appear in the Official Report. A copy will also be placed in the Library.

Occupational Pensions

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average value of an occupational pension in 1979 and in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Hague: It is estimated that, at 1989 prices, the average value of occupational pensions was, £37·50 per week in 1979, and £55 per week in 1989, the latest year for which figures are available. The estimates are based on the 1979 and 1989 family expenditure surveys.

Family Credit

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress is being made with the review of the provisions governing family credit claims by self-employed persons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The social policy research unit expects to publish its report on the assessment of self-employed earnings for the purpose of family credit claims in the summer.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Population Statistics

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the latest estimates of those aged 17 years and over, plus 63 per cent. of those aged 16 years and over, for each district council area and parliamentary constituency, together in each case with the equivalent year's electoral registration figures, also expressed as a percentage of these population figures.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested, in respect of district council areas, is set out in the table. Final mid-year population estimates for 1991 and 1992 will be available in the autumn. Mid-year population estimates provide information only to district council level. It is not possible to provide corresponding information at parliamentary constituency level.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will refer to the Department of Education in Northern Ireland and to education and library boards the research review, "Small Rural Primary Schools", which was commissioned by the Rural Development Council; and if the Department of Education, Northern Ireland will be making a formal and considered response.

Mr. Ancram: Copies of the report have been received by the Department and by the education and library boards. The Department is examining the report and will take it into account as part of its wider review of the pattern of school provision.

School Pupils

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many pupils are at each of (a) the primary and (b) the secondary schools in the constituency of Newry and Armagh in (i) the maintained, (ii) the controlled and (iii) the integrated sectors of education in respect of the year 1992-93;

(2) how many pupils are at each of (a) the primary and (b) the secondary schools in the constituency of Strangford in (i) the maintained, (ii) the controlled and (iii) the integrated sectors of education in respect of the year 1992-93.

Mr. Ancram: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to my letter to him dated 4 June 1993 which contains the latest information available on schools enrolments in these two constituencies.

Mr. Ancram: The information is set out in the table.

Northern Ireland Electricity

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will give global figures for the cost of the flotation of Northern Ireland Electricity; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how much the Department of Economic Development spent on privatising Northern Ireland Electricity.

Mr. Atkins: The cost of the flotation of Northern Ireland Electricity will be reported to Parliament in the usual way once the sale is complete.

ENVIRONMENT

Social Housing

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will establish a working group to investigate the potential for channelling further private finance into social housing projects and the monitoring of such investment.

Mr. Baldry: Making use of private finance is an important element in our housing programmes. Our objective has been to increase the proportion of private funding in order to obtain the maximum benefit from the public resources available. For example, housing associations, which are the main providers of new social housing, are required to raise part of their development funds from the private rented sector. Around £2·5 million in private finance has been raised by housing associations since 1988; and it is hoped that a further £3 billion will be raised over the four years from 1992-93.

In addition, some £1·5 billion of private finance has been raised as a result of the large scale transfer of local authority properties to housing associations. This finance is being used to improve existing stock, to repay debt, and to develop new social housing. Other programmes, such as estate action, housing action trusts and city challenge, aim to foster public and private co-operation in the regeneration of urban areas.

We continue to encourage investment in the rented sector and to consider how to maximise the use of private sector funding and expertise in meeting housing need.

City Challenge

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he has given to enabling winners of city challenge to spend their allocated total budget over five years according to need and the progress of schemes rather than in five equal annual amounts.

Mr. Baldry: City challenge expenditure is subject to the annuality rules applied to all funds voted by Parliament under the Appropriation Act.

The Department makes every effort to manage city challenge resources flexibly to accommodate the difficulties that may be faced by partnerships in matching progress on the ground exactly to their annual £7·5 million funding allocations. Reserve programmes are approved annually in order to accommodate slippage. Underspends which emerge in the year are offset wherever possible by expediting programmes in other city challenge areas. We are considering whether further flexibility is possible.

Ordnance Survey

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list by location the Ordnance Survey triangulation pillars that are still waiting to be adopted;

(2) what criteria he has laid down before organisations and members of the public can adopt Ordnance Survey triangulation pillars; how they go about adopting them; what is the cost of adoption per pillar; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Responsibility for this subject has been delegated to the executive agency. I have asked Professor Rhind, chief executive for Ordnance Survey, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Professor David Rhind to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 9 June 1993:

I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Questions about the Ordnance Survey scheme for adopting triangulation (trig) pillars.

The criteria we have adopted, providing the landowner's agreement can be obtained, are:

the first person or organisation to lodge an application for the adoption of a particular pillar will be permitted to do so, subject to various conditions (see below);

the applicant must agree to the terms of a Code of Practice drawn up for the purpose (copy enclosed);

the applicant must sign a memorandum of agreement with both Ordnance Survey and the landowner (copy enclosed).

Anyone wishing to adopt a particular trig pillar simply has to write to Ordnance Survey registering an interest. Ordnance Survey will respond enclosing a copy of "Guide to Adopting a Trig Pillar" (copy enclosed) and, on receipt of the applicant's confirmation of a wish to proceed, will initiate action to obtain the landowner's agreement, leading to the signing of the memorandum of agreement. Although Ordnance Survey incurs some administration cost, the process is free to the applicant.

When I wrote to you on 27 October 1992 the scheme had only recently been introduced. It is proving to be quite time-consuming to make the necessary arrangements with both landowners and applicants and, at the time of writing, no adoptions have been completed. However, we have made 1,983 provisional allocations (out of a total of 4,904 available) and expect to finalise many of these in the next few weeks. There remain available some 2,920 pillars but this number is reducing slowly on a day-by-day basis. A list of those pillars still available will therefore be a very long one and I should be grateful if you would confirm that you would like a complete listing before I arrange for its preparation.

Sellafield Discharges

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from Nordic Environment Ministers regarding proposals to increase permitted discharge levels from the Sellafield nuclear plant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: I have received representations on this matter from the Swedish Environment Minister, in his capacity of the chairman of the Nordic Council of Ministers, and the Danish Environment Minister.

THORP

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has regarding representations made to the Paris Commission on the proposed operation of the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: I have received information on a number of such representations.

Sizewell B

Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he is making for ministerial decisions relating to Sizewell B power station.

Mr. Gummer: Sizewell B is in my constituency, and I have accordingly delegated responsibility for all ministerial decisions to my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Planning.

MINIS 14 Documents

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish his Department's MINIS 14 documents.

Mr. Gummer: I am today publishing MINIS 14 and a set has been placed in the Library.

Small Cetaceans

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what specific steps his Department has taken, or intends to take, to conserve and manage the habitat of small cetaceans, in line with the United Kingdom's commitments under the annex to the 1992 agreement on the conservation of small cetaceans of the Baltic and North seas; and what steps he is taking to prevent acoustic disturbance.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 7 June 1993]: The Government strongly support the agreement. The United Kingdom was one of the first countries to sign it last year and although the agreement is not yet in force, we have already agreed to apply its principles in all British waters.

Cetaceans already receive considerable protection in British waters under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. A number of other initiatives are also under way which contribute to the conservation of small cetaceans. These include controls of discharges into the sea; restrictions on exploration activity at sea; research into ways of enhancing the acoustic detectability of fishing nets to reduce by-catches, and research funded by my Department for recording cetaceans stranded on the British coast and investigating causes of death.

The new agreement contains provisions to encourage joint research. In considering whether further conservation measures are necessary it is essential that we learn more about the abundance and distribution of the various species of small cetaceans present in European waters. For that reason, the Government announced last year that we would provide £110,000 towards a major survey of small cetaceans in the North sea, including the channel. The project is led by the sea mammal research unit—SMRU—based in Cambridge. The EC and several other range states are also providing resources and the survey is due to be conducted next year.

The SMRU is also to chair a working group on acoustic disturbance to small cetaceans. This has been established by my Department under the arrangements for the implementation of the new agreement.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the United Kingdom Government expect to ratify the agreement on the small cetaceans of the Baltic and North seas signed in New York on 17 March 1992.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 11 June 1993]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is currently preparing an instrument of ratification for the agreement and will be depositing it with the United Nations shortly.

EMPLOYMENT

Employment Service

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will make a statement on the practice of declaring staff in the counselling service surplus to requirements; what plans there are to make the policy uniform throughout the United Kingdom; what is the long-term situation for those staff who have been declared surplus; and what effect this will have on the career structure within the Employment Service;

(2) if he will make a statement on the prospect of redundancies occurring within the Employment Service within the next 12 months;

(3) whether the present treatment of surplus staff in the Glasgow and Tayside and Fife region is a national pilot project;

(4) what plans he has for the enhancement of early retirement within the Employment Service.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. B. Price to Mr. Ian Davidson, dated 11 June 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, it is the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the Agency's Chief Executive to answer Parliamentary Questions about relevant operational matters. In his absence, I am replying to your questions to the Secretary of State about:

- surplus personnel in the Employment Service;
- what plans exist for redundancies;
- whether the present treatment of staff in Glasgow and Tayside and Fife is a national pilot and
- what plans there are for enhancements to early retirement.

Certain aspects of advisory work in the Employment Service are being regraded resulting in a temporary surplus of staff at Executive Officer grade. In common with current policy operated by the Department of Employment every effort will be made to redeploy these and any other staff. This may include offering people throughout the organisation the opportunity to apply for voluntary early retirement on enhanced terms. In the meantime, dependent upon local circumstances, some may be asked to do the work of more junior grades on a temporary basis. The deployment of these people is likely to have the effect of slowing down promotion opportunities in some places. There are no plans currently for redundancies in the Employment Service.

As decided by the Administration Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the proposed effect of the Phillips review on the present surplus situation in the Employment Service.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. B. Price to Mr. Ian Davidson, dated 11 June 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, it is the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the Agency's Chief Executive to answer Parliamentary Questions about relevant operational matters. In his absence, I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State about the effect of Phillip's Review on surpluses within the Employment Service.

The Phillip's review of the Employment Service organisational structure was undertaken to identify ways of sharpening the management of Employment Service performance and further increasing the value for money it achieves in delivering its surpluses, if any, would result from implementing its recommendations.

As decided by the Administration Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to Written Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

Counselling Service

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what assessment he has made of the effect on service to the unemployed of cuts in the grading of the counselling service and changes in the time taken to interview clients;

(2) what proposals he has to enhance the counselling service supplied to the unemployed;

(3) what policy considerations underlay his predecessors decision to regrade the counselling service in the Employment Service and to institute a two-tier service.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. B. Price to Mr. Ian Davidson, dated 11 June 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, it is the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the Agency's Chief Executive to answer Parliamentary Questions about relevant operational matters. In his absence I am replying to your questions to the Secretary of State about:

what assessment she has made of the effect on service to the unemployed of cuts in the grading of the Counselling Service and changes in the time taken to interview clients;

what proposals she has to enhance the Counselling Service supplied to the unemployed and what policy considerations underlay her decision to regrade the Counselling Service in the Employment Service and to institute a two tier service.

Ever since the Restart programme of advisory interviews was first introduced in 1986 we have continually developed and enhanced the service we offer to our clients. As part of this process of enhancing our advisory services, we took a policy decision that, as from April 1993, the people who provide these services in our local offices should be re-organised into Back To Work Teams. These teams are made up of a mixture of people, at Executive Officer and Administrativeon Officer levels. Adopting this approach means that we are now able to offer clients different levels of interview according to their needs. For some clients basic advice will meet those needs but for the others, where the initial interview uncovers deeper issues or where the client asks for more help, we will be able to offer in depth advisory interviews. In addition we have ensured that all clients will receive a full diagnostic interview at two key points in their period of unemployment; namely six months and one year. Back To Work teams will also help us provide a more coherent service. This is because clients will see a member of the same team at all their advisory and signing visits and we will make sure that these contacts build on one another. Each member of a team will be able to provide clients with relevant information and advice about their benefit claim and the jobs and programme opportunities available locally.

For these reasons we consider Back To Work teams represent the most cost effective way of providing all our clients with a comprehensive range of advisory services tailored to their needs, while allowing the Employment Service to live within its financial means.

We will be assessing the effectiveness of Back To Work teams throughout the year and will take whatever action to further enhance them as necessary. You may be encouraged to know that early indications from our local office people are that our clients have reacted well to the service they are receiving under the new arrangements.

I hope that this is helpful.

As decided by the Administration Committee of the House of Commons Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Employment what assessment he has made of disparities in the policy within the Scottish region on regrading of the counselling service in the Employment Service.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. B. Price to Mr. Ian Davidson, dated 11 June 1993:

In his absence, I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State about what assessment she has made of disparities in the policy within the Scottish Region on regarding of the Counselling Service in the Employment Service.

Changes to our advisory services in Scotland have been on the same lines as those in England and Wales. Ever since the Restart Programme of advisory interviews was first introduced in 1986 we have continually developed and enhanced the service we offer to our clients. As part of this process of enhancing our advisory services, we took a policy decision that, as from April 1993, the people who provide these services in our local offices should be re-organised into Back To Work Teams. You may be encouraged to know that early indications from our local office people are that our clients have reacted well to the service they are receiving under the new arrangements.

Regarding the arrangements which have been made in Scotland I should explain that it is an important aspect of our way of working that local managers should have flexibility, within our national framework, to vary their organisation in line with local circumstances. If you have a specific issue about the arrangements in Scotland please contact me or our Director for Scotland, Mr. Alan Brown. His address is Employment Service Regional Office for Scotland, Argyle House, 3 Lady Lawson Street, Edinburgh, EH3 9SD telephone, 031 229 9191.

I hope this is helpful.

As decided by the Administration Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the cost to date and the expected future cost of his Department's market-testing programme; how many staff are engaged full-time in work relating to market testing; which firms of consultants have been used in connection with the market-testing programme; and how they were selected.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 7 June 1993]: The Employment Department group's market-testing programme is being developed within existing resources.

It is not possible at this stage to given an estimate of likely savings from the Department's market testing programme. Annual returns across Whitehall indicate, however, that in previous years savings arising from market testing have typically been around 25 per cent. of the original cost even when the activity has remained in-house.

Fifty-one staff are currently employed full time across the group to deliver a programme covering over 1,900 staff and with a value of £72 million.

The Department has used the following consultants to advise on its market testing programme and all were selected as a result of a competitive tender exercise:

Coopers and Lybrand
Ernst and Young
John Pearce
KPMG
PA Consulting
Price Waterhouse

Benefit Week

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to review the benefit week and associated signing arrangements in respect of protection of the interests of those claimants who are alphabetically disadvantaged.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 8 June 1993]: Responsibility for the subject or the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Sir Cranley Onslow, dated 11 June 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to write to you direct to respond to your Parliamentary Question to him about any plans he has to review the benefit week and associated signing arrangements in the interests of clients who may be disadvantaged by the existing procedures. This is something which falls within the responsibilities he has delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

If a client undertakes part-time work there are occasions when the amount of benefit they are entitled to depends on their signing day and I am assuming this also relates to your question. This is because unemployment benefit is disallowed where earnings for days falling in a benefit week exceed the weekly lower earnings limit, currently £56, and a client's signing day determines their benefit week.

Although the rules concerning part-time work are drawn from Social Security legislation, there are some flexibilities available to us and we are always looking at ways of improving our procedures in order to offer a high quality service to our clients. We have recently carried out a review of our part-time worker procedures and several recommendations have been made to improve the service we provide.

We are working towards introducing nationally the benefit week for regular part-time workers to end on Saturday, when all clients would be affected by the rules in the same way. This has the further advantage that it corresponds with the week used to assess the award of National Insurance contribution credits.

I hope this is helpful.

As decided by the Adminstration Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Farmers and Gangmasters

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action the Inland Revenue proposes to take to ensure that farmers and gangmasters comply with their statutory responsibilities.

Mr. Dorrell: The Inland Revenue will continue, where possible, to use its statutory powers to ensure that farmers and gangmasters, who make use of temporary work forces, properly account for both their own and their employees' tax and national insurance liabilities.

Correspondence

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth might receive an answer to his letter of 1 April referring to Mr. P. R. Lake of Rugby.

Sir John Cope: I have recently written to my hon. Friend on this subject.

Shares Dividends

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he proposes to take to prevent tax avoidance arising by the offering of dividends of shares in lieu of cash with instant sale facilities.

Mr. Dorrell: All developments which may have a significant effect on Exchequer receipts are carefully monitored.

Lloyd's

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the timetable for the repayment of tax to individual taxpayers arising out of losses at Lloyd's of London.

Mr. Dorrell: The Inland Revenue calculates that some 27,000 underwriting members of Lloyd's have suffered trading losses for the Lloyd's account year to 31 December 1989. These losses can be used for relief against other income for tax year 1989-90 and, in some circumstances, the previous year and repayment of tax paid on that income may be reclaimed.

The process of dealing with repayment claims for Lloyd's account 1989 started some four months earlier than for previous years, and out of some 26,500 claims received by 28 May, when the last count was made, more than 17,000—64 per cent.—have been repaid. At the same time last year, the comparative figures were 16,800 claims received, 6,900—41 per cent.—had been dealt with.

An interim payment will, if possible, be made in circumstances where Inland Revenue audit procedures may prevent immediate repayment in full.

Income Tax

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the number of people over the age of 65 years who are liable for income tax at each of the lower basic and higher rates, in the present financial year.

Mr. Dorrell: Latest estimates for 1993-94 are as follows:

Thousands

Marginal rate of taxpayer	Taxpayers aged 65 and over
Lower rate	1,390
Basic rate	1,490
Higher rate	120
All taxpayers	3,000

Tax Credits

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of tax credits on share dividends becoming available to tax-exempt entities in each of the years 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93 were claimed in the same year.

Mr. Dorrell: I regret that the information requested is not available. However, it is estimated that about 75 per cent. of total repayments of income tax and payments of tax credits to tax exempt institutions are made in the year in which the recipient first becomes entitled to the repayment or payment.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 10 May, Official Report, column 327, on what basis he has made the assumption that about half of tax credits on share dividends held by charities are claimed in the same year in which the dividend is paid.

Mr. Dorrell: The assumption is based on the knowledge that many claims by charities for payment of tax credits are made after the end of the financial year in which the dividend is paid. For example, many charities submit an annual claim for income tax repayments and payments of tax credits after the end of the relevant financial year.

Tax Fraud

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has of the extent of fraud in the taxation system; and what steps he is proposing to take to combat it.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 10 June 1993]: Reliable estimates of the extent of tax fraud are not available. But the hon. Member may wish to consult the chapter entitled "Deterring And Tackling Non-Compliance" in the latest annual report of the Board of Inland Revenue.

Economic and Finance Council

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outcome of the latest meeting of the European Community's Economic and Finance Council.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Economic and Finance Council of the European Community—ECOFIN—met in Luxembourg on 7 June. The Paymaster General and I represented the United Kingdom.

The Commission informed the Council of its intention to publish revised economic projections for the Community on 16 June. These are likely to indicate less favourable growth prospects for most member states than the forecast contained in the annual economic report for 1993. By contrast, the revised forecast is expected to contain improved growth prospects for the United Kingdom and confirm the Commission's assessment earlier in the year that GDP growth in the United Kingdom will be greater than in any other major member state. There was a brief preparatory discussion for the Copenhagen European Council's examination of the economic situation in the Community.

The Council discussed the draft seventh VAT directive intended to provide a harmonised system for taxing second-hand goods and works of art. I indicated that the United Kingdom could consider a very low rate of VAT for imported works of art for the duration of the transitional VAT system, but only as part of an acceptable compromise on other outstanding aspects of the proposal. It was agreed that this issue would be considered further by officials before returning to the Council.

In discussion of the Commission's proposals for a carbon/energy tax, I made it clear that the Government had already announced measures in the Budget that would reduce carbon dioxide emissions in the United Kingdom; and that we did not see a need for a harmonised tax at Community level. The topic was remitted for further consideration by officials.

The Commission urged early progress on the proposed directive to abolish withholding taxes on cross-border interest and royalty payments between companies. There was no substantive discussion of this proposal.

The Council adopted conclusions on the Commission's annual report on fraud against the Community budget. I welcomed the Commission's recent efforts to address this problem and stressed the need for clear and measurable objectives and target dates in the Commission's action plan. The Council invited the Commission to provide an assessment of further specific improvements needed to increase the effectiveness of the fight against fraud. The presidency also reported on recent discussions with the European Parliament on a new inter-institutional agreement on budget discipline.

The Council reached a political agreement on the principle of Euratom loans for nuclear safety in eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union. Final adoption of the Council decision will take place once the European Parliament's opinion is available.

Finally, there was a brief general discussion of the Commission's proposed directive for deposit protection arrangements for credit institutions. There was broad support for the principle of a minimum directive in this area, although I stressed the importance of the principle of subsidiarity in this context.

The Council took no formal votes. The conclusions on the Commission's annual report on fraud and the political agreement on the principle of Euratom loans were approved by consensus.

Exchange Rate Mechanism

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his timetable for re-entry to the exchange rate mechanism.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 10 June 1993]: The Government have no timetable for re-entry to the ERM.

Mr. Brooke: No. St. Frideswide's mission was assessed for listing last year, and I accepted English Heritage's recommendation, made following detailed research, that the mission buildings do not possess sufficient architectural or historic interest to merit listing.

DEFENCE

Rapid Reaction Corps

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the training in peacekeeping roles undertaken by the rapid reaction corps.

Mr. Hanley: In accordance with the developing NATO peacekeeping concept and as part of their annual training programme, the headquarters staff of the Allied Command Europe rapid reaction corps undertook a period of peacekeeping training earlier this year. United Kingdom units assigned to the corps which have deployed or may deploy to the former republic of Yugoslavia have also carried out peacekeeping training.

Depleted Uranium Ammunition

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the use by British armed forces of depleted uranium ammunition.

Mr. Hanley: The British armed forces are currently equipped with two kinds of ammunition containing depleted uranium: 120mm tank ammunition, small quantities of which were fired by Challenger tanks during the Gulf conflict; and 20mm ammunition for the Royal Navy's Vulcan Phalanx point defence weapons system, which, apart from some rounds fired for proving purposes, was not used in the Gulf. During peacetime training at sea, the Royal Navy also fires Vulcan Phalanx ammunition at towed air targets; DU ammunition is not used by the Army for peacetime training purposes.

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made by his Department of the health risks posed to members of the armed forces who served in the Gulf war, arising from the use of depleted uranium tank and artillery rounds.

Mr. Hanley: The Ministry of Defence knows of no evidence that there was any health risk to any United Kingdom service personnel who served in the Gulf war, due to the handling or use of depleted uranium ammunition.

Mr. Hanley: There have been no recent indications of any breaches of either no-fly zone by Iraqi aircraft. We are aware of media reports on alleged recent incursions by Iranian aircraft but are unable to confirm them.

TRADE

EC Structural Funds

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress is being made in submitting projects for funding through EC structural funds.

Mr. Sainsbury: Of the structural funds grant totals allocated to the United Kingdom for the current period, from 1989 to 1993 approximately 80 per cent. have been committed to projects. The remaining 20 per cent. are to be committed before the end of the year.

Electricity

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of (a) households and (b) the population has electricity supply.

Mr. Eggar: Only isolated areas, containing a very small proportion of United Kingdom households and population, are without electricity supply. My Department has no precise estimates.

Auditors (Remuneration)

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he has any plans to amend the statutory requirements on disclosure of auditors' remuneration.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: My Department has today issued a consultative document seeking views on a proposed technical amendment to the Companies Act 1985 (Disclosure of Remuneration for Non-Audit Work) Regulations 1991.

The regulations seek to foster the independence and integrity of audit firms by requiring their client companies to disclose in their annual accounts any remuneration paid to the firm or its associates for non-audit services. The proposed amendment would offer clear deregulatory benefits to both the client company and the audit firm without detracting from the purpose of the regulations.

As many audit firms provide other services such as consultancy or tax advice, in some cases through separate but connected organisations, the definition of associate was made sufficiently wide to include all such entities. However, audit firms with insolvency practices can find themselves with numerous associates, as presently defined, because they are entitled to control 20 per cent. or more of a company's voting rights solely by virtue of an insolvency appointment.

Any receipt of remuneration by such companies is unlikely to be relevant to the independence and integrity of the audit firm. Moreover, it can be an onerous task both for the audit firm to compile a list of such associates and for the client company to check whether payment has been made to any of them for non-audit services. The proposed amendment aims to correct this situation. For similar reasons, the consultative document also seeks views on whether trustees, or certain types of trustee, should also be excluded from the definition.

A copy of the consultative document has been placed in the Library of the House. Comments should reach my Department by 30 July.

Regional Development Grants

Mr. Wareing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when a decision of the European Council can be expected on the proposal to grant Merseyside objective 1 status; what is his position on this matter; what discussions he has had with his European counterparts on the subject; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 27 May 1993]: I do not expect a decision on the list of objective 1 regions for some time. The Foreign Affairs Council, which my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs attended, discussed the issue briefly and inconclusively on 8 June. The Government will continue to press their demand for objective 1 status for Merseyside.

HEALTH

Ultrasound Scanning

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information her Department has on the cost-effectiveness of antenatal ultrasound scanning; and on what research evidence it is based.

Mr. Sackville: It is widely accepted among clinicians that antenatal ultrasound scanning is a valuable diagnostic facility. Studies undertaken on the cost effectiveness of ultrasound are reviewed in the publication "Effective Care in Pregnancy and Childbirth". The national perinatal and epidemiology unit is currently considering further work in this area.

Specialty Reviews

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the specialty reviews will be published; if she will publish them in full; and what plans she has for public and professional scrutiny of the specialty review findings.

Dr. Mawhinney: The specialty reviews will be published, in full, later this month and will therefore be available for public scrutiny. They are independent advice to Ministers and the national health service, not policy and will form only one part of a complex jigsaw informing decisions about the pattern of hospital services in London. Where appropriate, there will, of course, be full public consultation about any proposals to close or move services.

Hospital Beds

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of NHS beds per 10,000 resident population by status category, in all acute specialties, in (a) London district health authorities, (b) London special health authorities and (c) non-London comparators, dividing the figures into areas categorised as (i) inner deprived, (ii) urban, (iii) high status and (iv) total.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally.

"Making London Better"

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the reduction of beds suggested in "Making London Better" applies to inner London; and if she will give details of the proposed reductions by specialty and geographical area.

Dr. Mawhinney: "Making London Better" sets out the framework for delivering strategic change to improve London health services. Detailed proposals for change are being developed at local level.

Purchasing Authorities

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the name and address of each purchasing authority.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information requested will be placed in the Library.

Prostate Cancer

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what NHS screening facilities are available for men most at risk from prostate cancer.

Mr. Sackville: None. Several research projects in this area are currently being undertaken locally.

Health Authorities

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) regional health authorities, (b) health authorities, (c) family health service authorities and (d) health trusts were in existence on 1 April; and what is her forecast of the number which will exist on 1 April 1994.

Dr. Mawhinney: The figures requested for 1 April 1993 are shown in the table:

(a) 14 regional health authorities
(b) 145 district health authorities
(c) 90 family health service authorities
(d) 392 National Health Service trusts

We are not prepared to make any forecast for 1 April 1994.

Patients (Personal Habits)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which statutory provisions confer on treatment providers authority to discriminate between patients on the grounds of their personal habits.

Mr. Sackville: The patients charter makes it clear that every citizen has the right to health care on the basis of clinical need.

Nursing (Grading)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the forms CGS2 as supplied by each regional health authority to her Department in 1988.

Mr. Sackville: The information requested is available in the Library.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the categories of material currently requested from regional health authorities and district health authorities, and which is held at her Department.

Mr. Sackville: The Department obtains from health authorities information necessary for the compilation of the following publications:

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish his proposals on Sunday trading.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We intend to publish a draft Bill well before the summer recess.

Working Holidaymakers' Scheme

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the numbers and nationalities of individuals from the Commonwealth entering the United Kingdom on the working holidaymakers' scheme for each year since 1990; and the first quarter of 1993; and what plans he has to alter the scheme.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Reliable figures on admissions of working holidaymakers are available only from May 1990 and are given in the table. The operation of the scheme is under review, but there are no plans to abolish it.

Juvenile Offenders (Identification)

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the present statutory restrictions on the identification of alleged juvenile offenders who are unlawfully at large.

Mr. Michael Howard: I cannot comment on any current cases, which are sub judice. As a matter of general policy, the Government take the view that it should be possible, consistent with the need to ensure a fair trial, to identify a juvenile who, having been charged with a serious criminal offence, is unlawfully at large. To the extent that the current law prevents this, we intend to change it, and I shall announce further details in due course.

Animal Diseases Orders

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has to repeal the provisions of the Diseases of Animals (Therapeutic Substances) Order 1952 and the Foot and Mouth Disease (Sera and Glandular Products) Order 1939.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Legislation will come into force on Monday 14 June 1993 to repeal these orders, partly to comply with new Community legislation on veterinary vaccines and partly for deregulatory reasons.

PRIME MINISTER

Kashmir

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has made to the Indian Prime Minister about recent activity by Indian Government forces in Kashmir; and if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards self-determination for the people of Jammu and Kashmir.

The Prime Minister: I discussed the Indian Government's policy on Kashmir, including the actions of the Indian security forces, with the Indian Prime Minister during my visit to India in January. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and I both discussed Kashmir and human rights issues with the Indian Vice-President during his visit to Britain in May. In our discussions with the Indian Government, we have emphasised that the establishment of a political process in Kashmir, which will enable the people of Jammu and Kashmir to express their views, is an important element in the overall solution of the problem.

Local Government Reform

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Prime Minister if he will give the number of representations he or the Secretary of State for Scotland have received calling for (a) the establishment of joint boards to take over functions from Scottish directly elected local authorities and (b) the transfer of functions from local authorities to the Scottish Office.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave her on 30 April 1993 at column 502.

Exchange Rate Mechanism

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the conditions required to be fulfilled for the United Kingdom to re-enter the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 8 June 1993]: I have nothing further to add to the remarks I made on 9 June 1993, at column 302.

SCOTLAND

Divinity Students

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total number of divinity graduates from Scottish universities in each of the past 10 years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The numbers are set out in the table.

Year	Number of Divinity Graduates
1982-83	117
1983-84	122
1984-85	116
1985-86	130
1986-87	113
1987-88	139
1988-89	124
1989-90	118
1990-91	108
1991-92	151

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total amount of money paid by the Scottish Office in university fees for divinity students in each of the past 10 years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is set out in the table.

Academic year	Value of tuition fees £
1983-84	100,800
1984-85	107,000
1985-86	108,160
1986-87	113,704
1987-88	110,088
1988-89	104,618
1989-90	158,009
1990-91	457,275
1991-92	546,700
1992-93	628,845

Notes:
1. The value has been calculated from the number of Scottish domiciled award-holding students on undergraduate divinity and theology courses at Scottish Universities in the year in question.
2. The significant increase in value from 1990-91 onwards reflects the shift in the balance between Funding Council grant and tuition fee income first introduced in that year.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to alter the payment of fees for divinity students at Scottish universities; and if he will make a statement on the Scottish Office's policy to the payment of fees for such students.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Tuition fees for eligible divinity students at Scottish universities are normally paid in termly instalments, in common with the tuition fees of eligible students on other courses; divinity courses attract fees at the band 1 rate. The awards offered to divinity students who satisfy the criteria for assistance under the students' allowance scheme include the payment of tuition fees. My right hon. Friend has no plans to change these arrangements.

Kvaerner Govan

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total amount of assistance given to Kvaerner Govan by the Scottish Development Agency and Scottish Enterprise.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 May 1993]: Neither the Scottish Development Agency nor Scottish Enterprise has provided any assistance to the company. The relevant local enterprise company, Glasgow Development Agency, has, however, provided business growth training assistance to the value of around £35,000, funded by Scottish Enterprise; and assistance with skills training of key staff threatened with redundancy, amounting to £102,165, funded from its operating surpluses.

Damp Housing

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what discussions he has had on the medical damage and risk to the health of children living in housing which suffers from dampness or condensation;

(2) if he will hold discussions with the health boards on preventive action to reduce the risk to children of living in damp housing.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 7 June 1993]: This issue has been raised in the regular meetings my hon. Friend the Minister for education and housing has with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities about housing matters, and in the frequent meetings he has with local authorities about resources for investment in housing. For example, my hon. Friend met representatives of Dumbarton district council and the hon. Member for Dumbarton (Mr. McFall) on 3 February to discuss damp housing in Dumbarton. The chief medical officer at the Scottish Office has also discussed the matter with the convention and with Scottish Homes as part of the work being undertaken to take forward the initiatives in "Scotland's Health: A Challenge To Us All". The medical implications of dampness and condensation were described in the chief medical officer's speech to the convention's annual conference on 26 March. The text of the speech has been sent to directors of public health in health boards.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance he offers to health authorities with regard to the risk to children living in housing affected by dampness and condensation.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 7 June 1993]: The medical implications of dampness and condensation in housing were described in the chief medical officer's speech to the annual conference of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities on 26 March. The text of the speech has been sent to directors of public health in health boards.

Gourock Ropeworks

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what plans he has to delist the Gourock ropeworks in Port Glasgow; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he last received a report from (a) Historic Scotland and (b) Renfrewshire Enterprise Company on the current condition of the Gourock ropeworks, Port Glasgow; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 8 June 1993]: The Secretary of State has no plans to delist the Gourock ropeworks, Port Glasgow. The building is undoubtedly of listable quality and it remains listed at category A.

Historic Scotland is in regular communication with Inverclyde district council about the ropeworks building and is informed of the council's actions to safeguard the condition of the building and the general security of the site. The council acted last year, in the interests of public safety, to make the building secure against intruders and to carry out works elsewhere on the site and generally tidy up the appearance of the site. Only recently, I believe, has the owner complied with the council's requirement and erected a security fence along the Bay street frontage, following the earlier site clearance works.

Renfrewshire Enterprise Company has, I understand, been involved in consideration of the condition of the building and its development potential in the light of a specific declared interest by a possible developer. That has not, however, been pressed by the developer concerned. The local enterprise company has made no report to the Secretary of State on the ropeworks building.

Historic Scotland will be having a further meeting with the council shortly, and will report on the latest developments to my right hon. Friend.

Dounreay (Safety Inspection)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make a statement on the visit made to Dounreay by safety inspectors from Euratom in May;

(2) what information he has received from Euratom following the visit of the European Commission's safety inspectors to the Dounreay nuclear waste disposal pits in May.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 9 June 1993]: In terms of article 35 of the Euratom treaty, the European Commission has a right to verify the facilities for environmental monitoring maintained by member states. As part of the Commission's verification programme, a team of inspectors visited the United Kingdom during the period 10 to 14 May to examine monitoring facilities in the north of Scotland including those maintained as part of the surveillance of the environmental effects of operations at Dounreay. The visit did not include any inspection of the facilities for on-site solid waste disposal. The team's report to the Commission will be passed to my right hon. Friend in due course.

Forestry

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury of 20 April, Official Report, column 89, when he expects the Forestry Review Group to make its proposals; and when these proposals will be made public.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 10 June 1993]: I have nothing to add to the replies I gave to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury (Mr. Smith) on 20 April 1993, Official Report, column 89.

Cervical Smear Tests

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 24 May, Official Report, columns 451-52, about the programme of reviewing cervical smear slides from Inverclyde royal infirmary, Greenock, what recent information he has concerning the tracing of women who have moved from the hospital's catchment area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 10 June 1993]: The women requiring to be traced fall into two categories:

1. Those who are known, through the Community Health Index, to have moved out of the area.
2. Those whose recorded address on the Community Health Index suggest that they still live in the area, but whose letters sent to those addresses have been returned by the postal authorities as "gone away" or "not known".

The Argyll and Clyde health board is receiving prompt assistance from primary care departments, family health services authorities and from individual general practitioners. Considerable help in tracing women married to United States naval personnel continues to be given by the United States naval authorities. Similar assistance is also being given in relation to Her Majesty's forces wives by the British military authorities.

Where the re-examination exercise has resulted in a "non-negative report", the most strenuous efforts are being made to contact each woman involved to ensure that the necessary follow-up action can be taken.

TRANSPORT

Air Pollution

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what surveys have been conducted into the links between air quality, road traffic and pollution.

Mr. Key: Air quality is monitored across a range of sites and the Department of the Environment issues daily bulletins which provide information on ozone, sulphur dioxide and nitrogen dioxide.

A calculation of emissions of carbon dioxide, nitrogen oxides, carbon monoxide, volatile organic compounds, lead and black smoke from road transport is published annually in "Transport Statistics Great Britain".

Details of emissions from the transport sector and Government action to limit them can be found in the memorandum submited to the Royal Commission on environmental pollution by the Departments of the Environment and of Transport. A copy of this memorandum has been placed in the Library.

The quality of urban air review group—QUARG—a group of independent experts, published a report on urban air quality in January 1993 which examines the effect of road traffic on air pollution and future trends. A copy of this report has been placed in the Library.

Bus Deregulation

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effects of bus deregulation outside London in respect of passenger journeys travelled and of changes in fares.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Lady to my Department's memorandum to the Transport Select Committee on London bus deregulation, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Elderly Holidaymakers

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been his response to the representations from Saga Holdiays concerning the maintenance of discounted fares for elderly holidaymakers following British Rail privatisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I wrote to the chairman of the Saga group on 12 March. We announced on 25 May our intention to place a statutory duty on the franchising director to ensure that all franchise agreements contain obligations to participate in discount schemes for senior citizens.

Lower Thames Crossing

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made regarding the lower Thames crossing study; and when a report will be published.

Mr. Key: Consultants were appointed in May 1992 for a two-year study of the need for, and feasibility of, a lower Thames crossing downstream of Dartford. They are making good progress and expect to report back to the Department on programme in mid-1994.

Road Congestion

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what criteria he uses to assess quantitatively the extent and seriousness of congestion on individual links in the trunk road network;

(2) what research he has carried out into changes in the level and extent of congestion in the United Kingdom and its economic effects; and what studies he has undertaken of the likely level and extent of congestion on the trunk road network in future years;

(3) what consideration he has given to publishing an annual report on congestion on the road network, similar to the report of the national road maintenance conditions survey;

(4) in what way he monitors the level and extent of congestion on the trunk roads network.

Mr. Key: Congestion is monitored by a variety of means including roadside vehicle detection, video cameras, traffic surveys, and motorway data provided by TrafficMaster—the private sector congestion monitoring system. All road investment involves the appraisal of congestion, including the vehicle delays on individual road links. This is set out in detail in the Department's COBA user manual which is based on extensive research. I have no plans at present to introduce an annual congestion report.

Trans-European Network

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will include the ports of Sheerness and Ramsgate in the proposals for the European Community's trans-European network maps.

Mr. Norris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport does not propose, as matters stand, to press for the addition of Sheerness and Ramsgate to the draft trans-European network guideline maps. The contents of the trans-European networks maps are still under consideration, but they would, in any case, be finally for decision by the European Council.

These ports, and many other prominent United Kingdom ports, are not on the principal networks for the modes for which maps are under discussion. The member states group on ports and maritime development has argued against the production of a separate trans-European networks map for ports. Rather, it has proposed the development of a list of port projects which fulfil certain criteria.

Personalised Number Plates

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what statutory provisions apply to the form of displaying vehicle registration numbers; what action is normally taken by police in connection with personalised number plates; to what penalties drivers are subject if they use non-standard displays of numbers and letters on personalised number plates; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The statutory provisions for the display of vehicle registration numbers are contained within section II of the Road Vehicles (Licensing and Registration) Regulations 1971. Law enforcement with regard to personalised number plates is a matter for the police. The maximum penalty for the illegal display of a registration number is £1,000.

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many personalised number plate the DVLA has sold to drivers registered in the west midlands since 1986; how many complaints he has received from that region concerning the withdrawal of personalised number plates by DVLA; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency commenced selling registration number in December 1989. Statistics on the number sold to motorists in the west midlands are not available. The Secretary of State has not withdrawn any such numbers and there have been no complaints from the west midlands.

A1–M1 Link

Mr. Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the A1–M1 link road will be fully open.

Mr. Key: The M1–A1 link road—A14—should be fully open to traffic by the end of 1993.

Flags of Convenience

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals have been made by the European Commission, or any member state, of the European Community concerning the prohibition of vessels registered under flags or conditions of convenience for discharging or loading cargoes at ports in member states.

Mr. Norris: None.

Jubilee Line

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what loans have been made by the European Investment Bank in respect of the Jubilee line; what are the terms of repayment; and on what specific article of the banks the loans have been made.

Mr. Norris: No loan has yet been made. I understand, however, that the EIB is prepared in principle to lend money to the O and Y company, which is currently in administration, to fund the first instalment of the company's intended contribution to the cost of the Jubilee line extension. The terms governing any such loan would be a matter for the parties.

Transport Council

Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the result of the Transport Council held in Luxembourg on 7 and 8 June.

Mr. MacGregor: The Transport Council met in Luxembourg on 7 and 8 June. I represented the United Kingdom.

The Council discussed the Commission's communication on a common policy on safe seas. I stressed yet again that sub-standard shipping is a major and urgent problem in terms of the safety of human life and the environment; and that concerted action by all member states against sub-standard shipping both safeguarded EC interests and allowed us together to press for worldwide improvement through a tough new regime for all ships calling at Community ports or passing through Community waters. The Council, following discussions, welcomed and agreed the communication. This is a major step forward towards firm Community action, and the Commission will now bring forward proposals swiftly.

Following the International Maritime Organisation's failure to agree action on higher standards for ferry safety, I informed the Council that the United Kingdom would pursue higher standards unilaterally. I said this was in line with the EC policy on safe seas and that the most recent accident in the North sea showed the importance of action in this field.

The Council met the European Parliament under the conciliation procedure and reached agreement on a transport infrastructure programme for 1993-94 with a budget of 325 mecu.

The Council adopted conclusions on the Commission's white paper on the future development of the common transport policy. These conclusions are wide ranging. They stress the importance of completing the single market and ensuring its effective operation and refer to the importance of the priniciple of subsidiarity and the need to avoid distortion of competition through state aids, as well as covering safety, environmental issues, infrastructure development and external relations.

The Council agreed that a working group on aviation external relations should be set up. It considered amendments to the regulation on computerised reservation systems, but referred the issue of the physical separation of such systems from parent airlines back to COREPER for further discussion. The Commission reported that it would be putting forward its promised revision of the guidelines on aviation state aids. The Commissioner announced that he was setting up an expert committee to study current problems facing the Community's aviation industry. He undertook to produced a draft negotiating mandate by the September Council for opening transport negotiations with Switzerland, together with a study of relations in a wider framework.

The Council reached political agreement on guidelines for Community trans-European networks for combined transport, roads and inland waterways. Following my intervention about difficulties being encountered by a United Kingdom operator, the Commission stated that Community funding would not be allocated to infrastructure projects not open to operators according to Community rules.

The Council discussed road transport taxation and charging and road haulage cabotage, and agreed to hold an additional meeting on Saturday 19 June on these issues.

Traffic Signs (Private Land)

Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will extend the provisions for changes in traffic signs to private land.

Mr. Key: Traffic signs legislation applies to signs on or near any roads to which the public has access. There are no plans at present to extend the scope of this legislation.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Guatemala

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about relations with Guatemala.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We have good relations with Guatemala and welcomed the appointment as constitutional President of Ramiro de Leon Carpio, the former human rights procurator, on 5 June.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to press for the suspension from the Council of Europe of any member state found to be violating the United Nations embargo against Serbia and Montenegro.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: At their meeting on 14 May, which was chaired by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Council of Europe Ministers underlined the importance of respecting and implementing the United Nations Security Council resolutions on the former Yugoslavia, including those imposing embargoes.

If proof were available that any member state actively supported violations of United Nations embargoes, that support would be condemned rightly in all international fora. However, the Council of Europe is not one of those organisations directly involved in this matter and any action might be more appropriately considered by those bodies which have such involvement.

I am aware that members of the United Kingdom parliamentary delegation to the Council of Europe have expressed strong views about the violation of international sanctions. It is open to those members to raise these matters in the assembly.

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest estimate of prisoners of war held by (a) the Croats, (b) Serbs and (c) Muslims.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The International Committee of the Red Cross—ICRC—regularly visits 400 prisoners held by the Bosnian Croats, 1,023 held by the Bosnian Serbs and 993 held by the Bosnian Muslims. The ICRC is also visiting those detained during the fighting between Bosnian Croat and Muslim forces in central and southern Bosnia.

Mr. Wareing To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department is in receipt of information from the UNHCR in respect of the reported expulsion by the Croatian HVO forces in Bosnia-Herzegovina of Muslims from Mostar; what contact he has made with President Tudjman about this matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are aware of reports that Bosnian Croat HVO forces apparently with support from Croatian Government forces, have expelled Muslims from Mostar, but have seen no specific information on this from the United Nations High Commission for Refugees. The European Community is continuing to apply pressure on President Tudjman about his responsibility for the actions of Croat and Bosnian Croat forces in Bosnia.

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken for UNPROFOR to protect the citizens of Medjeda and Ustipraca in Bosnia from Serb shelling.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The co-chairman of the international conference for the former Yugoslavia and UNPROFOR commanders are continuing their efforts to secure Bosnian Serb agreement to allow United Nations monitors and humanitarian relief convoys through to the Gorazde area. This will provide a vital first step towards stabilising the increasingly desperate situation there.

European Construction

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken in response to the final declaration of the interparliamentary conference on the role of national parliaments on European construction, held in Brussels in May 1992, and recommendation 1193 of the parliamentary assembly of the Council of Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The final declaration of the interparliamentary conference was debated by the Council of Europe's parliamentary assembly last October, but not sent for action to the Committee of Ministers.

The Council of Europe ministerial meeting on 14 May, which was chaired by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, agreed a number of points for discussion at the forthcoming Council of Europe summit which reflect the concerns expressed on the final declaration and include most of those items raised in recommendation 1193.

The Council of Europe will continue to play a major role in the development of democracy in Europe and it is right that the summit, to be held in Vienna on 8 and 9 October, should consider its role and place in relation to other organisations and institutions, in particular the EC and Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe.

Russia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his most recent discussions with his Russian counterpart covered relations between the United Kingdom and Russia and the newly independent Baltic states.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has had regular discussions with Mr. Kozyrev. He has outlined on several occasions the British Government's wish for good relations between Russia and the Baltic states. My right hon. Friend is due to meet Mr. Kozyrev again today, 11 June, in Athens at the North Atlantic consultative conference.

Eastern Europe

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs visited Romania from 1 to 3 June and Bulgaria from 3 to 4 June. The objectives of his visit were to assess and encourage political and economic reform: to explain British policy on former Yugoslavia and to urge rigorous enforcement of United Nations sanctions. My right hon. Friend saw at first hand the work of the sanctions assistance mission team on the Danube, working with the local customs authorities.

In Romania he had meetings with President Iliescu, Prime Minister Vacaroiu and Foreign Minister Melescanu, the presidents of both chambers of Parliament and opposition leaders. My right hon. Friend addressed a joint session of the Romanian Parliament. In Bulgaria, he had discussions with President Zhelev and Prime Minister Berov, the chairman of the National Assembly and representatives of the main parliamentary parties.

In both countries, my right hon. Friend discussed bilateral relations including in particular parliamentary links and prospects for British investment. Both Bulgaria and Romania are intent on developing their links with the west and sought our support for this. They are also anxious for recognition for the losses which their economies have suffered as a result of United Nations sanctions against Serbia.

Our relations with Bulgaria and Romania are developing quickly and we are able to discuss issues frankly, including such problems as the dismissal of the director general of the Bulgarian news agencies, and parliamentary control of the Romanian security services. My right hon. Friend encouraged both Governments to press on with the reform process and promised our support for them in this difficult challenge.

My right hon. Friend's itinerary did not include Hungary, which he visited from 4 to 7 May. I refer the hon. Gentleman to the oral answer my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Colchester, North (Mr. Jenkin) on 12 May, at column 787.

Baltic States

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he regards (a) Latvia and (b) Estonia as meeting Her Majesty's Government criteria of states practising good government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Latvia and Estonia observe the principles of good government, including respect for human rights and the rule of law. Since regaining independence both states have made welcome and significant progress on political and economic reform and on building democratic institutions. Estonia's accession to the Council of Europe and its signing of the European convention on human rights demonstrates the progress it has made; following Latvia's successful conduct of its elections, we look forward to the earliest possible Latvian accession to the Council of Europe.

European Economic Integration

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response Her Majesty's Government have made to the proposal by Chancellor Kohl for a special Heads of Government summit in the autumn to discuss the next stage of European economic integration.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The idea of a special European summit in the autumn will be discussed at the Copenhagen European Council on 21 and 22 June. We will consider any proposals which are made there.

Macedonia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Macedonia; and when he expects ambassadors to be exchanged with that country.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs visited Skopje on 4 June, and held talks with President Ghigorov and acting Foreign Minister Crvenkovski. He presented a consignment of medicines and medical equipment worth £400,000, the latest stage in the United Kingdom's £2 million emergency aid programme. My right hon. Friend also met representatives from the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe mission, the EC monitor mission and UNPROFOR. The United Kingdom now has a representative in Skopje, who will make practical arrangements for establishing an office there. The timing of an opening of diplomatic relations has not been decided: this will be influenced by progress in the mediation process between Greece and Macedonia.

Human Rights

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support the reform of the control mechanism of the European convention on human rights proposed in recommendation 1194 of the parliamentary assembly of the Council of Europe.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: All member states of the Council of Europe agree that reform of the control mechanism of the European convention on human rights is urgently needed. The Ministers' deputies meeting on 28 May agreed by consensus the mandate for a draft protocol amending the control machinery of the European convention on human rights. The Council of Europe steering committee for human rights will now draft the amending protocol. The United Kingdom will participate fully in the drafting process.

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy towards the draft protocol on the rights of minorities to the European Convention on human rights, proposed by the parliamentary assembly of the Council of Europe.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Council of Europe committee of experts for the protection of minorities has been mandated to study the possibility of formulating European legal standards for the protection of minorities, including the feasibility of a protocol to the European convention on human rights or a free-standing Convention. The parliamentary assembly's recommendation 1201 of 1993 is a useful contribution to the debate and is one of several documents being considered by the committee. The expert committee is to present its findings to the Council of Europe Heads of State summit in October. We await the opinion of the expert committee.

Expedito Ribeiro de Souza

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements Her Majesty's Government are making for diplomatic representation at the trial for murder of trade unionist Expedito Ribeiro de Souza, taking place in Ri Mara, Pará, Brazil, on 30 June.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We plan that a member of the staff of Her Majesty's embassy in Brasilia will attend the trial for the murder of Expedito Ribeiro de Souza.

Serbia

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking to protest at the imprisonment and treatment of Vuk Draskovic, leader of the opposition in Belgrade, and at other infringements of human rights in Serbia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: On behalf of the EC and its member states, the presidency delivered a demarch to the Serbian leadership protesting at the violence in Belgrade on 1 June and the arrest and beating of Mr. Draskovic and his wife. This matter was discussed by European Community Foreign Ministers at the General Affairs Council in Luxembourg on 8 June when it was agreed to send a further message expressing concern and asking for immediate release of Mr. and Mrs. Draskovic. Lord Owen also raised the case with President Milosevic during his visit to Belgrade on 9 and 10 June. We continue to monitor closely the human rights situation throughout the former Yugoslavia. The Conference on Security and co-operation in Europe and relevant human rights organisations are also actively involved.

Iraq

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action Her Majesty's Government propose to take at the United Nations Security Council following the contravention of Security Council resolution 598 by Iran when launching air strikes against People's Mojahedin bases in Iraq on 25 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett) on 7 June, Official Report, column 84.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consideration he is giving to the RUC Chief Constable's request for changes to the law in respect of the need to respond more effectively to terrorism; and when he expects to announce his decision.

Mr. Mates: The Government keep the law against terrorism under constant review to ensure that it remains both effective in fighting terorism and proportionate to that aim.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

R v. Style, Donaldson and Attwell

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General if he will place in the Library the transcript of R v. Style, Donaldson and Attwell.

The Attorney-General: No. Neither my office nor the Crown Prosecution Service has had cause to request the preparation of a transcript.

Mr. Asil Nadir

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the right hon. and hon. Members from whom he has received representations concerning the conduct of the Serious Fraud Office in respect of Mr. Asil Nadir, with the names of the person at whose request those representations were made in each case.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer given to the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) on 10 June 1993, column 334. It is not my policy to give details of such representations.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Attorney-General what discussions he has had and with whom, following the flight from the United Kingdom to northern Cyprus of Asil Nadir; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: Pursuant to my statutory duty to superintend the work of the director of the Serious Fraud Office, I have discussed the case with several properly interested persons. It is my practice not to give details of such discussions.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Attorney-General how many representations he has received in the past year from right hon. and hon. Members concerning the Asil Nadir case; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I have in the past year received a representation from two hon. Members about the Polly Peck investigation and prosecution. One hon. Member has raised an issue by means of a parliamentary question.

ENVIRONMENT

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to issue guidance to local authorities on the avoidance of anti-competitive conduct when subjecting work to the requirements of compulsory competitive tendering.

Mr. Baldry: The Government have today issued guidance under section 9 of the Local Government Act 1992, and pursuant to the Local Government (Direct Service Organisations) (Competition) Regulations 1993 (SI No. 848).

CCT has produced many benefits for local taxpayers since its introduction, not only through financial savings but in improved efficiency and better standards of service. These benefits can be gained only through fair competition, and experience over recent years has shown that the statutory framework for CCT needed to be strengthened and clarified to ensure that all parties compete on a level playing field.

Local authorities are in the unusual position of being both client and potential contractor. In letting contracts, they must ensure that they are absolutely even-handed. It is not the Government's intention to discriminate against an authority's in-house work force, or to presume in favour of the private contractor. I believe the guidance strikes the right balance and will ensure that both local authority in-house teams and the private sector can tender effectively. This can only be in the best interests of the local taxpayer.

Local authorities and other bodies have made many helpful and constructive comments during consultation on these provisions, and I am grateful for their contribution.

Canal Restoration

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assistance his Department is giving to canal restoration groups.

Mr. Yeo: Grant may be available under a number of schemes subject to the relevant criteria being met. These include derelict land grant, the environmental action fund, the European regional development fund, the urban programme and city challenge, and through the Countryside Commission.

Rural Development Areas

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to authorise the Rural Development Commission to put out for consultation its proposals for new rural development areas.

Mr. Yeo: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment and I are considering the Rural Development Commission's proposals very carefully. The commission should be able to make an announcement shortly.

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to limit local authority expenditure in 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The experience of 1993-94—with only three authorities capped—is a very encouraging indication of greater realism on the part of local authorities. We hope that in future years local government will continue to play its part in keeping public expenditure under control and that it will not be necessary to cap any authority.

Council Tax

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to continue council tax transitional relief beyond 1995; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: We have said that there will be council tax transitional relief for at least two years in all. No decision has been made about the availability or otherwise of transitional relief for years beyond 1994-95.

Toxic Emissions

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to help reduce acid deposition and sulphur dioxide emissions in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: The United Kingdom is playing a full and active role in negotiations for a second sulphur protocol for the abatement of SO2 depositions under the United Nations Commission for Europe convention on long-range transboundary air pollution.

Olympic Games

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the extent of the Government's financial commitments in relation to Manchester's bid to host the Olympic games.

Sir George Young: The Government have made up to £75 million available to support the Manchester Olympic bid and the construction of key facilities in advance of the International Olympic Committee's decision on the nomination. If the bid is successful, the Government will ensure that the necessary facilities are built by a mixture of public and private finances and that the funding necessary to stage and organise the games is provided.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list for (a) Liverpool city, (b) Rochdale, (c) Calderdale, (d) Sefton, (e) Solihull, (f) Walsall, (g) Wirral and (h) Wolverhampton metropolitan district councils (i) the total population, (ii) the total capital budget for 1993-94 and (iii) the total revenue budget for 1993-94;

(2) if he will list for the London boroughs of Brent, Havering and Lambeth (a) the total population, (b) the total capital budget for 1993-94 and (c) the total revenue budget for 1993-94;

Mr. Baldry: The information is as follows:

	Total population[1]	Total capital budget 1993-94[2] £ million	Total revenue budget 1993-94[3] £ million
Liverpool City	474,522	88·552	447·622

[3] Unless otherwise stated, net revenue expenditure as reported by authorities on the RA93/94 return.
[4] Net revenue expenditure as reported on the BR return. Figures from the RA93/94 return are not yet available.

Water Companies (Technical Audits)

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the review of the process of technical audit of water companies has been completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: I am pleased to announce that the review of the procedures devised and followed by the drinking water inspectorate for assessing the quality of drinking water supplied by water companies has been completed by Professor P. F. Stott, CBE, FEng, assisted by Dr. R. F. Packham, CChem, FRSC, FIWEM. I have placed a copy of the report in the Library.

Professor Stott describes the standards adopted for drinking water as very demanding. He concludes that, bearing in mind the regulations and the importance to the public of demonstrating that the standards are adhered to, the system and methods devised and developed by the inspectorate are appropriate and sufficient but not more than sufficient for the purpose of checking the compliance of the water companies.

For the future, Professor Stott believes that there could be change as quality management systems are introduced by water companies. The inspectorate will commence consultation with water companies and others on the changes that should be introduced in the longer term.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fishing Vessels (Decommissioning)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list for each decommissioning scheme for fishing vessels which has operated since 1973 the total amount paid out, the number of owners who received grants and the number of vessels taken out by each, together with the amount given to employees and the proportion of each scheme financed by EC funds.

Mr. Jack: The Fishing Vessels (Financial Assistance) Scheme 1983, which ran until 1986, is the only decommissioning scheme, to have been operated since 1973. The following are details of decommissioning grant paid under that scheme:

Total amount paid out £18,422,622
Number of vessels on which grant was paid 247
EC contribution 50 per cent.

Figures are not available for the amount paid to employees, since this was a matter between the vessel owner and the employee.

Pesticides

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultations her Department has had with United States agencies about the toxicological data concerning (a) the fungicide Benlate and (b) other pesticides with the same active agent.

Mr. Soames: The Department maintains regular contact with the United States and other pesticide registration authorities and was aware of the United States position on the fungicide Benlate and other pesticides containing the same active ingredient (benomyl). As part of the United Kingdom's most recent review of benomyl, the independent advisory committee on pesticides examined the latest study produced by the university of California.

Livestock Quotas

Sir David Steel: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will allow free access to livestock quotas for those farmers wishing to convert from arable farming to mixed organic farming.

Mr. Jack: Farmers wishing to convert to organic farming will be able to acquire quota by buying or leasing. We are currently considering whether such farmers should also be eligible to apply for quota from the national reserves, and if so what priority they should have in relation to other applicants.

Comfrey

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has to prohibit the growing and consumption of comfrey by private individuals; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: I have no plans to prohibit the growing and consumption of comfrey. The Department has produced an information note on comfrey which we have made available widely. A copy is in the Library of the House. The leaflet advises against the use of comfrey as a vegetable and the use of comfrey root in making teas.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she first considered introducing a voluntary code of practice on the sale of comfrey products; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: When I received the advice of the independent committees—the Food Advisory Committee and the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment—I considered various options. A voluntary withdrawal of the comfrey products of most concern backed up by appropriate labelling was pursued as the course most commensurate with the risks involved.

Turkish Cyprus

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps she is taking to prevent the illegal import of agricultural products from Turkish Cyprus.

Mr. Jack: Agricultural products originating anywhere in the island of Cyprus may be imported into the EC provided that they satisfy any relevant standards imposed by EC law. The treatment of agricultural imports from north Cyprus is the subject of a case pending before the European Court of Justice.

Salmon Advisory Committee (Membership)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) on what basis the current members of the Salmon Advisory Committee were selected; how many are representative of anglers' associations; how many are representative of commercial interests; and what is the size of the advisory committee;

(2) how many of the individuals not reappointed to the Salmon Advisory Committee earlier in the current year were (a) ineligible through age or (b) declined an invitation to serve a further term.

Mr. Jack: The Salmon Advisory Committee currently has 10 members plus a chairman. They have been invited to serve because of their knowledge of matters relating to salmon fisheries or the biology of ecology of salmon. All were appointed on a personal basis and not as representatives of particular organisations or interest groups. The committee was reviewed during 1992 particularly with a view to its future work programme. As a result, membership was reduced from 16. Age was not a factor in deciding membership. One former member declined an offer of reappointment for personal reasons.

Flooding

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which areas of England and Wales have been subject to severe flooding since 1979; and what assistance was made available to those communities and individuals who suffered financial loss as a consequence of the flooding.

Mrs. Shephard: My Department and the Welsh Office seek to maintain a general overview of major flooding incidents but do not collect comprehsensive data on incidents. In any case, to the individuals in the affected area any flooding is likely to be regarded as severe.

The Government do not normally provide financial assistance to individuals as it is considered to be the responsibility of householders and business to ensure that they have adequate insurance for their property and contents. However, exceptionally, the Government made a contribution of £150,000 to the North Wales appeal funds in 1990 following flooding in Towyn.

In certain exceptional circumstances, special financial assistance has been provided to local authorities under the "Bellwin" scheme by my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for the Environment and the Secretary of State for Wales with each case being considered on its merits. Grant aid is available to operating authorities for new and improved flood defence works from my Department or the Welsh Office. In targeting grant provision, which has increased in recent years, priority is given to flood warning and urban flood and sea defence works.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Government Documents

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what role his Department plays in reviewing requests made by the media or other interested parties for the release of documents produced by, commissioned by, or forwarded to other Government Departments.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Office of Public Service and Science plays a central role in developing and implementing policies of greater openness across Government as a whole. Decisions on the release of particular documents are, however, for the Department concerned.

Science, Engineering and Technology

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to meet the chairman of the Science and Engineering Research Council to discuss his White Paper "A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology", Cm 2250.

Mr. Waldegrave: I see Sir Mark Richmond regularly to discuss a range of topics, especially those relevant to the Science and Engineering Research Council. My office is working closely with Sir Mark and his management team over the implementation of the policy decisions on restructuring the research council system, which were announced in the White Paper.

House of Commons Disqualification Act 1975

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what arrangements are to be made to provide hon. Members with information about the amendments proposed to schedule 1 to the House of Commons Disqualification Act 1975.

Mr. David Davis: A detailed explanatory note on the revised resolution tabled on Friday 11 June is available from the Vote Office.

European Parliament (Administrators)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many candidates invited to and attending the seminar organised by the Cabinet Office on 29 April for British candidates for European Parliament open competition PE/60/A for English language administrators were (a) women and (b) men; what was the regional breakdown of those (i) invited and (ii) attending the seminar; how many such seminars have been held in each of the last five years in the United Kingdom; and where each was held.

Mr. Davis: Invitations to the seminar were issued by the European Parliament on behalf of the Cabinet Office to the 654 Britons who applied for the competition; of these, 299 were women and 355 were men.

One hundred and five candidates accepted the invitation; of these, 50 were women and 47 were men—the other eight did not indicate their gender. These candidates came from the following regions:

Regions	Number
London and Southern England	58
Midlands and Northern England	19
Wales and the West Country	14
Northern Ireland	1
Scotland	0
Elsewhere in Europe	13

During the past five years, the Cabinet Office has not held any other seminars for competitions run by the European Parliament, but it has organised seminars for the main competitions run by other EC institutions as follows:

Location	Year	Seminars
4 in London 1 in Edinburgh	1988	5
London	1989	1
London	1990	2
4 in London 1 in Edinburgh	1991	5
London	1992	3
London	1993	1

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will review the procedures used by the Cabinet Office in arranging seminars for United Kingdom candidates for European Parliament English language administrators to ensure that (a) accurate information is provided to candidates and (b) all candidates are given an equal opportunity to take part.

Mr. Davis: The content of every seminar and the procedures used to arrange it are reviewed after the seminar has taken place; the results inform the arrangements for the next seminar.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Tobacco Products

Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the sums, expressed in current prices, raised from (a) excise and (b) VAT on tobacco products in the first quarters of 1992 and 1993.

Sir John Cope: The available information is as follows:

£ million

	Tobacco excise	VAT on tobacco
1992 Q1	1,688	360
1993 Q1	1,311	n/a

The VAT is estimated from consumer spending on tobacco. No estimate is yet available for the first quarter of 1993.

Comparisons between the first quarter of 1992 and the first quarter of 1993 are complicated by the removal of pre-Budget restrictions on the clearance of tobacco products for the 1993 Budget. As a result, clearances which might previously have taken place in the period December to February were delayed until March, and duty payment delayed into the second quarter.

Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the most recent Central Statistical Office estimate for United Kingdom consumers' expenditure on tobacco products in the United Kingdom for Q1 1993; and what was the comparable figure for Q1 1992.

Mr. Nelson: Figures for consumers' expenditure on tobacco products for Q1 1993 will be published on 22 June. Figures for earlier quarters are available from the CSO database which can be accessed by the House of Commons Library. The relevant database indentifiers are:
CCDZ—current prices, not seasonally adjusted
CCEN—current prices, seasonally adjusted
CCBP—constant prices, not seasonally adjusted
CCCD—current prices, seasonally adjusted

Customs and Excise

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many Customs and Excise officers were employed in Scotland at the last available date; and what were the comparable figures for the same dates in 1988 and 1983;

(2) how many customs officers at each of the Scottish airports are designated specifically for drugs duties; and how many serve at each airport at any given time;

(3) what measures are being taken to search hold baggage arriving at domestic halls at Scottish airports which have been interlined by passengers transferring from international flights at Heathrow or Gatwick from other destinations.

Sir John Cope: The following numbers of Customs and Excise officers were employed in Scotland over the relevant period:

	Number
30 April 1993	1,666·5
30 April 1988	1,780·5
30 April 1983	2,078·0

The number of officers shown below have an anti-smuggling role at the Scottish airports, but this is not confined exclusively to drug duties. It also covers other aspects of smuggling and other prohibitions and restrictions:

	Number
Edinburgh	11
Glasgow	32
Aberdeen	20

The deployment of anti-smuggling staff at any given time will vary according to the perceived risk of a particular flight. This is part of a strategy which has moved staff away from predictable static controls to a more mobile and flexible approach targeted at areas of highest risk.

The anti-smuggling staff can also be augmented, when necessary, by staff from elsewhere in the executive units who are normally deployed on other duties. In addition, specialist intelligence teams are used in each area.

Following the introduction of the single market on 1 January 1993, revised arrangements under the European Community baggage regulation enable hold baggage consigned from outside the Commmunity to be cleared at the final destination in the EC. Special measures are taken to identify hold baggage interlined by passengers travelling from international flights at Heathrow and Gatwick. These enable full examination of baggage to be made by customs, where necessary, at the final point of destinations.

Customs checks are increasingly based on the indentification of targets through the use of intelligence and risk indicators.

This highly selective and unobtrusive approach is in no way diminished at those locations where examination of baggage takes place in domestic facilities.

Public Finance

Mr. Hain: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out (a) tax receipts and (b) public expenditure as a percentage of gross domestic product for each year since 1978.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to tables 2B.1 amd 2B.2 of the 1993 "Financial Statement and Budget Report".

VAT

Ms Quin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration he has given to lowering the VAT rate levied on energy-saving equipment including insulation and draughtproofing; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: My right hon. Friend keeps all taxes under review, but no Chancellor normally proposes changes in rates outside the Budget statement. In the sixth EC VAT directive, the United Kingdom Government agreed in 1977 that no new zero rates would be introduced.

Pensions

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost to the Exchequer of providing non-contributory, index-linked pensions to public sector employees; and what plans he has to review such practice.

Mr. Portillo: Of the main public service schemes, only the armed forces pension scheme is non-contributory. The civil service and judicial pension schemes are non-contributory for members' benefits, but members pay contributions for survivors' benefits. The estimated cost to the Exchequer of providing pensions from these schemes in 1992-93 is as follows:

	£ million
Civil Service Pension Scheme	1,949
Armed Forces Pension Scheme	1,659
Judicial Pensions Scheme	9

The determination of pay for the civil service, armed forces and the judiciary takes into account the value of the whole remuneration package of pay and other conditions of service, including the value of pension scheme benefits and the contribution which scheme members make. These arrangements are kept under review.

Northern Cyprus

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to prevent the flow of capital from the United Kingdom to destinations in northern Cyprus.

Mr. Nelson: None.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to prevent the illegal import of manufactured goods from Turkish Cyprus.

Sir John Cope: Manufactured goods imported from north Cyprus are subject to the normal controls applied by Customs and Excise.

Income Tax

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total number of guidance documents issued to employers in connection with the levying of income tax; and what was the total expenditure on such documents in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 10 June 1993]: Each year 130,000 new employers are issued with a starter pack jointly by the Inland Revenue and the Contributions Agency containing basic pay-as-you-earn guidance—tax and national insurance contributions—together with a set of standard tables and a small supply of PAYE stationery, such as deduction working sheets and a requisition form for ordering additional supplies. Around 1·1 million established employers receive an annual pack before the start of each tax year containing revised basic guidance, more detailed guides for reference purposes and further supplies of PAYE stationery tailored to the individual employer's requirements. Soon after the Budget, all employers are sent a supplementary pack containing details of the Chancellor's proposals relating to PAYE including, where appropriate, revised tax tables. Following the move to a unified Budget this November, the contents of the annual and Budget packs will be combined in a single, slimmer pack for all employers.

The Inland Revenue has not kept central records of the total expenditure in each of the last 10 years on providing all employers with the documents they need to operate PAYE. Many of these documents are provided by local tax offices in response to individual requests by employers. However, the Inland Revenue estimate the cost of printing, packing and posting the bulk issue packs at between £4·5 million and £5·5 million in each of the last three years.

Removal Expenses

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the number of employees for whom removal expenses and benefits exceeded (a) £6,000, (b) £8,000, (c) £10,000, (d) £12,000, (e) £14,000, (f) £16,000, (g) £18,000 and (h) £20,000 in the latest year for which figures are available;

(2) if he will estimate the yield to the Exchequer of limiting tax relief for removal expenses and benefits to (a) £6,000, (b) £8,000, (c) £10,000, (d) £12,000, (e) £14,000, (f) £16,000, (g) £18,000 and (h) £20,000 in 1994-95.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 11 June 1993]: There is no comprehensive statistical data source from which such estimates could be calculated. On the basis of estimates of the total number of employer-assisted relocations from survey and administrative data sources, and reasonable estimates of the likely levels of expenses in 1993-94, the following tentative estimates can be made. These are all based on the Budget proposals for the reform of tax relief for relocation packages with the corresponding limits substituted for the proposed level of £8,000.

Threshold for removal expenses and benefits (excluding loss on sale payments) £	Numbers subject to tax for 1993-94[1,2] (thousands)	Income tax yield[3] in 1994-95[4] £ million
6,000	100	300
8,000	100	200
10,000	75	150
12,000	50	150
14,000	50	100
16,000	50	100
18,000	50	100
20,000	25	50

[1] Excluding employees covered by transitional arrangements—estimated to be one third of those moving and receiving relocation assistance in 1993-94.
[2] Numbers of employees receiving "loss on sale" payments, additional housing cost payments, or receiving eligible removal expenses and benefits in excess of the stated levels.
[3] Including tax on payments for losses on sale.
[4] In respect of payments in 1993-94.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of employees for whom tax relief for removal expenses and benefits were claimed in each year since 1987.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 11 June 1993]: Available estimates of the numbers of employees whose employers made payments towards removal expenses and who benefited from tax relief under extra statutory concession A5 are as follows:

	Thousands
1987	200
1988	175
1989	200

	Thousands
1990	200
1991	175

These figures are based on information from labour force surveys for United Kingdom moves and Inland Revenue data for international relocations.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of employees moving because of (a) a job transfer with an existing employer and (b) to take up new employment, who benefited from assistance with removal expenses in the latest year for which figures are available; and what was the total tax relief available to employees in each category in that year.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 11 June 1993]: Approximate estimates in respect of 1991-92, the latest year for which data are available, are given in the table. Estimates of the relevant numbers of employees relocating in the United Kingdom are based on the 1991 labour force survey and those for international moves are based on administrative data. The revenue costs of tax relief—under extra statutory concession A5—are based on reasonable assumptions about the levels of payments and are very tentative.

	Number (thousands)	Cost (£ million)
United Kingdom moves:
With same employer	120	600
To new employer	40	100
International moves	15	100
Total	175	800

In addition, there were in 1991 nearly 300,000 job-related moves in the United Kingdom which did not benefit from relocation assistance from employers.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Firms (Receivership)

Mr. Alton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the percentage change in the number of firms in the north-west going into receivership in the last month for which figures are available.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: There is no regional breakdown of official statistics on companies placed into receivership. A quarterly breakdown for England and Wales is published in the "Companies Report" presented to Parliament annually by the Department.

International Telephone Charges

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish details of international telephone charges from the United Kingdom; what information he has on equivalent charges from other EC countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Both BT and Mercury Communications are obliged to make their telephone call charges available. I refer the hon. Member to their published tariffs, which are available from these companies' major offices.

International comparisons are complex, since the basis on which calls are defined can differ from country to country. The following table sets out the price inclusive of VAT in ECUs, of a peak rate, three-minute international telephone call between EC member states.

Vehicle Components

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the levels of import and export of automotive vehicle components for each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Needham: The figures requested are as follows:

Motor vehicle parts
(Standard Industrial Classification 1980 Activity Heading 3530)
£ million

	Exports (FOB)	Imports (CIF)
1992	3,460	4,654
1991	3,365	4,024
1990	3,105	4,077
1989	2,820	3,697
1988	2,476	3,052

Source: HM Customs and Excise.

It is recognised that not all parts used by the motor industry are assigned to the motor vehicle parts industry (Activity Heading 3530) as officially defined. As a result, the trade values assigned to the motor vehicle parts industry are understated.

Oil Companies

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he intends to continue part III of the undertakings given by the oil companies to the Government.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The Director General of Fair Trading will be advising my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade on whether any changes should be made to the petrol undertakings. Until that advice has been received and considered, it would be inappropriate to comment further.

Light Rail Transit Systems

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 161, on British train manufacture, what progress has been made in his Department's attempts to enhance Britain's capability in light rail transit systems, including trams.

Mr. Sainsbury: Four projects of direct relevance to light rail transit systems, including trams, are currently being considered by my Department under the tracked transport systems technology programme.

Product Marking

Mr. Riddick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals his Department has to introduce regulations requiring retail products to be named in a manner which indicates the product's area of origin.

Mr. McLoughlin: None. Such regulations would conflict with the United Kingdom's obligations under the treaty of Rome and other international agreements.

Mr. Riddick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals his Department has to introduce regulations requiring all footwear for sale to be labelled with a symbol relating to the material of construction.

Mr. McLoughlin: My Department has no plans to introduce such regulations. No agreement has been reached on the proposed EC directive and we continue to oppose the obligatory use of symbols to label footwear.

Regional Aid

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will make a statement about the representations he has received about changes in the travel-to-work areas eligible for regional aid;

(2) if he will make a statement about the continued eligibility of travel-to-work areas for regional aid;

(3) if he will make a statement about the changes he intends to make in the travel-to-work areas eligible for regional aid.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave to the hon. Member for Falkirk, West (Mr. Canavan) on 21 April, Official Report, columns 117-18 and to the hon. Member for Stockton, South (Mr. Devlin) on 6 May, Official Report, column 206.

Jobs Stoke-on-Trent

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will give the full cost and remit of the Coopers and Lybrand development study undertaken under contract to English Estates to inquire into the provision of job opportunities in the Stoke-on-Trent area.

Mr. Heseltine: Coopers and Lybrand was asked to provide an overview of the local economy and an analysis of the local property market. The cost of the report was approximately £15,000.

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who is responsible for co-ordinating measures to counteract the loss of miners' jobs in the Stoke-on-Trent area.

Mr. Heseltine: Lord Walker has overall responsibility for co-ordinating the regeneration package for coal closure areas in England.

North Staffordshire Coalfield

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to keep all hon. Members representing the north Staffordshire coalfield fully and regularly briefed of all relevant initiatives undertaken by English Estates or by his Department.

Mr. Heseltine: I have asked English Estates to keep hon. Members informed of its activities locally.

Trentham Colliery

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much new money has been allocated to date to counter the unemployment caused by compulsory redundancies at Trentham colliery; and what percentage that is of the total money allocated to alleviate job losses in coal mining areas.

Mr. Heseltine: Additional money already made available to help regenerate the Trentham colliery area are £7 million from English Estates, £4·9 million from the Department of Employment for the Staffordshire training and enterprise council and £826,000 from the Department of the Environment's coalfield areas fund. This represents over 6 per cent. of the £200 million regeneration package for pit closure areas. Regional enterprise grants have also been extended to the area.

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which Government Departments, Government agencies and private consultants commissioned from the public sector are currently being consulted or engaged in endeavours to counter the effect of job losses at Trentham.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Department of Trade and Industry, in conjunction with English Estates, the Department of Employment and the Department of the Environment, is working closely with local authorities, the Staffordshire training and enterprise council and other local bodies to counter the effect of job losses at Trentham.

Corporate Jets

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information his Department has received on United Kingdom bids received by British Aerospace for Corporate Jets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine: Any information received by my Department on bids received by British Aerospace for Corporate Jets, which has not been announced publicly, is commercially confidential.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will visit the Corporate Jets factory, Broughton, Clwyd; and if he will receive a deputation of production workers from the Corporate Jets factory, Clwyd.

Mr. Heseltine: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Industry, who has ministerial responsibility for the aerospace industry, visited the Broughton factory site last year. I have no plans to visit the Broughton site or to receive a delegation of production workers from the factory.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information his Department has received on the proposed timetable for the sale by British Aerospace of Corporate Jets to Raytheon (United States); and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine: Any information received by the Department of Trade and Industry on the proposed timetable, which has not been announced publicly by the companies involved, is commercially confidential.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement concerning the competition aspects of the proposed sale by British Aerospace of Corporate Jets to Raytheon (United States); and what discussions he has had with the chairman of British Aerospace concerning the competition aspects of the sale.

Mr. Heseltine: The chairman of British Aerospace advised me of the proposed sale on 26 May. However, it is for the Director General of Fair Trading to consider whether the proposed acquisition is a qualifying merger under the Fair Trading Act 1973 and, if so, to advise me in due course.

Indonesia

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations in regard to abuses of human rights were made by the Trade Minister heading the British trade delegation to Indonesia on 1 to 3 June.

Mr. Needham: None. The Indonesians are fully aware of the Government's firm stance on human rights issues, expressed most recently by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary during his visit last April. The purpose of my visit was to promote and further the interests of the accompanying British firms in the civil sector in the buoyant markets of Thailand, Singapore and Indonesia.

Petrol Supply

Sir David Steel: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he intends to accept the Office of Fair Trading"s recommendations on abolition of part III of the undertakings given by the oil companies on the supply of petrol.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has not yet received the Office of Fair Trading's recommendations. Until this advice has been received and considered, it would not be appropriate to comment further.

Bankruptcy Audit Fees

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total sum his Department collected from the 15 per cent. audit fees in bankruptcy for the last financial year.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The total sum collected by the DTI from the 15 per cent. audit fees in bankruptcy for the last financial year was £7,230,351.

Plugs and Sockets

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to ensure that EC proposals for the harmonisation of electrical plug and socket systems do not damage the interests of United Kingdom industry and commerce.

Mr. Sainsbury: My Department is working closely with the relevant trade associations to ensure that the interests of the United Kingdom industry—in particular, manufacturers of domestic appliances, plugs and sockets—are reflected in the harmonisation proposals coming forward, while recognising that consumer safety issues are also important.

Assisted Areas

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 7 June, Official Report, columns 164-65, what are the unemployment statistical series that are being taken into account in determining the new assisted areas map.

Mr. Heseltine: Data on unemployment rates in recent years, including long-term rates, have been considered in the assisted areas map review.

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many unclaimed dividends were held in the Insolvency Service's account during the financial year ended 31 March; and what was the total value of these dividends.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The total of unclaimed dividends held in the ISA as at 31 March 1993 was £14,085,952.

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many unclaimed dividends were surrendered to the Consolidated Fund by the Insolvency Service in the year ended 31 March; and what was their total value.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The Insolvency Service does not keep a separate record of the number of unclaimed dividends surrendered to the Consolidated Fund in any one year, but their total value for the year ended 31 March 1993 was £530,398.

Post Offices

Mr. Spearing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures he intends to adopt to maintain the network of Crown, agency, or sub-post offices where payments for a full range of pensions and benefits can be made.

Mr. McLoughlin: We are committed to maintaining a nationwide network of post offices at which pensioners and other benefit recipients will continue to be able to receive their benefits. Total government business transacted through post offices has increased in each of the last three years, and is expected to increase again this year. The future prosperity of the network of post offices is one of the key objectives of our review of the structure and organisation of the Post Office, announced by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade on 29 July 1992.

Shipbuilding Directive

Dr. Godman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he last discussed with his ministerial counterparts from other member states of the European Community the question of the seventh directive on the shipbuilding intervention fund being succeeded by an eighth directive based upon similar criteria to those which underpin the former; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine: On 4 May the Industry Council agreed in principle to extend the seventh directive for 12 months after it expires on 31 December 1993.

Political Donations

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the operation of the Companies Act 1985 in relation to the use of associate companies to make political donations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Directors of a GB parent company are required under section 234 and schedule 7 of the Companies Act 1985 to disclose political donations of more than £200 in aggregate made by the company and its subsidiaries.

Subsidiaries, defined in section 736 of the Act, are bodies corporate under the control of a parent. Associate companies are the subject of significant influence, rather than control. The responsibility for the reporting of political donations made by United Kingdom associate companies lies with the associate company concerned.

I have no plans for any review.

KONVER Programme

Mr. Hutton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if his Department will provide matching financial support for projects which succeed in attracting funding under the KONVER programme;

(2) what estimate his Department has made of the employment implications in the United Kingdom of successful bids for support under the KONVER programme; and if he will make a statement;

(3) how many applications for funding under the KONVER programme have been submitted to his Department; and how many are being recommended to the Commission;

(4) what preparations his Department has made to submit applications under the KONVER programme to the European Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine: The KONVER scheme of grants was announced on 28 May this year. The United Kingdom along with other member states has been invited to put forward a programme by the European Commission. The Commission has asked for these to be transmitted to Brussels by 31 August 1993.

My Department will shortly be consulting interested bodies for their views on the draft United Kingdom programme. Applications for projects have not yet been invited, and it is not possible at this stage to determine what the employment implications might be.

It will be for applicants themselves to provide funds to match any grant awarded under KONVER.

English Estates

Mr. Trotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will ensure that an early start is made by English Estates to its Walker development on Tyneside.

Mr. Eggar: English Estates has already let the building contract.

Scottish Beer

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement, following the meeting between the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Consumer Affairs and Small Firms and the Brewers Society, on the issue of the head on Scottish beer.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 9 June 1993]: At the meeting on 19 May, representatives of the Brewers Society urged the revocation of the order bringing into force section 43 of the Weights and Measures Act 1985. The Government are considering the points made by the society and other representations received on this matter. A decision will be announced as soon as possible.

Baltic States

Mr. Wareing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will give a breakdown of import and export trade with (a) Latvia and (b) Estonia since those countries became independent.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 10 June 1993]: Figures for trade between the United Kingdom and the Baltic states have been available since January 1992. Exports and imports for Latvia and Estonia are:

£ million

	United Kingdom exports	United Kingdom imports
1992
Estonia	5·6	10·4
Latvia	7·8	25·9
January to April 1993
Estonia	2·7	8·7
Latvia	2·6	17·2

A detailed breakdown of these figures is published monthly in the Central Statistical Office Business Monitor "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom with countries outside the European Community (Extra-EC Trade)", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Offshore Oil

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those offshore oil extraction projects that have been subject to an environmental impact assessment under the provisons of article 4(2) of EC directive 85/337.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 7 June 1993]: No offshore oil extraction projects requiring an environmental impact assessment have been brought forward since 1985.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what criteria and thresholds have been established by his Department to determine which United Kingdom offshore sector oil and gas extraction activities should be subject to an environmental impact assessment under article 4(2) of EC directive 85/337;

(2) which oil and gas extraction activities in the United Kingdom offshore sector are subject to the provisions under article 4(2) of EC directive 85/337.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 7 June 1993]: For any oil and gas development within 25 miles of the coast or in an environmentally sensitive area, preparation of an environmental impact assessment is a condition of the grant of a licence.

Oil Exploration, Wales

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what money his Department is making available for a comprehensive survey of seabird populations in Cardigan bay, St. George's channel and the Bristol channel before all drilling activity is permitted in these areas.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 10 June 1993]: The Department of Trade and Industry is a contributing member to the Joint Nature Conservancy Committee's "Seabirds at Sea" survey. Since 1990, phase 4 has investigated the seabird populations from the Irish sea to the Dover straits which includes the Cardigan bay, St. George's channel and Bristol channel areas. The Department's contribution to this phase is £32,000 annually.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans his Department has to carry out or support a survey of background levels of hydrocarbons in Cardigan bay, St. George's channel and the Bristol channel before any oil drilling is permitted.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 10 June 1993]: The Department has no such plans at present.

Oil and Gas Licences

Dr. Twinn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the results of the 14th off-shore oil and gas licensing round.

Mr. Eggar: I am able to inform the House that I received a total of 97 applications for 128 of the 484 blocks offered in the three stages of the 14th offshore licensing round. These applications involved 62 companies, either as sole applicants or in various consortia. Following careful examination of all applications, I am prepared to offer licences for 110 of the blocks applied for.

This has been the largest round, in terms of the number of blocks on offer, since the 4th round in 1972; and the largest in terms of the number of blocks awarded since the 11th round in 1989. This provides ample evidence of the high level of continuing interest in United Kingdom offshore oil and gas resources.

I have already announced the award of licences for 12 of these blocks, seven in Cardigan bay and five west of the Shetlands; in these cases, an early announcement has enabled the successful applicant to proceed promptly with exploration of potentially major new basins.

The other awards cover acreage in both new and mature areas. It was particularly refreshing to see innovative proposals for further investigation of areas such as the southern North sea, which has already been extensively explored; it is clear that such areas are mature only at particular geological horizons and that further reserves may be identified at levels previously considered unprospective.

In total, 33 of the blocks awarded have not been licensed in the past. There was particularly keen competition for blocks in the English channel, the Solway firth and the North channel which were offered for licensing for the first time. There was also strong interest in areas of St. George's channel and the Peel basin which have been lightly explored in the past.

In making decisions on the round, I have been particularly mindful of the environment. Many of these areas are close to shore and environmentally sensitive, and stringent conditions will be attached to licences to ensure that licensees take due care when exploring these blocks. The industry nominated a further 35 highly sensitive blocks for inclusion in this round but for which satisfactory safeguards could not be agreed, and these blocks were not offered for licensing. A full environmental impact assessment will be required before a licensee may develop any find within 25 miles of the coast or in other sensitive areas further offshore; and the general public will have access to the companies' environmental appraisal reports on request, in line with the EC freedom of access to environmental information directive.

Where companies applied for blocks in environmentally sensitive areas, they were asked to assess the environmental resources in these areas and to identify the steps they planned to take to avoid or minimise environmental impact, should they be awarded the block. The degree of environmental awareness and the quality of environmental presentations provided was taken into account when considering awards in these areas. I am happy to say that most companies demonstrated their awareness of environmental issues and many had carried out high-quality pre-application work. I am taking steps to ensure that companies awarded licences do not lose sight of their environmental commitments. My officials will require licensees to report on local consultation at a set time; require licensees to discuss plans for seismic activity and drilling before these activities are carried out;

stipulate that, at the Department's discretion, Government observers may be present at some operations; require a post-operational return to indicate how licence conditions have been met.

These steps will ensure that the 14th round does more to safeguard the environment than any previous round.

The results of this round show the continuing commitment of the international oil and gas industry to the United Kingdom continental shelf. I am, however, particularly pleased to note the success of a number of British independent companies in the round, both as partners and as operators. The re-evaluation of mature areas and the opening up of new basins as a result of this round should ensure that the UKCS remains an important oil and gas-producing province well into the next century.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's aid policy to Kenya.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We continue to provide substantial development aid and humanitarian assistance to Kenya. In addition, we are prepared to pledge new fast disbursing balance of payments assistance once the international financial institutions assess that Kenya has made satisfactory progress in implementing the recently agreed IMF-monitored economic reform programme and subject to the political environment being acceptable.

Eastern Bloc (Training)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to publish a progress report on the Chancellor of the Exchequer's financial sector scheme for training and experience in western insurance banking and finance for former eastern bloc country management and civil servants.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Chancellor's financial sector scheme is open to countries of the former Soviet Union and the Baltic states, not eastern Europe. Officials will review progress with the scheme in July. Conclusions will be summarised in the know-how fund's annual report, which will be published in early 1994.

EDUCATION

Standard Assessment Tasks (Class Size)

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment he has made of the correlation between achievement in standard assessment tasks taken by children at key stage 1 and class size.

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Schools gave to the hon. Member for Ilford, South (Mr. Gapes) on 17 May at column 23.

School Meals

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the average price of a school meal in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in cash and real terms in each year since 1979.

Mr. Forth: Information is collected on the fixed charges for a standard meal in schools operating a dining centre and on the amount allowed, the "authorised spend", for each pupil receiving a free meal in schools operating a cash cafeteria system.

This information—in both cash and real terms—for each year since January 1990 is shown in the table. Information for earlier years is not readily available.

Mr. Forth: Information on school meal arrangements in each local education authority in January 1992—the latest date for which information is available—is shown in the table. Similar information for January 1989 and subsequent years is published annually in the "Statistics of Education (Schools)" volumes, copies of which are available in the Library. Information for earlier years is not readily available.

Nursery Education

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what information he has on the numbers and proportion of eligible children who are in (a) local authority nursery schools and (b) reception classes in primary schools, broken down by social class.

Mr. Robin Squire: Information is not collected centrally on the numbers of pupils in reception classes in primary schools. In January 1992—the latest date for which information is available—the total number of pupils of all ages in maintained nursery schools in England was 52,204. A breakdown of this figure by social class is not available.

Teacher Redundancies

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what estimate he has of the numbers of qualified teachers who have (a) taken voluntary redundancy or (b) been made compulsorily redundant, in each of the years 1991 and 1992.

Mr. Forth: The table shows the number of teachers aged 50 and over who retired prematurely by reason of redundancy from maintained schools in England and claimed their superannuation benefits during the financial years 1990-91 to 1992-93. Information on other redundancies of teachers is not centrally recorded.

Year to March	Teachers
1991	[1]1,587
1992	[1]1,464
1993	[1]2,028

[1]Teachers prematurely retired by reason of redundancy: maintained schools in England.

Teachers' Conferences

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement on his recent visits to the national conferences of teachers' organisations.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend accepted invitations from the Association of Teachers and Lecturers, the Secondary Heads Association and the National Association of Head Teachers to address their annual conferences. Copies of the texts of these addresses have been placed in the Library.

University Funding

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what recent representations and information he has received about funding at the university of Essex; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. Friend has received no such representations. Funding for individual universities is a matter for the Higher Education Funding Council for England.

VAT (Fuel)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education whether the level of student grants will be adjusted to reflect the forthcoming value added tax on energy.

Mr. Boswell: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Lewisham, Deptford (Ms Ruddock) on 24 March at column 603. The rates of student support for the academic year 1993-94 were announced last month, and those for 1994-95 will be announced next spring.

School Playing Fields

Mr. Hoon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement on the consultation letter on the sell-off of school playing fields.

Mr. Forth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Stalybridge and Hyde (Mr. Pendry) on 13 May 1993 at columns 526-27.

Undergraduate Courses (Fees)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what representations he has received from university directors regarding the introduction of a system of top-up fees for undergraduate courses; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what representations he has received regarding the introduction of a system of top-up fees for undergraduate courses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: Recent press publicity has led to one or two representations from members of the public about the introduction of top-up fees for undergraduate courses. No such representations have been received recently from the heads of universities, although my right hon. Friend is aware of current discussions within the Committee of Vice Chancellors and Principals, about the future funding of higher education.

English

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many representations he has received on the subject of the proportion of coursework in the assessment of GCSE English; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: During the past year my right hon. Friend received 76 letters about GCSE coursework in English. The 40 per cent. limit for coursework for English is higher than that for most other GCSE subjects, because we recognise that some aspects of achievement in the subject are better assessed through extended tasks than through a terminal examination. However, there must be a limit on coursework assessment if we are to have confidence in the reliability and consistency of GCSE grades.

Access Funds

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what are the amounts to be allocated to each of the access funds in England for 1993-94; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: A total of £23·78 million will be available for the access funds for the 1993-94 academic year, which represents a 9·6 per cent. increase over 1992-93. This generous increase will enable colleges and universities to offer access funds to more students who face severe financial difficulties which might prevent them from pursuing their courses. I am sure that all concerned will welcome the extra help this represents.

The total sum is being allocated between the three funds as follows:

£ million

	1993-94	1992-93
Undergraduate fund	13·15	11·99
Postgraduate fund	6·03	5·50
Further education fund	4·60	4·20
Total	23·78	21·69

Note: The figures for 1992-93 have been derived from those announced earlier to bring them onto a comparable basis with those for 1993-94, having regard to the new framework for higher and further education established in April 1993.

These funds for 1993-94 will be allocated by the appropriate funding council.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Chile

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what communications Her Majesty's Government have had with Dr. Carlos Cardoen of Chile since 1985 over the procurement of British machine tools for the production of armaments in Chile.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We have no record of communications between Her Majesty's Government and Dr. Carlos Cardoen about such procurement. I also refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the then Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, the hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones), to the hon. Member for Rhondda (Mr. Rogers) on 21 April 1993 at column 107.

Iran

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Iranian Government concerning its reported violation of Iraqi airspace on Tuesday 25 May in an air attack on bases of the Mujaheddin organisation of Iran.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett) on 7 June at column 84.

Social Charter

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to press for an increase in the membership of the Committee of Independent Experts on the working of the Council of Europe's social charter.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The amending protocol envisages an increase in the membership of the Committee of Independent Experts to "not less than nine". We support such an increase.

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on recommendation 1168 of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe on the revitalisation of the Council of Europe's social charter.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Recommendation 1168 is an important contribution to the current consideration within the Council of Europe of changes to the European social charter.

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to press for the revision of voting arrangements under the Council of Europe's social charter so that only representatives of those Governments who subscribe to the charter are able to vote on matters raised under it.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: It has now been agreed that, as envisaged by the amending protocol, only those states which have ratified the charter shall vote when the Committee of Ministers is acting as part of the supervisory machinery of the charter.

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries have subscribed to the Council of Europe's social charter, but have not ratified the amending protocol opened for signature on 21 October 1991; and if he will make it his policy to encourage those who have not ratified the protocol to do so.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The following countries have ratified the social charter, but have not ratified the amending protocol: Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Malta, Spain, Turkey and the United Kingdom. Decisions on ratification are a matter for individual Governments.

Israel

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on the Arab boycott of Israel; and what recent initiatives his Department has taken.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have always condemned the boycott as iniquitous and incompatible with the spirit of the peace process. We continue to seek Arab agreement to end it—we initiated an EC démarche last autumn under our presidency. The response to this démarche, and to numerous bilateral approaches made by the United Kingdom, has been uneven. But we are encouraged by signs that some Arab countries are enforcing the requirements of the boycott less rigorously, and in particular by recent reports that Kuwait will cease to apply the boycott to third countries.

Channel Islands and Isle of Man

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the relationship between the Channel islands and the Isle of Man with the European Community.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The relationship of the Channel islands and the Isle of Man with the European Community is governed by article 227(5)(c) of the treaty of Rome—and the equivalent provisions in the ECSC and Euratom treaties—and by protocol 3 to the Act signed on 15 January 1972 concerning the conditions of United Kingdom accession to the Community. The islands chose in 1972 to remain essentially outside the Community. The broad effects of the treaty provisions is that the islands are included in the Community solely for customs purposes and for certain aspects of the common agricultural policy and free movement of goods. The islands neither contribute to, nor are eligible to benefit from, Community funds.

Northern Cyprus

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to impose restrictions on trade between Britain and the illegal northern Cyprus Government.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The question of imports to the United Kingdom from northern Cyprus is the subject of a case pending before the European Court of Justice.

Bosnia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received from United Nations authorities in Bosnia-Herzegovina in respect of attacks by Muslim forces on Croat villages and atrocities committed against the Croat population; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have seen reports from the United Nations and the European Community monitor mission on Muslim attacks on Croat communities, particularly around Travnik. It is clear that there have been many casualties. Ethnic cleansing is taking place. We continue to deplore aggression and human rights abuses, whichever party is responsible.

Entry Clearance

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what instructions have been given to entry clearance officers in British consulates in European Community member states to enable them to fulfil their obligations to provide non-Community national spouses of British citizens residing in other member states with entry clearance to allow them to travel to and settle in the United Kingdom in accordance with the requirements of article 3 of Council directive 68/360/EEC.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Following a European Court of Justice ruling in July 1992, instructions were issued to posts about procedures for dealing with entry clearance applications from non-EC spouses of British citizens who wish to return to the United Kingdom with their non-EC spouse, after residing in another member state.

Any such entry clearance applications are currently referred to the Home Office for a decision, pending the issue of further guidance to posts.

European Court of Justice

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions since 1983 Her Majesty's Government have been judged by the European Court of Justice to have been in breach of European Community directives; and what that number represents as a percentage of (a) cases brought against the United Kingdom and (b) cases won by a plaintiff or plaintiffs.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 8 June 1993]: The United Kingdom was held to be in breach of the relevant directives in six out of 12 direct actions—50 per cent.—brought before the European Court of Justice by the Commission since 1983, in accordance with article 169 of the treaty of Rome, involving allegations that the United Kingdom was in breach of its obligations under EC directives.

Further details of cases brought against the United Kingdom are contained in the six-monthly White Papers on developments in the European Community, which also contain details of references to the European Court of Justice from United Kingdom courts under article 177 of the treaty.

Japan

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he or other Ministers or officials of his Department have had with Japanese counterparts since 1990 regarding (a) the application of international safeguards to and (b) the implications for non-proliferation of the export of plutonium from the United Kingdom to Japan.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

All plutonium in Japan is subject to full-scope international safeguards. Japan has made clear its commitment to the goal of preventing the proliferation of nuclear weapons and is a non-nuclear weapons state party to the non-proliferation treaty. Appropriate assurances are obtained from the Japanese Government before any plutonium is exported there from the United Kingdom, but otherwise Her Majesty's Government have not discussed the matters referred to by the hon. Member with the Japanese authorities.

HEALTH

Mental Health

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her estimate of the number of people with mental health problems in each region.

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally. A national survey assessing the extent of psychiatric morbidity in Great Britain is currently being carried out by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. The survey, the results of which will be available in 1995, will provide information both nationally and regionally on the nature and extent of psychiatric illness amongst adults.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of NHS mentally ill patients in non-NHS hospitals, by region in each of the last five years.

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

"Making London Better"

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her estimate of the number of nurses who (a) will be deployed and (b) will not be able to be redeployed within London health services when hospitals are closed under "Making London Better" plans.

Dr. Mawhinney: It is too early to speculate about the effects of reconfiguring hospital services in London or the number of nurses who will be employed in the capital's hospitals.

Hospital Beds

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds there are in inner London and each Thames region; and what are the projected numbers in each of the next five years.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table. Information on projected numbers of beds is not available centrally.

Average daily number of available beds all wards 1991-92

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current number of (a) acute and (b) geriatric beds in each health region.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Londoners' Health

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to create an information base about the health of the London population.

Dr. Mawhinney: It is the role of purchasers to develop an information base about the health of their local population in order to make informed decisions about the delivery of health services. All regional health authorities publish an annual public health report, which draws on information from the public health common data set, commissioned by the Department.

King Edward VII Hospital

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the future of the King Edward VII hospital, Trent region.

Mr. Sackville: The future of the site of the former King Edward VII orthopaedic hospital in Sheffield is a matter for Trent regional health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact Sir Michael Carlisle, chairman of Trent regional health authority, for details.

West Midlands RHA

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the qualifications of Bryan Baker for the position of chair of the West Midlands regional health authority.

Dr. Mawhinney: Bryan Baker has wide experience of handling major business and providing strategic leadership at the highest level, gained during his long and distinguished career with Tarmac plc.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she is requiring the West Midlands regional health authority and Wessex regional health authority to take to recover the payments improperly paid to and accepted by officers of that authority when they resigned or whose employment was terminated; and what action she expects to be taken against those authorising such payments.

Dr. Mawhinney: Health authorities should take legal advice on the case for recovery of such payments and consider whether disciplinary action is appropriate.

Trent RHA

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if a decision has yet been reached over the relocating of the headquarters of Trent regional health authority; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is a matter for the Trent regional health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact Sir Michael Carlisle, chairman of Trent regional health authority, for details.

British Health Care Consortium

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the work of the British Healthcare Consortium in Russia.

Dr. Mawhinney: The British Healthcare Consortium together with associated organisations concerned with construction, procurement, training and consultancy are offering a complete service package to regions in Russia to upgrade their health services. Currently, the main centre of activity is the Sverdlovsk region. Projects include the supply of medical equipment and pharmaceuticals and the construction of a theatre block for a new oncology hospital.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State went to Ekaterinburg in Sverdlovsk during a visit to Russia in April and was much impressed by the work the consortium is doing there.

Health Authorities

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will conduct a survey of how many health authorities and trusts in England have asked their employees to forfeit pay awards in 1993-94.

Dr. Mawhinney: No.

Subfertility

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the cost of providing a comprehensive service for the assessment and treatment of subfertility;

(2) what assumptions have been made of the cost of providing assessments and treatments for subfertility in the allocation of resources to health authorities.

Mr. Sackville: The publication "Effective Health Care: The Management of Subfertility" contains estimations of the cost of providing a comprehensive subfertility service. This guidance was issued to health authorities on 28 September 1992, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Allocations to health authorities are made on the basis of the size, age, distribution and relative health of their resident populations. It is for district health authorities to decide their priorities in purchasing services to meet the needs of their resident population.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current prescription charge as a percentage in real terms of the prescription charge in 1979.

Dr. Mawhinney: In real terms, the present prescription charge is 864 per cent. of the charge in 1979. At £4·25 it remains substantially less than the average total cost of a prescribed item to the national health service. Only one in five items dispensed by community pharmacists and appliance contractors now attracts a charge, compared with two in five in 1979.

Cancer Tests

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give the reasons why women over the age of 65 years are not called for further routine regular smear tests or mammography examinations.

Mr. Sackville: There is evidence to suggest that women over the age of 65 are less likely to accept invitations to screening. Though such women are not routinely invited, they can on request continue to be screened within agreed intervals.

NHS Overseas Enterprises

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the work of NHS Overseas Enterprises.

Dr. Mawhinney: National Health Services Overseas Enterprises (NHS OE) is the international marketing arm of the national health service (NHS) in England. NHS OE exists to provide overseas clients with a central point of access to the wealth of skill and expertise within the NHS and other organisations offering health related expertise. Current projects include establishing a management training college in Russia; commissioning a private hospital in Turkey; and planning and developing two health care colleges in Saudi Arabia.

Low-income Scheme

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the average cost of processing a claim made under the health benefits low-income scheme; and what plans she has to simplify that scheme;

(2) if she will introduce a provision for claiming optical refunds under the health benefits low-income scheme in line with the rules for claiming a refund of prescription charges and dental treatment;

(3) how many staff were engaged in the administration of the health benefits low-income scheme at Newcastle in (a) March 1991, (b) March 1992 and (c) March 1993;

(4) when she proposes to revise the health benefits low-income scheme claim form AG1.

Dr. Mawhinney: The numbers of staff at the health benefits unit in Newcastle engaged in the administration of the national health service low-income scheme were (a) 364·5 (whole-time equivalent (WTE)) in March 1991, (b) 363·5 (WTE) in March 1992 and (c) 341 (WTE) in March 1993.

The average cost of processing a claim in 1993-94 is estimated to be £6·61. Final decisions on any measures to simplify the scheme or to improve its effectiveness will be taken as part of the fundamental review of health expenditure. The content of the claim form AG1 will be considered in the light of those decisions.

Negative Growth

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for each regional health authority, the number of district health authorities that received negative growth revenue for the financial year (a) 1992-93 and (b) 1993-94.

Mr. Sackville: Revenue allocations to district health authorities are the responsibility of regional health authorities and detailed information is not routinely collected centrally. Details of the main revenue allocations in respect of resident population have been collected in a consistent and comparable format for the first time for 1993-94 but these amounts do not represent the total revenue allocation per district.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Barnsley, West and Peniston (Mr. Clapham) on 23 February at columns 546-47, for a list of the 24 districts which received less funding at constant prices for resident population in 1993-94 than in 1992-93.

Schizophrenia

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provisions for emergency beds she is making for victims of schizophrenia.

Mr. Bowis: It is the responsibility of district health authorities to purchase, having regard to available resources, mental health services including emergency provision appropriate to the needs of their local population.

Asthma Deaths

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children in each standard age group died from asthma in each of the past five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Sackville: Deaths from asthma (international classification of diseases 493) by standard age group for the past five years are published in the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys series DH2, "Mortality Statistics", table 2.

Data for 1992—not yet published—are shown in the table:

Deaths from asthma (ICD 493) by standard age group, for 1992 in England and Wales.

Age group	Total
Under 1	1
1-4	10
5-9	3
10-14	6
15-19	20

GP Contracts (Health Promotion)

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she has decided on payment levels for the new general practitioner contract health promotion and diabetes and asthma management programmes.

Dr. Mawhinney: I have decided that the payment levels for the new programmes which take effect on 1 July should be as follows:

Annual payment for a General Practitioner with average Great Britain list size (adjustments pro rata for other list sizes)

Health Promotion Programmes
Band 1 (programmes to reduce smoking)	420
Band 2 (programmes for patients at risk from hypertension, or with established coronary heart disease (CHD) or stroke)	1,135
Band 3 (full programme for prevention of CHD and stroke)	2,015
Diabetes and Asthma Programmes
Annual Payments
Diabetes Allowance (per GP)	350
Asthma Allowance (per GP)	350

There will also be a transitional protection scheme: final details of this remain under discussion with the General Medical Services Committee of the British Medical Association.

Novopens

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence she has as to the multiple use of novopens by diabetics; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations she has had in favour of the inclusion of novopens for insulin injection on the prescribable list.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have received a number of representations on the matter of novopens and the associated special needles. Their inclusion in the general practitioner prescribable list must, like all new additions to the list, be subject to the availability of resources.

Project 2000

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 59, how many Project 2000 nurses were in training in 1990 and 1991.

Mr. Sackville: There were 3,000 Project 2000 nurses in training in September 1990 and 10,500 in September 1991.

NHS Equipment

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has on the value of donated equipment (a) held by NHS trusts and health authorities at 31 March 1992 and (b) acquired by NHS trusts and health authorities over the preceding year.

Mr. Sackville: The summarised accounts of health authorities and of national health service trusts in England for 1991-92 show the total net book values of equipment acquired through donations at 31 March 1992 as £91 million and £28·3 million respectively.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 27 May at column 677 for information on the acquisition of assets from donations.

TRANSPORT

Armed Forces Railcard

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for the continuation of the armed forces railcard after railway privatisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail operates the armed forces railcard for commercial reasons: it helps to encourage use of the railway and fill seats which might otherwise be empty. The new private operators will doubtless market their services vigorously. I am sure that they will offer a range of discounted tickets in addition to the discount schemes that they will be required to provide for senior citizens, disabled people and young people. However, this will be a commercial matter for the new operators.

Jubilee Line Extension

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make an announcement on the construction of the extension of the Jubilee line.

Mr. Norris: Once a satisfactory conclusion has been reached in the negotiations between London Transport and the parties involved with the financing of Canary Wharf on the basis of their contribution to the Jubilee line extension, the Secretary of State will authorise the start of construction.

A27 (Worthing Bypass)

Sir Terence Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements have been made to inform constituents of the right hon. Member for Worthing who have objected to the Government's preferred route for the A27 and prefer a bypass of the arrangements for the public inquiry; what deadline has been set for the proposal of alternatives to the Government route; and what assessment he has made of whether all objectors will receive notice in sufficient time to prepare representations.

Mr. Key: All those who have submitted objections to the published proposals for the A27 Worthing-Lancing improvement scheme have already been notified about the arrangements for the public inquiry starting on 28 September. Those wishing to propose an alternative have been requested to submit details to the Department by 18 June. This will enable a plan of the alternatives to be drawn up by the Department's consultants and for it to be published in sufficient time for the public to prepare their representations on it before the start of the inquiry.

Rail Freight

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will supply figures for freight tonnage carried by rail for each of the last three years.

Mr. Freeman: This information is given in table 1.9 of "Transport Statistics Great Britain 1992", a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

A27

Sir Terence Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to check whether letters he has sent to the constituents of the right hon. Member for Worthing who objected to the Government's preferred route for the A27 have been delivered; and if he will extend the deadline of 18 June for submissions on alternative routes.

Mr. Key: In accordance with the Department's normal practice, all those who have objected to the published proposals for the A27 Worthing-Lancing improvement scheme were sent details of the forthcoming public inquiry by recorded delivery. Any items not delivered by the Post Office are returned to the Department. To date, four of the 1,098 notifications issued have been returned.

Alternative proposals need to be received by 18 June so that the Department's consultants can prepare a plan of each alternative for discussion with the proposer and publication in sufficient time for the public to consider and comment on it before the start of the inquiry on 28 September.

Sir Terence Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a map showing the location of the proposed temporary relief road for the A27 referred to in his statement of 20 May, Official Report, column 476.

Mr. Key: The location of the temporary highway proposed as part of the scheme for the A27 Worthing-Lancing improvement is shown on the published site plan 2 of the draft A27 Trunk Road (Worthing-Lancing Improvement Side Roads) Order. I am sending a copy of the relevant extract to my right hon. Friend.

Hospital Ships

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will explore the possibility of a feasibility study on hospital ships within the terms of reference of European objective 1 status; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: I have been asked to reply.

Objective 1 funds are not likely to be available for shipbuilding projects.

PRIME MINISTER

Ozone-depleting Substances

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Prime Minister if he will introduce guidelines to all Government Departments to secure that all future purchases made do not involve ozone-depleting substances and that the policy be reflected within specifications given to contractors and suppliers.

The Prime Minister: I understand that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is arranging a meeting of green Ministers to discuss a number of environmental issues, including the treatment of ozone-depleting substances in departmental green housekeeping strategies.

Turkish Cyprus

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Prime Minister what discussion he has had with other European Heads of State on the imposition of appropriate sanctions against the illegal régime in Turkish Cyprus.

The Prime Minister: None. The question of imports to the United Kingdom from northern Cyprus is the subject of a case pending before the European Court of Justice.

Mr. Asil Nadir

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had with the Turkish President regarding the presence of Mr. Asil Nadir in Turkish Cyprus.

The Prime Minister: Her Majesty's ambassador in Ankara has made our desire for the return of Nadir clear to the Turkish Government. The Turkish authorities are co-operating with us in the investigation.

Office Costs

Mr. Hain: To ask the Prime Minister what was the expenditure on the Prime Minister's Office broken down into salaries and other costs for each year since 1980-81 in (a) cash and (b) 1992-93 prices.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 10 June 1993]: Salary information for the years prior to 1985-86 is not available separately. The available information is as follows:

Notes:

The figures represent the cost of 10 Downing street and Chequers borne on the votes of the Cabinet Office (OPSS) and its predecessors. Over the period, the following changes have occurred to the basis of the costs:

in 1981-82 the Ministry of Defence introduced charges for the use of its aircraft;

in 1983-84 the then Property Services Agency introduced charges for buildings and services;

in 1984-85 charges were introduced for the Government Car Service and the Service personnel at Chequers; and in 1986-87 the cost of office services was included for the first time and in April 1992 26 office service posts were formally added to the complement of No. 10 Downing street. These staff were already working in No. 10 but were previously on the complement of the Cabinet Office establishments officer.

[2] Costs are shown in the year in which the expenditure was made. Because of billing delays, this is not always in the financial year in which the goods or services were provided.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Group 4

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the difference between the unit costs per prisoner movement specified in the contract with Group 4 escort services and the actual costs per prisoner movement to date.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 14 June 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about unit costs per prisoner movement for the court escort service.

The court escort contract is not based on a unit cost per prisoner movement since costs are related not only to the number of prisoner movements, but also to the geographical distribution and the length of the journeys involved. The contract price is based on an estimate of the peak demand and distribution of journeys with which the contractor is expected to cope.

Temazepam

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he has had recently about a possible rescheduling of temazepam; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: In view of the current level of misuse, the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs has been reviewing the statutory controls on temazepam. In November 1992 the council recommended in principle that the supply and possession of the drug should be subject to stricter controls and that it should be transferred from schedule 4 to schedule 3 of the Misuse of Drugs Regulations 1985.

The Home Office subsequently sought comments on this proposal from over 100 organisations and professional bodies, including the principal manufacturers of temazepam. The advisory council has recently considered the responses to this consultation, and I expect shortly to receive its conclusions.

Prisons

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place copies in the Library of the specifications for the contracts to run the Wolds and Strangeways prisons.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Reponsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Leter from Derek Lewis to Mr. John McAllion, dated 14 June 1993:

WOLDS AND STRANGEWAYS PRISONS

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking if copies can be placed in the Library of the specifications for the contracts to run Wolds and Strangeways prisons.

A copy of the operational specification for HM Prison Wolds, which formed part of the tender documents and the contract service requirement, was placed in the Library of the House on 2 May 1991. Similarly, a copy of the operational specification for HM Prison Manchester was placed in the Library on 27 October 1992.

Rape

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by year for the last five years, and for the current year to date (a) the number of cases of (i) rape and (ii) attempted rape of women reported and (b) the number of successful convictions that ensued.

Mr. Maclean: Information on the number of offences recorded by the police and the number of males convicted of rape is contained in the table.

England and Wales

Year	Number of offences recorded[1]	Number of males convicted
		Rape	Attempted rape	Other[2]
1988	2,855	413	79	7
1989	2,305	471	111	6
1990	3,391	455	78	8
1991	4,045	466	64	7
1992	4,142	[3]—	[3]—	[3]—

[1] Offences of attempted rape are included in the rape classification and cannot be separately identified.

[2] Includes man having unlawful sexual intercourse with a woman who is a defective (Sexual Offences Act 1956 S7 as amended by Mental Health Act 1959, S127); male member of staff of hospital or mental nursing home having unlawful sexual intercourse with female patient (Mental Health Act 1959 S128(1)(a)): and man having unlawful sexual intercouse with mentally disordered female patient who is subject to this care (Mental Health Act 1959 S128(1)(b)).

[3] Not yet available.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken since the publication of his Department's research and planning unit paper 71 relating to rape.

Mr. Maclean: This research examined court cases dating from 1985 and was published in March of this year. Government policies on rape since the time of the original research have focused on achieving improvements in the treatment of victims and in encouraging them to report these crimes. As the research paper acknowledges, important changes in the handling of rape cases have also occurred, with the establishment of the Crown Prosecution Service and the issue of clear guidance from the Court of Appeal on the sentences which should be imposed on those convicted of violent and sexual crime.

Following Home Office guidance in 1986, the police are increasingly alert to the special needs of rape victims. Rape examination units have been set up. The aim is to treat victims sensitively and to provide them with information about medical support and counselling services. It is believed that this has encouraged more women to come forward to report to the police that they have been raped.

Action against rape also involves a range of measures designed to ensure that offenders are brought to justice, punished appropriately, and treated, where possible, so as to reduce the risk of their re-offending. The maximum penalty for attempted rape was increased to life imprisonment in the Sexual Offences Act 1985, and anonymity for rape victims was strengthened in the Criminal Justice Act 1988. In addition, the Criminal Justice Act 1991 provides courts with powers to impose sentences which reflect the need to protect the public from serious harm.

Bosnian Refugees

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the quota of 1,0000 ex-detainees to be accepted from prison camps in Bosnia, together with their families dependants, to be reached.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No estimate can be given. The rate of arrival in the United Kingdom is dependent on the rate of referral by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. The referral rate is in turn affected by the rate at which releases can be negotiated by the International Committee of the Red Cross, and the international organisations' ability to transport dependants across difficult and dangerous areas in Bosnia to Croatia.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what official monitoring is taking place at the transit camp in Karlovac, Bosnia, of the processing of ex-detainees' applications to come to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The arrangements for the protection, accommodation, screening and monitoring of former detainees at the transit camp in Karlovac, Croatia, are the responsibility of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. The UNHCR is in regular contact with the British embassy in Zagreb but there is no official United Kingdom representation at the camp.

Animal Testing

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidelines he has introduced to control and monitor non-medical testing on animals; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what controls and safeguards he has introduced to ensure that essential medical research experiments on animals are carried out humanely and with the minimum of suffering; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Section 5(3) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 specifies the purposes for which scientific work on living animals may be performed. Most of these are concerned in some direct way with human, animal or plant health, but the definition extends also to work designed to promote progress generally in the biological or behavioural sciences, or undertaken in the context of tertiary and higher education and training or forensic science. Other provisions of the Act ensure that work is permitted for any of these purposes only where fully justified, and subject to strict controls designed to protect the welfare of the animals concerned.

Metropolitan Police (Attacks)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women police officers serving in the Metropolitan police suffered physical injuries by being attacked either with a firearm or a knife in the course of their police duties during the year 1992.

Mr. Charles Wardle: During 1992, 46 Metropolitan police officers were injured with either a firearm or sharp instrument. Of these, 44 were male officers and two were female officers.

Police First Aid Training

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department at what intervals after their basic training police officers receive updating of their first aid training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: All probationary constables are trained to St. John Ambulance certificate level at the district training centres.

After completion of the foundation course, responsibility for further first aid training falls to individual police forces. Some continue with the St. John Ambulance service, which has a re-qualification period of three years, while others run their own courses under the auspices of other bodies such as the Health and Safety Executive or the Red Cross. The re-qualification period under these schemes varies from force to force.

Prince Tomislav of Jugoslavia

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what restrictions are placed on political activity as a condition of residence for foreigners in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement on the case of Prince Tomislav of Jugoslavia.

Mr. Charles Wardle: None. Foreign nationals are, of course, subject to the normal criminal law and may be liable to deportation if they engage in activities which render their presence not conducive to the public good. Prince Tomislav Karadjordjevich has been lawfully resident in the United Kingdom for many years.

Parliamentary Constituencies

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the theoretical entitlement, in terms of number of parliamentary constituencies, of each English county and London borough for 1991 and for 1993.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The theoretical entitlement in terms of parliamentary constituencies for counties and London boroughs in 1991 is listed. These figures form the basis on which the Boundary Commission for England is conducting its general review of parliamentary constituencies. Corresponding figures for 1993 are not yet available.

Guards Divisions (Germany)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost of the Metropolitan police of closing the M4 for the tanks of the Life Guards and Blues and Royals to return to Windsor on 28 May following Thursday's Horse Guards Parade ceremony and of policing the journey; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The motorway was not closed. Cars were prevented from entering the motorway temporarily as the convoy approached each junction in order to allow it to proceed en bloc.

The escort was provided at no additional cost to the Metropolitan police.

Prison Service (Market Testing)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Prison Service staff will be involved in market-testing exercises between September 1993 and March 1995; and how many prison establishments will be involved.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The functions being market tested in the Prison Service up to September 1993 were included in the "Citizens's Charter First Report 1992". There are approximately 1,800 posts in these areas. This is still our existing programme, although some areas being market tested will overrun the original target date for completion.

The chief executive of the Prison Service will make recommendations to me later this year on the extent, form and timetable for private sector involvement in the management of prisons. This will include recommendations on future candidates for market testing.

Crimes (Weapons)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the number of reported criminal cases covering the Metropolitan police area for the year 1992 in which a knife or a gun was used during the furtherance of a criminal act.

Mr. Maclean: The number of offences in which a knife was used are not collected centrally.

The latest available figures for notifiable offences recorded by the Metropolitan police in which a firearm was reported to have been used, for 1991, were published in "Criminal statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary tables 1991", volume 3, table S3.1(A), a copy of which is in the Library.

False Arrest

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now introduce a scheme to compensate all those held in custody and subsequently found innocent of charges aganist them on a daily payment basis between the times they are first charged and the day on which they are released.

Mr. Maclean: Section 133 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 provides for compensation to be paid to a person whose conviction is quashed on an appeal out of time where a new or newly discovered fact shows beyond reasonable doubt that there has been a miscarriage of justice. In addition, I am willing to authorise ex gratia payments in cases not falling within the statutory provision in the circumstances set out by my right hon. Friend the Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd) on 29 November 1985, at columns 691-92. In all cases where the payment of compensation is approved, the amount awarded is determined after consideration by an independent assessor, who applies principles analogous to those governing the assessment of damages for civil wrongs.

It has been the long-standing policy of successive Governments that compensation should not be payable merely because at the trial or on appeal the prosecution was unable to sustain the burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt in relation to the specific charge that was brought, and I have no plans to change this policy by introducing a scheme of automatic compensation for all persons held in custody and subsequently acquitted.

Operation Bumblebee

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the success of Operation Bumblebee in the London borough of Newham; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Operation Bumblebee, the Metropolitan police service's campaign against burglary, was extended to all its areas, including that covering the London borough of Newham, on 1 June 1993. It is too early to assess its success. However, 40 premises have already been searched and 22 arrests have been made within the borough. It would seem that the success of the operation in drawing on the support of local people, is likely to be repeated in Newham as it has been elsewhere in London.

Immigration

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications from (a) husbands, (b) fiancés, (c) wives and (d) fiancées have been (i) decided, (ii) granted and (iii) refused in (A) Bombay, (B) New Delhi, (C) Madras, (D) Calcutta, (E) Islamabad, (F) Karachi, (G) Dhaka, (H) Colombo, (J) Manila and (K) Bangkok in each quarter since March 1992; how many such applications in each category and for each quarter were refused (1) wholly and (2) partly because the officer was not satisfied (I) that the primary purpose of the marriage was not immigration or (II) that the couple could support and accommodate themselves without recourse to public funds; what was the refusal rate in each instance; and what percentage of these refusals was (v) wholly and (w) partly on primary purpose grounds, and (x) wholly and (y) partly on support and accommodation grounds.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Information for the Indian sub-continent for each quarter of 1992 and for the first quarter of 1993 is given in the tables. Where the numbers are small, figures for the individual posts have been combined. Information on refusals which takes account of successful appeals is not compiled for periods shorter than 12 months. Corresponding information for Colombo, Manila and Bangkok is not available centrally.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken or plans to take to adopt into domestic legislation the resolution concerning host third countries adopted in London on 30 November by the Ministers responsible for immigration.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The draft immigration rules on asylum that have been made available to accompany the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Bill are consistent with the principles of this resolution. A final version of the rules will be laid before Parliament following enactment of the Bill.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when a draft convention parallel to the Dublin convention will be placed before the meeting of the Ministers responsible for immigration of the EC states at their meeting on 1 and 2 June in Copenhagen; and to which countries the draft convention will be opened.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Ministers have agreed that substantive negotiations with third countries on a draft convention parallel to the Dublin convention cannot take place until all 12 member states have ratified the Dublin convention. However, preliminary discussions have been conducted with Austria, Finland, Norway, Switzerland, Sweden and Canada and these are being extended to other interested European states.

Automated Fingerprint Recognition

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the report submitted to the Ministers responsible for immigration at their meeting of 30 November in London by the ad hoc group, immigration, on the establishment of a European automated fingerprint recognition system (EURODAC).

Mr. Charles Wardle: No, it was not a public document, but a working paper reporting progress. Current work on EURODAC concerns the technical practicalities of such a system. No final decision has been taken on its creation.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis giving details of how many Metropolitan police officers have been suspended from duty for (a) more than one month, (b) more than three months and (c) more than one year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Of the 52 officers suspended from duty as at 1 June 1993, two officers have been suspended for less than one month, 13 have been suspended for one to three months, 34 have been suspended for three to 12 months, and three have been suspended for more than one year.

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those parliamentary constituencies where the Metropolitan police area extends beyond the boundaries of the London boroughs.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The parliamentary constituencies where the Metropolitan police area extends beyond the boundaries of the London boroughs are:

Brentford and Ongar
Broxbourne
Epping Forest
Epsom and Ewell
Harlow
Hertsmere
Reigate
Spelthorne.

Firearms

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on the national rules of member states of the putative European union concerning the sale of firearms and other offensive weapons, including gases; and if he will state the number and title of any existing or forthcoming regulation or direction related thereto.

Mr. Charles Wardle: European Community directive 91/477/EEC on the control of the acquisition and possession of weapons was adopted in June 1991. The Firearms Acts (Amendment) Regulations 1992 implemented provisions of the directive in Great Britain with effect from 1 January 1993.

The directive sets minimum standards which all member states must achieve in their domestic firearms controls including controls on sales. Member states can have stricter controls than the minimum. The directive leaves it to member states to decide their own national controls on offensive weapons and gas spray devices. Full details of the extent to which other member states' controls exceed the directive's minimum requirements and of their controls on sales of other weapons have yet to be received.

Turkish Cyprus

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps is he taking to prevent the entry into the United Kingdom of visitors from Turkish Cyprus who have no valid or internationally recognised travel documents;

(2) what steps he is taking to prevent illegal travel documents issued by the Turkish Cypriot authorities being used for travel between Cyprus or Turkey and the United Kingdom.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The territorial entity calling itself the Turkish republic of northern Cyprus is not recognised by the United Kingdom and the travel documents which it issues are not accepted by the United Kingdom as valid travel documents. It is our present practice, however, to regard such documents as providing satisfactory evidence of identity and Cypriot citizenship, so that Cypriot citizens living in northern Cyprus are not on that ground prevented from entering the United Kingdom, provided that the other requirements of the immigration rules are met.

Drugs (West Yorkshire)

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many class A drug users were estimated to be in west Yorkshire; and how many drug-related criminal offences took place in west Yorkshire in each year since 1990.

Mr. Maclean: The total number of persons notified to the Home Office as being addicted to class A drugs in west Yorkshire in 1992 is given in table A3 of the Home Office statistical bulletin "Statistics of drug addicts notified to the Home Office, United Kingdom, 1992" (area tables). It is impossible to estimate the total number of class A drug users because of the clandestine nature of drug misuse.

The number of persons found guilty or cautioned for offences against the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 in west Yorkshire is given in table A2.1 of the Home Office statistical bulletin "Statistics of drugs seizures and offenders dealt with, United Kingdom, 1991" (area tables). Copies of the bulletins are in the Library.

Immigration (Channel Ports)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people arriving on a cross-channel ferry have been refused leave to enter the United Kingdom and removed since 1 January at (a) Dover western docks, (b) Dover eastern docks, (c) Folkestone and (d) Ramsgate.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The available information is given in the table:

Passengers refused leave to enter, and removed from, selected ports in the period January to April 1993

Port	Number of persons
Dover west	42
Dover east	808
Folkestone	16

EC Immigration Ministers

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what matters were discussed in the ad hoc group meeting of the Home Affairs Ministers responsible for immigration matters in the European Community at its meeting in June; what discussions arising from the meeting are continuing; and in what form conclusions will be presented to Parliament.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I refer to the answer which my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary gave on 9 June 1993 at column 246, which gave an account of this meeting. Discussions will continue on a range of matters set out in the working programmes on immigration and asylum agreed by the European Council at Maastricht in December 1991.

Working Holidaymakers Scheme

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the numbers and nationalities of individuals from the Commonwealth entering the United Kingdom on the working holidaymakers scheme for each year since 1990, and the first quarter of 1993; and what plans he has to alter the scheme.

Mr. Charles Wardle [holding answer 11 June 1993]: Reliable figures on admissions of working holidaymakers are available only from 1 May 1990 and are given in the table. The operation of the scheme is under review but there are no plans to abolish it.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many fatalities per 1,000 manshifts there were for each of the last 10 complete years for which statistics are available (a) in private coal mines, (b) among subcontract workers doing work for British Coal and (c) among British Coal's employees.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A fatality rate based on manshifts is not available for private mines.

The table shows the fatalities per 100,000 manshifts at British Coal Corporation—BCC—mines from 1985-86, the first year for which a discrete rate for BCC mines was calculated by the Health and Safety Executive's—HSE—inspectorate of mines.

Fatal accidents to subcontractors at BCC mines are included in the rates shown in the table. Separate records for subcontractors have not been maintained by HSE.

Women Chief Executives

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many women are currently chief executives of nationalised industries; and what monitoring he carries out of the number of women in chief executive positions in the private sector.

Miss Widdecombe: Currently there are no women chief executives of nationalised industries, although there are women on some of their boards. The Government encourage all employers to make the best use of women's talents at all levels in their organisations. It is for employers to ensure this is happening by monitoring. We firmly believe that women should be given every opportunity to advance their careers and progress to higher levels.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of people aged 18, 19, 20 and 21 years are currently out of work.

Miss Widdecombe: Information on claimant unemployment by pre-determined age bands, expressed as a percentage of the work force in those particular age bands, is available on a quarterly basis and only at national level. The latest available data for April are as follows:

Age group	Unemployment rate
18-19	18·1
20-24	16·7

The latest available labour force survey (LFS) data on unemployment by age in the United Kingdom—using the ILO measure of unemployment—are given in the following table:

Unemployment by Age, United Kingdom, Spring 1992 LFS

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish figures showing for each occupational group within the standard occupational classifications (a) the numbers currently employed and (b) the number of long-term unemployed claimants whose previous occupation fell within that group, giving the most recently available data.

Miss Widdecombe: The most recent available information from the labour force survey is given in the following table:

Employee Representation

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish the case submitted by the Government to the European Court of Justice, setting out its interpretation of the directive concerning employee representation.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I assume that the question refers to applications lodged by the European Commission with the European Court of Justice which allege that the United Kingdom has failed fully to implement the acquired rights and collective redundancies directives. Communications between the court and the Government relating to these applications are confidential between the parties concerned.

Work Permits

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many work permits were issued to non-EC persons in each of the last three years.

Miss Widdecombe: The number of work permits issued by the Department in each of the last three years is as follows:

Year	Number of work permits issued
1990	43,619
1991	37,989
1992	37,917

Apprentices

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number of apprentices in each of the last 20 years.

Miss Widdecombe: The information is not available for the period requested. Estimates from the labour force survey since 1979 of the number of people in Great Britain undertaking apprenticeships are given in the following table:

Working Hours

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment his Department has made of the health and safety implications of working long and unsocial hours.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Department is advised on such matters by the Health and Safety Commission, which through its Executive, has commissioned or supported a wide range of research, including two reviews of the scientific evidence on the health and safety implications of shiftwork. In the light of available evidence we do not consider that there is a need for general restrictions on hours of work on health and safety grounds.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what consultancy reports his Department has received concerning the misuse of funds and of independent bank accounts in relation to TECs; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The Department has received no consultancy reports concerning the misuse of funds and of independent bank accounts in relation to TECs.

Jobcentres

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, (1) pursuant to his answer of 25 February, Official Report, column 715, how many instances have now been notified to him of jobcentres advertising jobs at rates of pay below the relevant wages council minimum;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 25 February, Official Report, column 715, how standard managerial controls operate in cases where jobcentres have advertised jobs at rates of pay below the relevant wages council minimum.

Mr. Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Alan Milburn dated 14 June 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to write to you direct to respond to your Parliamentary Questions to him about Jobcentres advertisting jobs at rates of pay below the relevant Wages Council minimum and how standard managerial controls operate in such cases. This is something which falls within the responsibilities he has delegated to me as Chief Executive.

One of your questions is about the number of instances of Jobcentres advertising jobs at rates of pay below the relevant Wages Council minimum. Jobcentres should not handle such vacancies and the number of cases where they do so are few and far between. I am of course aware of the recent case in Darlington where a vacancy was accepted which did not meet the minimum wage requirement. Previous to this two vacancies were inadvertently accepted last Autumn which were publicised in the Channel 4 programme "Cutting Edge".

Your other question was how the management controls operate where such cases do arise. I can best answer by describing what happened in the Darlington case.

When the case was brought to the attention of my Jobcentre Manager, the vacancy was immediately removed from display. The employer was contacted and the Wages Council minimum rate of pay was explained.

After contacting the Wages Inspectorate the employer agreed to pay the minimum wage for the job. The vacancy details have been updated and put back on display.

As well as informing the employer of the requirements of the Wages Council minimum wage my manager arranged for all 400 displayed vacancies to be double-checked to ensure that any which fell within the scope of the Wages Council Order did comply with the minimum rates of pay.

I am sorry this incident arose. It has highlighted a possible loophole in our guidance, in that the employer's business was not covered by a Wages Council Order, though it is accepted that the particular occupation was. My people are looking again at the guidance issued to my Jobcentres, which was substantially revised just six months ago. Further guidance will be issued from my Head Office within the next four weeks.

It is up to individual managers to determine how best to monitor the many requirements we have about receipt and display of vacancies in a way which best meets the local labour market situation and I can assure you that the arrangements work well.

I hope this is helpful.

As decided by the Administration Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

Trentham Colliery

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much new money has been allocated to date and for the future to counter unemployment caused by compulsory redundancies at Trentham colliery; what percentage that is of the total money allocated to alleviate job losses in coal mining areas; and how that money is to be spent and by which department or agency acting on his behalf.

Miss Widdecombe: An additional £4·9 million has been made available to Staffordshire training and enterprise council (TEC) and the employment service to provide a range of further help for unemployed people in the Trentham colliery area. This is 6·5 per cent. of the extra £75 million available for additional assessment, jobsearch, training, retraining, assistance for new businesses and voluntary work. Staffordshire TEC plans to supplement this with a further £2 million of its own resources.

This provision forms part of the £200 million regeneration package for pit closure areas made available by the Department of Trade and Industry, the Department of the Environment and English Estates. There is also help for redundant coalworkers provided by British Coal Enterprise.

North Staffordshire Coalfield

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make it his policy to keep all hon. Members representing the North Staffordshire coalfield fully and regularly briefed on all relevant initiatives undertaken by his Department, agencies or consultants acting on his behalf.

Miss Widdecombe: Major national initiatives are announced by the Department. Hon. Members are welcome to approach me at any time, but it might be quicker and more effective if they kept in touch with the Staffordshire training and enterprise council (TEC) and the local employment service (ES). Both Richard Ward, chief executive of Staffordshire TEC at Festival way, Festival park, Stoke on Trent, Staffordshire, ST1 5TP, and Joy Cross, ES area manager, Blackburn house, The Midway, Newcastle under Lyme, Staffordshire, ST5 1TJ, will be pleased to take inquiries from hon. Members at any time.

SOCIAL SECURITY

United States Citizens

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answers to the hon. Members for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway) and for Glasgow, Garscadden, (Mr. Dewar) of 29 April, Official Report, columns 526-27, how many other residents of the United States have received United Kingdom social security, housing or other benefits this year.

Mr. Burt: In December 1991, the latest date for which figures are currently available, 67,596 people resident in the United States of America were receiving United Kingdom retirement and widows pensions. There are currently 1,080 residents of the United States of America in receipt of war pensions. Information on other benefits is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many requests for an appeal against a disability living allownce or attendance allowance decision for claims made on or after 3 February 1992 have been received; and how many of these and what percentage (a) have been successful, (b) have been unsuccessful and (c) remain outstanding.

Mr. Scott: The information requested in connection to disability living allowance is in the table:

Disability Living Allowance
(Social Security and Disability Appeal Tribunals)

3 February 1992 to 31 May 1993	Number of Appeals	Percentage
Registered	12,345	—
(a) Successful	265	2·1
(b) Unsuccessful	527	4·3
(c) Outstanding	11,553	93·6

The information relating to attendance allowance is not available in the form requested. Information on attendance allowance cases heard at disability appeal tribunals is not currently available. The most recent information is as follows:

Attendance Allowance
(Social Security Appeal Tribunals only)

1 January 1992 to 30 September 1992	Number of appeals	Percentage
Registered	309	—
Cases heard and decided	175	—
(a) Successful	60	34·3
(b) Unsuccessful	115	65·7
(c) Outstanding at 30 September 1992	313	—

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to amend the entitlements currently enjoyed by those in receipt of disability living allowance to exemption from vehicle excise duty; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I have been asked to reply.

In the March 1992 Budget, the Chancellor announced the repeal of the disabled passengers scheme which grants exemption from vehicle excise duty to certain disabled people in receipt of attendance allowance or the care component of the disability living allowance. As my right hon. Friend the Paymaster General said in the Finance Bill debate on 12 March 1992, Official Report, columns 148-52, the repeal is to be effected by an appointed day order which will contain provisions to ensure that anyone currently benefiting from this scheme will continue to do so. The appointed day order has yet to be made.

The repeal does not affect entitlement to VED exemption granted under the war pensioners mobility supplement or the higher rate mobility component of the disability living alowance, or to invalid carriages.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many invalidity benefit recipients in Great Britain received (a) invalidity benefit alone, (b) invalidity benefit with disability living allowance or attendance allowance but no income-related benefits and (c) invalidity benefit supplemented by one of the income-related benefits, at the latest available date.

Mr. Scott: The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is as follows.
Number of Invalidity Benefit recipients in Great Britain—1,490,000[1].
Number of Invalidity Benefit recipients also receiving Attendance Allowance, but no Income Support—65,900[2].
Number of Invalidity Benefit recipients also receiving Income Support—130,000[3].
Number of Invalidity Benefit recipients also receiving Housing Benefit/Community Charge Benefit but no Income Support—366,000[4].

Income Support

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what considerations underlay his decision to delete paragraph 1(h) of the Income Support General Regulations 1987.

Mr. Burt: Paragraph 1(h) of schedule 3 to the Income Support (General) Regulations provided for housing costs analogous to those listed in preceding sub-paragraphs to be included in the calculation of benefit entitlement. This gave rise to inconsistent decisions by the independent adjudicating authorities. To clarify the position, an amendment was made to replace this with individual provisions for specific costs. A further addition in respect of chief rents will be made shortly.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make an income support payment to Mrs. J. Young of Melton road, King's Heath, in respect of buildings insurance obtained as a condition of a mortgage.

Mr. Burt: The Secretary of State has suspended payment of any awards in respect of buildings insurance following a commissioner's decision of 14 October 1992, pending the outcome of an appeal to the Court of Session.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many income support claimants who had to pay buildings insurance as a condition of their mortgage obtain their entitlement to receive payments for this in their income support housing costs for any appropriate period between 11 April 1988, when the flat rate supplementary benefit allowance for such costs was abolished, and 2 February 1993, when paragraph 1(h) of the Income Support General Regulations 1987 was abolished.

Mr. Burt: On 14 October 1992 a social security commissioner decided that buildings insurance payable as a condition of a mortgage could be paid as an income support housing cost. At that time, there were some 500,000 people receiving help with their mortgages through income support. The Secretary of State has appealed against the commissioner's decision to the Court of Session and suspended payment of any awards made as result of it pending the outcome.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what instructions have been issued to officers of the Benefits Agency with regard to applications for income support from the spouses of EC citizens who have travelled to the United Kingdom for a treaty purpose; and if he will publish those instructions.

Mr. Burt: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 11 June 1993:

As Chief Executive to the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking what instructions have been issued to officers of the Benefits Agency with regard to applications from spouses of EC citizens who have travelled to the United Kingdom for a treaty purpose; and if he will publish those instructions.

It may help if I explain that instructions on dealing with claims from EC Nationals are held in the Adjudication Officer's Guide (AOG) and the Income Support Manual, which are available for inspection at Benefits Agency Offices, the House of Commons library and some public libraries.

It should be noted that certain EC nationals may only remain in the UK under a treaty purpose on the proviso that they are not dependent on public funds. Where entitlement conditions are satisfied and payment due action is taken as with a claim from a United Kingdom citizen. Therefore, if a claim is received from one of a couple who are living apart, the Agency would ensure action was taken to contact the spouse and seek maintenance to reduce or remove the need for payment from public funds.

Offices have recently been issued with an internal memo advising them of an amendment to Regulation 21 (3) of the Income Support (General) Regulations from 12 April 1993. This provides that a national of a Member state who is subject to a requirement to leave the United Kingdom will no longer be entitled to income support.

The requirement to leave the United Kingdom will be issued by the Home Office to an EC National who has been seeking work in the United Kingdom and receiving Income Support for six months and has neither found work nor has any reasonable prospect of doing so.

I hope this information is helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Benefits

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, what plans he has to reduce the nominal amount of income assumed on savings for calculation of benefits.

Mr. Burt: Although the rules on the treatment of savings are kept under review, we have no plans for change.

Welfare State Review

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the insurance and pension companies he has met in the course of his review of the welfare state.

Mr. Hague: Ministers and officials regularly meet insurance and pension providers to discuss issues relevant to the policies of the Department.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Regional Orchestras

3. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is his policy on regional orchestras; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sproat: The Arts Council and the BBC are responsible for formulating policy relating to regional orchestras. They are collaborating on a joint review of orchestral provision, and a report will be considered by their governing councils later this year. A period of public consultation is planned subsequently.

Longford Hall, Stretford

14. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the actions he has taken to secure the future of Longford hall, Stretford.

Mr. Sproat: I have received a report by English Heritage on the works it considers urgently necessary for the building's preservation and am seeking the council's views.

Channel 3 (Takeovers)

16. Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to extend the moratorium on overseas takeovers of Channel 3 franchise companies.

Mr. Brooke: I have no present plans to do so, but I am meeting the ITV companies later today to hear their views on this, and other related issues.

Stonehenge

17. Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he next plans to visit Stonehenge to discuss the amenities there.

Mr. Brooke: I have no plans to visit Stonehenge in the near future in an official capacity.

Magic

18. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage whether he will take steps to encourage the promotion of magic as an art in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Sproat: Government support for the arts is provided at arm's length through the Arts Council of Great Britain. The council is prepared to consider any application for support on its individual merits.

Departmental Building

19. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how the move to a new headquarters building will affect the discharge of his Department's responsibilities.

Mr. Brooke: My Department's move to a new headquarters building has enabled its three policy groups and other key elements to be brought together in one central location. This will greatly improve internal communication and lead to greater efficiency as well as enhanced co-ordination of the policy responsibilities.

Tourism

20. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what initiatives he is taking to promote tourism in London.

Mr. Sproat: Government support for tourism is channelled through the British Tourist Authority and the English tourist board. Via the English tourist board, support is also made available to the eleven regional tourist boards, including the London tourist board (LTB). The LTB has a number of initiatives to promote tourism in London, many involving partnerships with private sector organisations.

In addition, the Government have set up the London Forum with the specific task of promoting London overseas. It will operate through two subsidiary companies. One of these, London Visitors, will be chaired by Sir Hugh Bidwell, chairman of the LTB, and will work closely with the LTB to promote tourism in the capital.

Radio Frequencies (London)

21. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to meet the director general of the Radio Authority to discuss AM/FM frequency allocations in London.

Mr. Brooke: I meet the chairman of the Radio Authority from time to time and discuss a range of issues. However, it is for the Radio Authority to determine the allocation of AM/FM frequencies assigned to the authority for services in London.

Hotel and Catering Industry (Deregulation)

22. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proposals he has made recently for deregulation in the hotel and catering industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sproat: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Falmouth and Camborne (Mr. Coe).

Ancient Monuments

23. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage to what extent he has a duty to protect and restore ancient monuments, antiques and other important artefacts which are within public ownership.

Mr. Sproat: I have duties to compile a list of buildings of special architectural or historic interest and a schedule of monuments, the purpose of which is to provide these with statutory protection, whether they are in private or public ownership. In the case of listed buildings, the protection extends to objects or structures fixed to them or within their curtilage.

I am also responsible for the maintenance of a number of buildings, memorials and statues directly in the care of my Department.

The care of artefacts within museums and galleries is the responsibility of those institutions.

Football Ground Safety

24. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress has been made on ground safety improvements at second and third division Football League clubs.

Mr. Brooke: Since 1990, £4,515,269 has been awarded by the Football trust for ground safety improvements by clubs in the second and third divisions of the Football League. Considerable progress has been made by a number of clubs, and I shall be looking to the Football Licensing Authority to ensure that clubs continue to improve the structure and management of their facilities.

Television Signals

25. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will take steps to impose an obligation on the BBC and ITV companies to transmit signals that can be received throughout the relevant regional television or franchise area.

Mr. Brooke: No. It is for the broadcasters to determine their own engineering priorities.

British Library

26. Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress has been made on the construction of the new British library.

Mr. Sproat: The first phase of the new building is substantially complete. Construction of the final phase began in May this year.

Tourist Attractions (Signing)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations he has received about the signing of tourist attractions.

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend and I receive correspondence on a wide range of issues of relevance to the tourism industry, including signing to tourist attractions. I have received a small number of letters concerning cases where applications for tourist signing have been refused since the basic criteria have not been met.

London City Ballet

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what discussions he has had with the Arts Council chairman concerning the impending closure of the London City Ballet.

Mr. Brooke: While I regret that London City Ballet has decided that it can no longer continue to operate, I cannot intervene in matters relating to the funding of individual arts organisations, which under the arm's length principle are the responsibility of the Arts Council.

Arts Council

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what discussions he is to have with the Arts Council chairman regarding funding support for organisations which find 90 per cent. of their income from private sources.

Mr. Brooke: I regularly meet the chairman of the Arts Council to discuss a wide range of issues. Decisions on the funding of individual arts organisations are a matter for the Arts Council.

Libraries (Privatisation)

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage which local authorities have agreed to participate in the pilot scheme on privatising public libraries.

Mr. Sproat: I have no current plans, and have proposed no pilot schemes, for privatising public libraries. Every local library authority is statutorily responsible for providing a comprehensive, efficient and—for the most part—free library service in its area.

As my right hon. Friend announced in reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for South Hams (Mr. Steen) on 10 November 1992, at columns 685-87, we are examining the scope for contracting out the actual delivery of all or some aspects of the public library service. I propose as part of this examination to use as pilot projects some of the various models for specifying and contracting for library services which library authorities are themselves currently investigating.

From those initially expressing interest, my Department has invited the following authorities to be involved in the exercise on this basis: Bromley; Cambridgeshire; Hereford and Worcester; Kent; Lincolnshire and Birmingham Libraries Co-operative Mechanisation Project—a co-operative group including several library authorities. Discussions with these authorities are continuing—though Bromley has indicated that it no longer wishes to proceed with its proposed project, and has consequently withdrawn its interest. It may be that other authorities and projects will be added before the overall coverage of the exercise is finalised.

Football

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what information he has on attendance figures at soccer matches held between clubs at a senior level of the game in leagues in the pyramid below those of the Football League.

Mr. Brooke: The average home attendance figures for matches in pyramid leagues for 1991-92—the latest year for which complete figures are available—are as follows:

	Attendance
GM Vauxhall Conference	1,214
Diadora League	512
Beazer Homes League	558
Northern League	348

Statues

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what action his Department is taking to protect statuary for which he is responsible from further damage due to the careless and unsupervised cleaning of the external fabric of buildings of which they form a part;

(2) if he will make a statement on the circumstances surrounding the damage done to the statues of Inigo Jones and Andrea Palladio by Michael Rysbrack during the external cleaning of the fabric of Chiswick house, London; and what lessons have been learnt arising from this incident.

Mr. Brooke: The two statues by Michael Rysbrack were cleaned in 1987, at the same time as the decorative architectural detail of the house, using an air, water and abrasive mixture. Though the cleaning process was criticised at the time, both English Heritage and the leading conservators who were consulted found no evidence of significant damage. English Heritage has since made a major commitment to the conservation of the statuary at Chiswick house and has commissioned a survey of the condition of individual sculptures. On the basis of this survey, it plans to spend over £70,000 over the next five years on the outside statuary at Chiswick. Last autumn, it opened a new gallery at Chiswick house devoted to housing the garden statuary, and it plans to move the Rysbrack statues there next year, until such time as their security can be safeguarded.

English Heritage now has full condition surveys for sculpture at all of its sites, with prioritised action plans, and its architectural conservation branch is currently engaged in Britain's largest research programme on stone decay and treatment.

BBC Governors

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he expects to make an announcement on the appointment of the new governors of the BBC.

Mr. Brooke: As soon as Her Majesty the Queen has made the appointments.

National Lottery

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much public money has been distributed (a) to arts activities and (b) sports activities in the past five years; how much is expected to be distributed to each as a result of the National Lottery etc. Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The Government fund the arts mainly through the Arts Council of Great Britain. The Arts Council's grant in aid for each year since 1989 is as follows:

	£ million
1989-90	155·5
1990-91	175·9
1991-92	[1]194·2
1992-93	221·2
1993-94	225·6

[1] Plus a special payment of £10·8 million to enable the English National Opera to buy the freehold of the Coliseum.

The Government also fund the business sponsorship incentive scheme, the theatres restoration fund and various research projects. For 1993-94, total central Government expenditure additional to the Arts Council's grant in aid will be approximately £5·6 million.

Local authorities also fund arts activities but no definitive figures on their overall expenditure are available.

My Department's funding of sport in the current and previous four years has been as follows:

	£ million
1989-90	42
1990-91	45
1991-92	47
1992-93	50
1993-94	55

In addition, the Government provide substantial support for the local authority expenditure on sport, through the revenue support grant arrangements and basic credit approvals for capital expenditure. Sport has also benefited through the Government's inner-city programmes. The Government are also making up to £75 million available to support Manchester's bid to host the Olympic games in the year 2000. Reductions in the rate of pool betting duty are contributing approximately £44 million per year to the Foundation for Sport and the Arts and to the Football Trust.

The amount of funds distributed to arts, sport and other activities as a result of the national lottery will depend on the total turnover of the lottery and the amounts devoted to prizes and expenses.

British Museum

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage in what form information is available to his Department as to the circumstances in which the gifts of Sir Leonard Woolley of archaelogical objects found at Ur of the Chaldees and other sites in Mesopotamia came into the possession of the British museum.

Mr. Brooke: All the results of the excavation carried out by Sir Leonard Woolley are published in 10 volumes. Archives and records are held by the department of western Asiatic antiquities of the British museum and can be inspected on request. The records relating to the financing and organisation of the expedition, and correspondence with the Iraqi authorities, are in the museum's central archive and are also accessible under the terms of the Public Records Act. If the hon. Member would like any further information on this matter, the director of the British museum would be happy to supply it.

Regional Tourist Boards

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to reform the structure of regional tourist boards following the review of local government.

Mr. Sproat: The regional tourist boards (RTBs) are independent, non-statutory membership organisations and the Government have no power to impose changes in their structure. Local authorities have always been active partners in the work of the regional boards, and I am sure that the RTBs and the new authorities which emerge from the review of local government will wish to ensure that an effective working relationship continues.

Blind People (Television)

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the arrangements which exist to advise blind people of the availability from the Royal National Institute for the Blind of a specially adapted monitor which receives broadcast television signals in sound only.

Mr. Brooke: I understand the RNIB catalogue, which is readily available, includes information about a television sound receiver, which does not need a television licence.

Film Industry

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the latest available figure for his Department's funding of the United Kingdom film industry; what was the equivalent figure in 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: My Department plans to spend £24·4 million on film support in 1993-94.

In the financial year 1979-80, direct Government support for film amounted to some £12·5 million, at 1993 prices. The Eady Levy on box office receipts raised a further £17·25 million, at 1993 prices, in support of the film industry.

S4C

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if the accounts of the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority, S4C, will be submitted annually to the Comptroller and Auditor General; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: No. Under schedule 6 to the Broadcasting Act 1990, the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority (S4C) submits its annual report and statement of accounts to me to lay before Parliament. I can give S4C directions about the form of the accounts, and the appointment of its auditors is subject to my approval.

WALES

Northern Snowdonia

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to designate northern Snowdonia as an environmentally sensitive area.

Mr. Redwood: I have no current plans to designate northern Snowdonia as an environmentally sensitive area. I will study the ADAS report on this matter.

Welsh Chamber of Commerce and Industry

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to model the Welsh Chamber of Commerce and Industry upon similar organisations in Baden-Württemberg, Denmark and the Emilia-Romagna region.

Mr. Redwood: As independent private companies, change is a matter for individual chambers and the chamber movement itself.

Mining Development

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the interim development orders in force in Wales giving framework permission for mining development.

Mr. Redwood: This information is not held centrally. Local planning authorities are required to enter details of applications for registration of interim development order permissions, together with details of final determinations, in their planning registers which are open to public inspection.

Tourist Board Grants

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the names and addresses of private companies and hoteliers who have received a Wales tourist board grant; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: This information is not held centrally. However, the Wales tourist board publishes a list of grants and loans of £10,000 or more for specific years in its annual reports.

Radon Gas

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales further to his answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 134, regarding radon in homes, how many of the homes surveyed in each year since 1989 in postal district SA and in Wales had radon gas concentrations of (a) 0 to 25 bq/cu m, (b) 26 to 50 bq/cu m, (c) 51 to 100 bq/cu m, (d) 101 to 200 bq/cu m and (e) more than 200 bq/cu m.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The figures requested are shown in the table:

Radon concentrations in the homes surveyed since 1989, in postal district SA and Wales

Homelessness

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what was the number of homeless inquiries made under part III of the Housing Act 1985 by district (a) in 1991 and (b) in 1992;

(2) how many cases were accepted expressed as a percentage of those presented under part III of the Housing Act 1985 by district (a) in 1991 and (b) in 1992;

(3) how many cases were accepted under part III of the Housing Act 1985 by district (a) in 1991 and (b) in 1992;

(4) how many cases were presented under part III of the Housing Act 1985 by district (a) in 1991 and (b) in 1992.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is given in the table:

BTEC Courses

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people have undertaken Business and Technician Education Council courses in Wales in each year since 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The total number of student enrolments on BTEC courses at colleges of higher and further education in Wales in each year since 1988-89 is as follows:

	Number
1988-89	20,453
1989-90	22,061
1990-91	24,190
1991-92	27,448

Sheep Farmers

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a Monday morning visit to Welshpool Smithfield to meet Montgomeryshire sheep farmers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I have no current plans to visit Welshpool Smithfield, but would consider doing so when the opportunity presents itself.

SCOTLAND

Sheep Quota

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish, on a regional basis, the number of farmers deprived of quota as a result of the new sheep quota regulations.

Sir Hector Monro: The main allocations of sheep annual premium quota are still being made and it will also be open to any farmer to apply to the national reserve for allocation from that source. Until those applications have been received and processed it will not be possible to say how many have been successful.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to announce details of the distribution of reserve sheep quota.

Sir Hector Monro: Details of how national reserve quota will be allocated will be announced once the necessary legislation has been placed before the House. We hope to be able to do this before the summer recess.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial plans he has to support those farmers deprived of sheep quota after the national reserve is exhausted; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: It remains to be seen what will be the level of demand for allocation from the national reserve of sheep annual premium quota. The national reserve is the mechanism laid down in the European legislation to deal with producers who have not received an initial allocation of quota.

Forestry Commission Land

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will outline the proportion of Forestry Commission land used for (a) commercial forestry and (b) leisure and recreation.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 8 June 1993]: The Forestry Commission follows a multiple-purpose land management policy which integrates recreation, wood production and conservation. It is not therefore possible to classify commission land in the way requested.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Vote Office

33. Ms Quin: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission if he will make a statement on the work of the Vote Office.

Mr. Beith: The main work of the Vote Office is the distribution of parliamentary papers and documents necessary for the conduct of House business and for the parliamentary duties of hon. Members. Certain other documents are held in the Vote Office, at the request of Ministers, for issue to hon. Members. The Deliverer of the Vote, as head of the office, is available to advise hon. Members on their access to other official documents.

Sitting Hours

35. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Lord President of the Council when he expects to bring forward the report of the Select Committee on Sittings of the House for implementation.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Bolsover (Mr. Skinner).

42. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Lord President of the Council when he will introduce proposals for the reform of hours of sitting.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Bolsover (Mr. Skinner).

Select Committee (Sanctions)

36. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will establish a select committee to investigate the actual effect of the imposition of sanctions on countries such as Iraq and Libya.

Mr. Newton: I have no plans to do so. However, the hon. Member may wish to suggest the topic to the relevant departmental select committee, which could perhaps allow him to expand on the points he raised only last Friday during the debate on manufacturing and productivity.

Forestry

37. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Lord President of the Council what action he proposes to take to ensure that questions relating to forestry in the United Kingdom will continue to be answered in the House following the implementation of the proposals for a Question Time in the Scottish Grand Committee.

Mr. Newton: The proposals of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland entail no diminution of opportunities for questions, whether on forestry or other matters, to be put for answer in the House.

Overseas Development Administration (Questions)

38. Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will make more time available for Overseas Development Administration questions.

Mr. Newton: Having recently revised the oral questions roster to incorporate slots for Duchy of Lancaster and National Heritage questions, I do not think it would be possible to find extra time for ODA questions.

Select Committee Reports

39. Mr. Enright: To ask the Lord President of the Council what proposals he has to change the procedure for Government replies to Select Committee reports and debates on them.

Mr. Newton: None. However, the hon. Member may care to submit any proposals of his own to the Procedure Committee.

Procedure (Reform)

40. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Lord President of the Council when he expects to be able to make progress on reforming the procedure of the House; and if he will make a statement.

Select Committee on Members' Interests

41. Mr. Denham: To ask the Lord President of the Council what plans he has to alter the powers of the Select Committee on Members' interests.

Mr. Newton: I have no proposals to alter the terms of reference of the Select Committee on Members' Interests.

Visitors

Mr. Sims: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what plans he has to enable increased numbers of people to visit the Palace of Westminster during the summer recess.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: During the last summer recess there was spare capacity on all but three of the days the Line of Route was open for Members' parties. In these circumstances it is not considered necessary either to increase the maximum number of visitors allowed entry each morning or to increase the number of days when the Line of Route is open.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will bring forward proposals to prohibit the deposit in the Library, or the insertion in the Official Report, of material from the chief executives and other officers of next steps agencies.

Mr. Newton: I have no plans to do so.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to publish the study prepared by the National Radiological Protection Board on the effects of radiation exposure to British service men in nuclear tests.

Mr. Hanley: The National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) published in 1988 a study of mortality and cancer among former participants in the British atmospheric nuclear test programme. A follow-up study has been undertaken by the NRPB and I understand that it hopes to publish it later this year. The timing of the publication is, of course, entirely a matter for the NRPB. I know of no new evidence, however, that would change the current position that the overall incidence of death and malignant disease has been no greater among nuclear test veterans than among the general population.

Yugoslavia

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage bonus has been paid to the crews of (a) foreign-registered and (b) United Kingdom-registered vessels chartered in the last 12 months to transport United Kingdom Army vehicles or personnel to the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Hanley: Payment of crew bonuses are made from the owners' account and we therefore have no records of percentages paid.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the seamen's unions with which he has had negotiations over the level of bonus paid to their members for the transport of United Kingdom Army personnel and military vehicles to the former Yugoslavia for United Nations peacekeeping purposes.

Mr. Hanley: My Department has had no such negotiations.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many foreign vessels have been chartered over the last 12 months to transport Army vehicles and personnel to the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Hanley: A total of 12 foreign-flagged ships have been chartered for this purpose during the last 12 months.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British-flagged merchant vessels have been chartered by his Department over the last 12 months for the purpose of transporting Army personnel and military vehicles to the former Yugoslavia; and what rates have been paid for such chartered vessels.

Mr. Hanley: No British-flagged ships have been chartered for this purpose during the last 12 months. One British-flagged ship was offered but was not competitively priced.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent consideration he has given to declaring the former Yugoslav an operational theatre.

Mr. Hanley: The former Yugoslavia was declared an operational theatre on 20 May 1993.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what amount of money he estimates will be spent by his Department on military operations in the former Yugoslavia in (a) 1993-94 and (b) 1994-95.

Mr. Hanley: It is estimated that the extra cost to my Department of United Kingdom participation in military operations in the former Yugoslavia for the current financial year will amount to some £82,000,000, although in accordance with established arrangements we will be seeking reimbursement from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. No prediction can usefully be made for 1994-95 as this will depend on the level of our participation.

Explosive Devices

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the explosive devices cleared from the north Gower marshes in 1992 were transported to Porton Down for decontamination.

Mr. Hanley: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment (CBDE) and I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Dr. Graham S. Pearson to Mr. Gareth Wardell, dated 14 June 1993:

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking how many of the explosive devices cleared from the North Gower marshes in 1992 were transported to Porton Down for decontamination (Question 11, Order Paper, 8 June 1993) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. A total of 29 explosive devices, all shells, suspected of containing or possibly containing materials requiring decontamination and disposal were transported to CBDE in 1992. It has since been confirmed that none contained chemical warfare agents.

Vanguard Submarine

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the first Vanguard submarine will be fully operational.

Mr. Aitken: The first Vanguard class submarine will enter operational service with the Royal Navy towards the end of 1994 or early in 1995.

Uranium Shells

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will institute an inquiry into the possibility of troops having been contaminated during the Gulf war as a result of the use of uranium-tipped shells; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: My Department has no evidence of members of the British armed forces who served in the Gulf conflict suffering from any unexplained symptoms which would call for such an inquiry. The health of all service personnel will of course continue to be monitored as a matter of routine.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what health checks have been carried out by his Department on MOD personnel who have (a) handled depleted uranium shells, (b) handled materials which have been struck by depleted uranium shells or (c) been exposed to material from detonated depleted uranium shells on British or NATO firing ranges at which British soldiers have trained.

Mr. Hanley: Health checks are carried out at the two test and evaluation ranges—Eskmeals and Kirkcudbright—where virtually all depleted uranium firing has taken place. At Eskmeals, health checks and radiation protection measures are fully in place to ensure that any contamination that might occur through the handling or firing of depleted uranium shells can be identified and dealt with quickly. At Kirkcudbright, exposure of staff to radiation is monitored on an individual basis.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what tests have been carried out for radioactivity (a) at British and NATO firing ranges at which British soldiers have changed or (b) the area surrounding such firing ranges where depleted uranium shells have been test fired; and if he will list the ranges and define the areas surrounding them;

(2) how many British and NATO ranges at which British soldiers have trained and areas surrounding them have been found to be contaminated by radioactivity from depleted uranium shells.

Mr. Hanley: Depleted uranium is not used by the British Army in peacetime training. Depleted uranium ammunition has however been test fired at three United Kingdom trials ranges—Eskmeals, West Freugh and Kirkcudbright—and soldiers have occasionally trained at all of these, although they no longer train at Kirkcudbright. Tests for radioactivity have been carried out at all three ranges as follows:

At Eskmeals, a regular programme of area monitoring has been undertaken since test firing started in 1980 and air, grass, water, animal faeces, foliage and dust samples analysed. In recent years the analysis has been done by the Atomic Energy Authority. Off-range monitoring is also carried out at two sites; at Welbank, three miles South East of the range, and Corney Fell, three miles to the East. Monitoring also covers the nearest centres of population.

At Kirkcudbright, soil, vegetation, seawater and silt samples are taken on a regular basis; analysis is carried out by BNFL and analysis is undertaken by the defence radiological protection service.

At West Freugh, the latest firing was in 1990 and a radiological survey was subsequently carried out by the Atomic Weapons Establishment of beach sand and seawater.

No detectable contamination has been found at West Freugh and only very low levels of radioactivity from depleted uranium ammunition have been detected at Eskmeals and Kirkcudbright. In both cases, the levels detected were well below anything which could be considered a health hazard either to those who work on the range or those who live near it.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many MOD personnel have been found to be contaminated with radioactivity from test-fired depleted uranium shells.

Mr. Hanley: At Eskmeals, no staff have been found to have been exposed to any level of radioactivity that would require investigation. At Kirkcudbright, no detectable exposures have been found.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the ranges (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) overseas at which the British armed forces have test fired depleted uranium armour-piercing shells.

Mr. Hanley: Since the programme was first authorised and announced to the House, Official Report, 8 March 1979, columns 777-78 and 25 January 1980, column 395, all United Kingdom depleted uranium firings, with the exception of a few small calibre rounds trialed at test and experimental establishment (T&EE) West Freugh in 1988 and 1990, have taken place at either proof and experimental establishment Eskmeals or T&EE Kirkcudbright. The Ministry of Defence has test fired depleted uranium armour-piercing shells at White Sands, New Mexico and Aberdeen proving ground, Maryland in the United States and at Grammat in France.

Belize

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reassessment he has made of his policy relating to the withdrawal of the British garrison from Belize as a result of recent events in Guatemala.

Mr. Hanley: Recent events in Guatemala have been of an internal nature and there is no evidence that Guatemala's attitude to relations with Belize has changed as a result. Whilst we are monitoring the situation, we see no reason to change our plans for the garrison.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what communications he has had with the Belize Government concerning recent events in Guatemala.

Mr. Hanley: Prime Minister Price visited the United Kingdom on 9 and 10 June and had discusisons with my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence and my hon. Friend the Minister of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. Recent events in Guatemala were among the subjects discussed.

Conventional Forces in Europe

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the negotiation of further reductions in conventional forces in Europe.

Mr. Hanley: There are no current plans for further negotiations on reductions in conventional forces in Europe. The immediate priority is to ensure that the force level reductions in the conventional forces in Europe treaty are properly implemented.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 12 May, Official Report, column 522, if he will provide details of the teething difficulties that have occurred with the practice inspections that have been carried out as part of the preparation for the conventional forces in Europe treaty.

Mr. Hanley: Most of the difficulties encountered so far during practice CFE inspections have concerned minor differences of interpretation of procedures such as the standard of site diagrams to be produced.

Helicopter Landing Ship

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he gave to the need to retain a viable and effective defence industry when making his recent decision about the procurement of the helicopter landing ship.

Mr. Aitken: The need to retain a viable and effective defence industry was carefully taken into account in reaching the decision.

Tornado

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 27 April, Official Report, column 394, if he will state the number and nature of the problems identified during a recent modification programme on Tornado aircraft; and if he will provide details of the financial consequences of these problems.

Mr. Aitken: Evidence of structural damage to a number of Tornado aircraft modified by Airwork Ltd. has led the Ministry of Defence to terminate the relevant contract on grounds of substantial failure of performance by the contractor. My Department intends to claim against Airwork for the rectification and consequential costs arising from the company's failure to execute the modification contract properly. Assembling all the relevant evidence, which includes the details requested, and determining the amount of the claim will take some time.

Army Officers

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Gower (Mr. Wardell) of 21 April, Official Report, column 133, what percentage of the total number of officers has been commissioned from the ranks for each regiment in the British Army.

Mr. Hanley: I will write to the hon. Member.

Married Quarters

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 31 March, Official Report, column 197, what progress has been made in the establishment of a non-profit-making housing trust; and what representations he has received on this matter.

Mr. Hanley: Good progress has been made. My Department has now engaged the services of Major General (Retired) J. F. J. Johnston CB CBE, to act as a consultant to the Department as the chairman (designate) of the embryo housing trust. In broad terms, his task will be to develop an organisation which would be capable of receiving the married quarters estate from the Department and providing a housing service to meet the requirements of the services. This will provide the opportunity to develop a coherent long-term policy for the Department's married quarters estate.

My Department has received no representations on the matter since 31 March.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for defence, pursuant to his answer of 22 April, Official Report, column 193, on how many occasions in the last year negotiations with housing associations relating to the sale of married quarters have been terminated due to the inability of housing associations to secure the necessary funding.

Mr. Hanley: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence will write to the hon. Member.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the housing associations that have purchased MOD married quarters, and the housing associations that have expressed an interest in the purchase of MOD married quarters.

Mr. Hanley: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence will write to the hon. Member.

Forces Dwellings

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many dwellings owned by his Ministry were unoccupied on (a) 31 March 1992 and (b) 31 March 1991; how many of these were either undergoing or awaiting major maintenance work or modernisation; how many were already allocated to service families; how many were in the process of being sold; and how many were being held for agreed deployments.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows:

	31 March 1992	31 March 1991
Married Quarters
Unoccupied	9,364	10,111
Undergoing or awaiting major maintenance or modernisation	2,829	3,675
Allocated to Service families	2,255	1,569
Held for agreed deployments	290	337
MOD Civilian Houses
Unoccupied	140	170

A breakdown into the above categories is not available for the MOD civilian houses.

In addition, 1,816 former married quarters were in the process of being sold on 31 March 1992 and 1,864 on 31 March 1991. Figures for the number of vacant MOD civilian houses in the process of being sold on these dates are not available.

Tank and Naval Ammunition

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Small Heath of 17 May, Official Report, column 82, on what dates he intends to announce his decisions concerning the tenders for tank and naval ammunition.

Mr. Aitken: The tenders are currently being assessed and an announcement will be made within the next few months.

Rapid Reaction Corps

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what details of national contributions to the ACE rapid reaction corps have been finalised; and what details have yet to be finalised.

Mr. Hanley: The outline structure of the ACE rapid reaction corps was published in the 1992 Statement on the Defence Estimates. In addition to the HQ framework, the United Kingdom will assign the 1st UK Armoured Division, 3rd (UK) Division, and combat service support for both these divisions. The United Kingdom will also assign 24 Airmobile brigade to the multinational division (Central) (MND(C)), together with a contribution to the divisional HQ and communications elements. The German, Dutch and Belgian Governments have also agreed to assign brigades to the MND(C). The Greek, Turkish and Italian Governments have provisionally agreed to assign brigades to the multinational division (South).

On current plans, six nations will also provide a division if required; these are: Germany, Italy, Turkey, Greece, the United States and Spain. Other contributions are also under consideration, and details will be clarified as part of the normal NATO force planning cycle.

Military Information (Exchanges)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 12 May, Official Report, column 522, whether he will place copies of the exchanges of military information resulting from the 1990 Vienna document and its successor in the Library.

Mr. Hanley: It was agreed during negotiations that information exchanged under the 1990 and 1992 Vienna documents should be for official use only. I am, however, arranging for the United Kingdom returns for 1991, 1992 and 1993 to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

D-Notices

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Cunninghame North (Mr. Wilson) of 21 April, Official Report, column 133, what consideration has been given to the progress of the D-notice review.

Mr. Hanley: I understand that the Defence, Press and Broadcasting Committee met on 6 May and had preliminary discussions on the review of the D notice system, announced by my predecessor on 26 October 1992, Official Report, columns 509-10, which is now well in hand; and that it plans to meet again in July to consider a draft report of the review.

Iraq

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 30 March, Official Report, column 175, if he will make a statement on the performance of the defence intelligence staff in its provision of assessments relating to (a) Iraqi defence policies, (b) Iraqi intentions and (c) Iraqi military capabilities.

Mr. Hanley: The Defence intelligence staff (DIS) had been monitoring the development of Iraqi military capabilities and defence policies for some time. The build-up of Iraqi forces on the Kuwait border in late July 1990 was recognised as a major escalation although there was no information on the precise intentions of Saddam Hussein to determine the timing of the hostilities. The availability of a comprehensive intelligence data base on Iraqi military capabilities, to which the DIS contributed significantly, was an important factor in the coalition effort.

Gulf War

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what immediate actions he is taking to implement the recommendations of the National Audit Office report on movements of personnel, equipment and stores to and from the Gulf (HC 693).

Mr. Hanley: The National Audit Office's (NAO) work builds on extensive earlier studies by my Department including a detailed internal audit report of the lessons of Operation Granby. As the NAO report acknowledges, the Department has already instituted changes to procedures and has taken initiatives to introduce new systems, which will greatly reduce the movement problems identified for a large-scale out-of-area deployment.

Bosnia-Herzegovina

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reports he has received on the role of British military forces in Bosnia-Herzegovina in safeguarding the property and lives of Croats coming under attack from muslim forces; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: British forces undertook a recent mission, on request from the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), to help evacuate some 186 people—mostly Croat women and children—from a church at the village of Guca Gora in central Bosnia, which was coming under small arms and mortar fire. During the evacuation, which was completed successfully, the soldiers themselves came under fire and returned fire in self-defence.

FR Aviation

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for defence what electronic warfare training services are provided by FR Aviation for the Royal Navy and at what cost; and what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the service provided.

Mr. Hanley: FR Aviation holds the current contract for the provision of various electronic warfare services for the Royal Navy, mainly concerned with threat simulation and communications jamming. The contract price is a matter of commercial confidentiality. The effectiveness of the service is kept under review under the terms of the contract.

RAF Electronic Warfare Training

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which airspace areas will be used for RAF electronic warfare training; how the costs of any additional transit flying by contractors' aircraft will be met; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Electronic warfare (EW) training for RAF aircraft may take place anywhere in the United Kingdom air defence region. Under the proposal to contractorise EW training the amount of transit flying will depend on the contractor's choice of airbase, and is a factor which has been taken into account during the tender evaluation. As officials from my Department are in the final stages of tender selection, it would not be appropriate to give any further details.

US Bases

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the United States bases in England to which the provisions of the Visiting Forces Act 1952 or the provisions of the NATO status of forces agreement of June 1952 apply.

Mr. Hanley: The Visiting Forces Act 1952 and the NATO status of forces agreement apply to all United States visiting forces in the United Kingdom. The full list of United States bases and facilities in England is as follows:

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether monitoring of gangmasters by his Department includes control of employment of illegal immigrants; and how many cases have been discovered in the last year.

Mr. Jack: The role of MAFF in monitoring aspects of gangmasters' activities is restricted to ensuring compliance with the terms of the Agricultural Wages Order made under the Agricultural Wages Act 1948.

Land Use (Surveillance)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if reports on aerial surveillance undertaken with satellite equipment in the years 1991-92 to establish the usage or non-usage of land are to be made publicly available.

Mr. Jack: The year 1991-92 was a trial year organised by the Commission. The ownership of the work resides with the Commission, and we understand that it does not intend to publish the results.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what organisations of persons are responsible for the surveillance of agricultural land for the purpose of determining usage in the United Kingdom and in the member states.

Mr. Jack: Each member state is responsible for undertaking the control measures within its territory for the checking of aid applications.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether the arrangements for the surveillance of agricultural land for the purpose of determining usage are equally applied throughout the European Community.

Mr. Jack: The EC regulations governing the integrated administration and control system (IACS) require all member states, without differentiation, to carry out administrative checks on aid applications, supplemented by on-farm checks on a sample of holdings.

Integrated Administration and Control System

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which member states of the EEC completed the process of obtaining IACS information by 16 May.

Mr. Jack: The EC regulation governing the integrated administration and control system (IACS) provided for all member states to set a deadline of no later than 15 May for receipt of the completed IACS applications this year. Where applications are received after the deadline, the farmers will have their aid payments reduced under a formula set out in the relevant EC regulation. These same rules apply, of course, in all 12 member states. We do not have information on the number of applications received after 15 May in each member state.

Set-aside Payments

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to what extent it is possible to link the amounts and scale of set-aside payments to environmental and social improvements involving (a) management of hedgerows, (b) protection of unsprayed headland, (c) reductions in the use of nitrogen, (d) the planting of trees, (e) the creation of wildlife habitats, (f) attractive landscapes and (g) the provision of new footpaths and bridlepaths; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The EC rules of the arable area payments scheme require member states to apply appropriate environmmental measures to set-aside land. The United Kingdom rules for set-aside include the maintenance of hedgerows and other environmental features and restrictions on the use of sprays and fertilisers. We expect to introduce non-rotational set-aside later this year which will allow greater opportunity for the creation of wildlife habitats and we are pressing strongly for the Community rules to encourage tree planting on set-aside land. There is at present no scope under EC rules to vary the set-aside payment. However, under the agri-environment programme we are considering a voluntary scheme to make additional payments to farmers who provide public access on suitable set-aside land.

Viral Haemorrhagic Disease

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps the Government are taking to ensure that there are suitable vaccines to treat viral haemorrhagic disease.

Mr. Soames: A product licence application for a rabbit viral haemorrhagic disease vaccine was submitted and subsequently withdrawn during 1992. Although officials in the veterinary medicines directorate are actively pursuing discussions with that applicant and with other pharmaceutical companies, no further application has been received. The decision on whether to submit an application is a commercial one for the companies concerned, bearing in mind the likely size of the market.

Equine Viral Arteritis

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action she is taking to arrest and cure the outbreak of equine viral arteritis in the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bury St. Edmunds (Mr. Spring) on 10 June at columns 307-8.

Chernobyl

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what experiments are being conducted by her Department into the use of ammonium ferric hexacyanoferrate in order to fix caesium-137 from the Chernobyl radioactive fall-out in the soil and to prevent its take-up by growing plants.

Mr. Soames: Studies to evaluate the potential of a number of chemical treatments, including ammonium ferric hexacyanoferrate, for reducing radiocaesium in the vegetation of upland pastures are being carried out on two sites, one in Cumbria and one in Wales, as part of the Department's programme of post-Chernobyl research and development.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Luxembourg on 14 June.

Mrs. Shephard: I represented the United Kingdom at the meeting of the Agriculture Council on 14 June.

The Council formally adopted the legal texts implementing the package of farm prices and related measures which it had agreed at its May meeting.

The Council also discussed a number of other proposed measures, without reaching agreement. These included a proposal on the definition and designation of butter and other fats, which I criticised as being unnecessarily elaborate and prescriptive; and a proposed directive on minced meat and other meat preparations, on which my main aim is to avoid excessively strict criteria that would put at risk traditional British products. The Council will have to return to these proposals at a later meeting.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Divorce Law

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what action he proposes to take on Law Commission report 192, "Grounds for Divorce."

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor is considering the Law Commission's recommendations for reform of divorce law. His review of these matters is not yet complete and he has no immediate plans for legislation. He continues to welcome views on the Law Commission's recommendations, and will consult further before any measures on this subject are introduced.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to review the administration of divorce law.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor is considering divorce law reform as part of the rolling programme of review of family law and business. His review of these matters, including the administration of divorce law, is not yet complete.

Legal Aid

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will immediately take steps to secure a significantly reduced rate of interest payable by those owing statutory charges under the legal aid scheme.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor will shortly be laying before Parliament a statutory instrument designed to reduce the rate of simple interest levied on postponed payment of the statutory charge from 10·5 per cent. to 8 per cent.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the buildings currently owned or rented by his Department, together with (a) the estimated value, (b) the annual rent and (c) the annual maintenance cost of each building in the current financial year.

Mr. Nelson: The Treasury does not own any property. All Treasury accommodation is on the common user estate, which is owned by the Crown and administered by Property Holdings. The present value of the common user estate is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The accommodation charges and contributions towards maintenance which the Treasury pays to Property Holdings and the Treasury's own maintenance costs in respect of buildings occupied by the Treasury are given in the table:

Estimated expenditure for 1993-94

	Accommodation charge £	Contribution towards maintenance £	Maintenance by Treasury £
Government offices Great George street, London SW1	6,270,431	1,471,213	343,369
11 Downing street, London SW1	139,359	43,885	5,500
Alencon Link, Basingstoke	202,977	48,698	1,200

European Bank for Reconstruction and Development

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what talks he has had with his European Community and G7 counterparts about the future of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: In the short period since becoming Chancellor and, subsequently, United Kingdom Governor of the EBRD, I have had no talks with European Community or G7 partners about the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development. However, my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development has had contacts with her counterparts in other countries. My senior officials have had a number of contacts as well.

Pensions

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the amount of the public sector pensions payable in each of as many future years as are available, assuming annual inflation at the current rate of 2 per cent.;

(2) if he will list for as many of the forthcoming years as are available the percentage of forecast gross domestic product that will be allocated to public sector pensions.

Mr. Portillo: The most recent estimates of public sector pension scheme liabilities and the costs of public service pension scheme benefits were contained in the answers given by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Social Security on 7 June at column 140 and by me on 8 June at column 200.

Projections of those estimates for future years are not available and would require a substantial amount of actuarial calculation. However, many of the public service pension schemes are approaching maturity in pension terms. Accordingly, it is not expected that there will be an increasing demand on the economy in real terms. In the longer term, with the reduction in the number of employees in the public sector, it is to be expected that public sector pension costs will reduce in real terms.

Student Accommodation

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if student accommodation which is (a) institutionally-owned or (b) institutionally-managed will be classified as domestic for VAT purposes;

(2) whether institutionally-owned and institutionally-managed student accommodation will be exempt from paying VAT on fuel bills.

Sir John Cope: Student accommodation which is institutionally owned or institutionally managed is classified as domestic for VAT purposes. Such accommodation will not be exempt from VAT on fuel bills.

"Summary of Companies"

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many copies of his Department's publication "Summaries of Companies" included in the HM Treasury index of management consultants dated May 1993, have been published; at what cost; to whom it has been distributed; and what criteria were used in deciding (a) to whom it has been sent and (b) which data were included in the report.

Sir John Cope: About 100 copies of this reference book are produced for internal use at a cost of £7·17 each. The book, which is not published, is produced as an aid to those senior staff in Departments and agencies who are considering the hire and use of consultants.

It contains summary information on the firms on the Treasury's index of management consultants.

Negative Income Tax

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will now review the case for the introduction of a negative income tax.

Mr. Dorrell: We have no plans to introduce a negative income tax. The reforms of the social security system in the 1980s improved the interaction between tax and benefit systems. We keep both systems under review.

Income Tax

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the change in revenue in a full year of replacing the present rates and thresholds of income tax with a structure in which (a) the first £2,500 incurred tax at 20 per cent., (b) £2,500 to £30,000 at 25 per cent., (c) £30,000 to £60,000 at 40 per cent., (d) £60,000 to £100,000 at 50 per cent. and (e) over £100,000 at 60 per cent., while retaining the existing levels of personal allowances.

Mr. Dorrell: The estimated revenue yield in a full year at 1993-94 income levels from imposition of the specified regime is £570 million.

Book Purchase

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Inland Revenue will obtain a copy of the book, details of which have been submitted to him.

Mr. Dorrell: The Inland Revenue gathers information, including published material, which may be relevant to the correct assessment of tax liabilities. Because of its duty of confidentiality the Inland Revenue is not able to comment on its dealings with particular taxpayers.

Overseas Assets

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the mechanisms by which the Inland Revenue checks on companies' compliance with requirements on valuation of overseas assets.

Mr. Dorrell: The Inland Revenue uses considerable resources on the technical review and investigation of company accounts. The largest companies and those whose affairs are particularly complex are dealt with in offices which specialise in such cases, which have enough staff to review their tax affairs in depth, and which are headed by some of the Department's most senior inspectors. Reviews cover all aspects of companies' accounts and expert advice is available to the inspectors from head office specialists in international issues.

Investments overseas will be monitored as part of this process of review and the valuation of assets abroad will be considered in so far as it may have a bearing on United Kingdom tax liabilities.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) local authorities, (b) voluntary organisations and (c) universities are paying value added tax on courses of further education for adults; and if he will list the liable courses.

Sir John Cope: The information is not centrally available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The subject matter of courses is only one of a number of factors affecting VAT liability and each case is determined on its own facts.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the terms of reference of the review that Customs and Excise are currently undertaking into value added tax in the education and training sector; when the review is due to be completed; and if he will list those bodies being consulted as part of the review process.

Sir John Cope: Customs and Excise is carrying out an internal review to examine whether, within the constraints of European Community VAT legislation, there is scope for simplification and rationalisation of the current VAT reliefs for education and training services. Customs expect to be reporting to Ministers in two to three months. If changes in law or administration are considered appropriate, those likely to be affected will be consulted before final proposals are brought forward.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue was obtained from VAT charges on courses of (a) education, (b) training, (c) sports activity and (d) leisure activity in each year since 1987; and how much it costs each year to administer the collection of these charges.

Sir John Cope: This information is not centrally available and it would not be possible to provide an estimate without disproportionate cost.

Business Enterprise Scheme

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the cost of tax relief for BES in the years 1992-93 and 1993-94 for schemes involving private housing where individuals obtain loans connected with the shareholdings they acquire through BES;

(2) if he will estimate the total cost of tax relief for business expansion schemes in the years 1992-93 and 1993-94, with the cost in each year of relief involving private rented housing.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 14 June 1993]: The provisional estimate of the total cost of income tax relief for 1992-93 is £380 million. The cost for 1993-94 will depend on the levels of business expansion scheme investments and is very tentatively estimated at about £180 million. It is not possible at present to provide a reliable subdivision of these estimates by type of investment, though information published in the specialist press about loan-linked investments in 1992-93 imply that these may amount to some £250 million of revenue cost.

Industrial Building Allowance Trusts

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list, for each enterprise zone and former enterprise zone, the number of industrial building allowance trusts accepted for capital allowance purposes; and what is the square footage of (a) industrial and (b) commercial floor space covered in each IBA trust.

Sir George Young: I have been asked to reply. Neither my own Department nor Inland Revenue maintains such records and the information could be secured only at disproportionate cost.

HOME DEPARTMENT

National Association of Probation Officers

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met representatives of the National Association of Probation Officers; what matters were discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Neither my right hon. and learned Friend nor I have yet met representatives of the National Association of Probation Officers. I hope to do so before too long.

Corrections Corporation of America

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total cost incurred as a result of the decision to investigate the performance and record of the Corrections Corporation of America.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. John McAllion, dated 15 June 1993.

INVESTIGATION INTO THE CCA

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the cost incurred as a result of the decision to investigate the Corrections Corporation of America (CCA). The Prisons Service Board asked Mr. Bentley, one of our non executive directors, to visit America to investigate the CCA's suitability to be involved in managing prisons in this country. He was accompanied by a member of staff from Prison Service headquarters. Twenty three people were interviewed during the investigation in several locations in the United States. The substantive costs therefore comprise the travelling, accommodation and other expenses incurred during the visit. These total £9,574.

Wheel Clamping

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce proposals to regulate private wheel clamping.

Mr. Maclean: A public consultation exercise on this issue has recently been completed and we are now analysing the very many responses. We will announce our conclusions as soon as possible.

Police (Assaults)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the reported number of assaults on police officers serving in each of the Metropolitan police divisions during the course of their police duties during 1992.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information requested is contained in the table:

Mr. Charles Wardle: Information for 1991, the last available year, is contained in the following table:

Carl Bridgewater Case

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from Mr. Tim O'Malley concerning the Carl Bridgewater case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: A letter from Mr. O'Malley dated 21 September 1992 which expressed doubts about the safety of the convictions in this case was considered as part of the review, the conclusions of which my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Rushcliffe (Mr. Clarke) announced on 3 February 1993. I received a further letter from Mr. O'Malley on 6 June, which I will consider together with other additional representations that I have recently received about this case.

Probation and Bail Hostels

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of vacancies at probation or bail hostels covering the Greater London area on 31 May.

Mr. Maclean: As at 31 May 1993 there were a total of 117 vacancies at approved probation/bail and bail hostels in the Greater London area.

Prisons

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether in-house bids will be permitted for the running of new prisons.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The current policy is not to invite in-house bids for the management of new prisons. In the case of Doncaster, which is the last of the current prison building programme, the prison board decided that it did not wish to make an in-house bid and that there was, therefore, no reason to change the current policy. This is to enable the prison service to focus its resources on developing the best possible bids for existing establishments. No decision has been made about the policy on in-house bids for any new prisons which might be built in the future.

Prison Service

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the performance targets for the prison service for the year 1993-94.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the then Home Secretary, my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Rushcliffe (Mr. Clarke), to my right hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Sir J. Wheeler) on 1 April 1993 at column 387.

Manchester Prison

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether all staff will have the right to transfer to the new employer if the contract for Manchester prison is awarded to an outside tenderer; and what will be the position of any employees who decline to be transferred.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 14 June 1993.

MARKET TESTING OF HMP MANCHESTER

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the position of staff working at Manchester Prison.

We have given an undertaking that, in the event of a private operator winning the contract, mobile staff at Manchester will have the option of re-deployment elsewhere in the Prison Service. In the case of non-mobile staff we have undertaken to explore the possibilities of re-deployment in the Prison Service or elsewhere in Government service but cannot guarantee that this will prove possible. Mobile staff who have not opted for re-deployment will transfer automatically to the new employer, as will non-mobile staff who have requested re-deployment but for whom such opportunities cannot be found.

Prison Service (Parliamentary Questions)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many written replies the chief executive of the prison service issued in response to parliamentary questions during the period 1 April to 28 April; and what was the approximate cost of each letter.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 14 June 1993.

I have been asked by the Home Secretary to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about Questions I have answered.

I sent 50 written replies in response to Questions put down for answer between 1 April and 28 April, inclusive. Costings for individual replies are not recorded. The average cost of preparing written replies to Questions across the Government service, including the Prison Service, is currently estimated at £94 per written reply.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will make available to hon. Members a copy of the report published at the meeting of EC Home Affairs Ministers in Copenhagen on 1 June which details levels of persecution in states throughout the world; and what plans he has to use the report as a guideline for immigration officials as to which countries can be deemed safe for the return of asylum seekers.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Ministers took note at the meeting in Copenhagen on 1 June of a report from the Centre for Information, Discussion and Exchange on Asylum (CIREA). I am placing a copy in the Library.

Strip Searches

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the procedures when intimate and strip searches take place of juveniles held in police custody so as to ensure that either a parent, relative or friend is present; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: We shall shortly be seeking the views of the Association of Chief Police Officers on a number of issues relating to the conduct of intimate and strip searches.

Work Permits

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action his Department is proposing to take to ensure farmers and gangmasters do not employ non-EC persons who do not possess a work permit.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The immigration service works closely with the police and other agencies to detect and deal with people committing offences under the immigration laws, including those working without authority.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now reply to the letters of 5 April, 21 April and 6 May sent to his predecessor by the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Gallagher, an inmate at Lancaster prison.

Mr. Maclean: I understand that the director general of the prison service replied on 14 June to the right hon. Member's letter of 5 April about Mr. Gallagher's treatment in prison. As my right hon. and learned Friend's assistant private secretary explained in her letter of 9 June, we are making some inquiries in order to be in a position to send a substantive reply to the right hon. Member's letters of 21 April and 6 May about the safety of Mr. Gallagher's conviction.

Yugoslavia (Detainees)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimates he has received of the numbers of ex-detainees in the former Yugoslavia eligible for admission to the United Kingdom, with their dependants, under the scheme he announced last November.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Placement under the scheme that I announced last November is dependent on nomination by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. A number of other countries are running similar programmes and I understand that nearly all ex-detainees currently in UNHCR's care in Croatia have now been placed. The International Committee of the Red Cross is currently visiting some 2,400 detainees in Bosnia whose release it hopes to negotiate.

DEFENCE

Swan Hunter

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will outline the nature of the discussions being held between his Department and the receiver of Swan Hunter as to the completion of the three frigates building at the yard; and whether it is his preferred solution for the frigates to be completed at the yard subject to the satisfactory conclusion of the negotiations with the receiver.

Mr. Aitken: Completion of the three type 23 Frigates on Tyneside would be my preferred solution, provided that a satisfactory agreement can be reached with the receiver. The details of the current negotiations are commercially confidential; they include financial and contractual matters.

Channel Islands (Nazi Occupation)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the release of further documents relating to the wartime Nazi occupation of the Channel Islands; and what inspection of these documents has been undertaken by representatives of the German authorities.

Mr. Hanley: The majority of MOD documents relating to the wartime Nazi occupation of the Channel Islands are already in the public domain. The German authorities are examining all MOD documents relating to this matter. When they have completed this task, those files currently closed will be opened for public inspection at the Public Record Office.

Upholder Class Submarines

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost of moving the Upholder class of submarine from Gosport to Devonport.

Mr. Hanley: A total of £100,000 has been spent so far, and a further sum is contractually committed. No more expenditure will be approved until a decision has been taken on the future of the Upholder class.

Defence Research Agency

Sir James Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what targets he has set for the Defence Research Agency in 1993-94.

Mr. Aitken: The targets recently set for the Defence Research Agency in 1993-94 and subsequent years are as follows:

(a) To meet profit and cash targets consistent with a 6 per cent. return on capital employed (ROCE).
(b) To improve overall utilisation from 40 per cent. in 1992-93 to 49 per cent. in 1993-94 and 52 per cent. in 1997-98.
(c) To reduce administrative and general overhead (AGO) expressed as a percentage of total variable costs to less than 15 per cent. in 1993-94 and to hold it at this level or better in following years.
(d) To seek competitive proposals in 1993-94 for market testing amounting on an annual basis to 5 per cent. of DRA's turnover, for secondary competition amounting to 3 per cent. of turnover, and for subcontracts amounting to 24 per cent. of DRA's turnover.

(e) To achieve 70 per cent. of customer milestones on time in 1993-94 and to increase this to 85 per cent. by 1997-98.
(f) To achieve an increase of 2 per cent. in overall performance and customer satisfaction in 1993-94 (as measured by the sum of satisfaction criteria in the business planning survey).
(g) To achieve a running cost reduction of £38 million per annum in 1993-94 and to achieve the final target of £90 million by 1997-98.
(h) To achieve formal quality certification to BS5750 for one sector by 31 December 1994, and for the rest of the DRA by 31 December 1966.

HMS Sovereign

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what timescale he has for the return to service of HMS Sovereign, of what other vessels the officer in command of HMS Sovereign is also in command; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley [pursuant to his answer, 8 June 1993, col. 225-26.]: The answer I gave on 8 June should have read as follows:

HMS Sovereign is expected to return to service in 1995. The refitting officer in command of HMS Sovereign is also in command of HMS Revenge, which is in the process of being decommissioned.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Product Marking

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how his Department will be participating at the Copenhagen European conference in June on labelling products; and which United Kingdom good practices in the labelling of products he will submit to the European Commission study of this issue.

Mr. McLoughlin: My Department was represented by an official from consumer affairs division. The conduct of the study is a matter for the European Commission but we understand that it will be identifying priorities, and considering how best to bring consumer and trade interests together to assist in the process. My Department will aim to keep in touch with developments, co-operate fully in this work and ensure the European Commission is aware of current United Kingdom practices.

Developing Countries

Mr. Barnes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures he proposes to take to help increase the trading prospects of developing countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The Government will continue to support strenuously the European Community's efforts, particularly in the current GATT Uruguay round negotiations, to create open trading conditions which will increase the trading prospects of all countries, including developing nations. An OECD study suggested that annual income gains to the developing world as a whole from a Uruguay round agreement could be in excess of $US 90 billion, once all the effects have worked through. Under its generalised system of preferences (GSP) scheme the European Community allows preferential access to most of the manufactured products from developing countries. The GSP provides especially generous treatment for the least developed nations. The trade provisions of the Lomé convention also provide unlimited duty free access (subject to rules of origin) to Community markets for all industrial products (except rum), and free or concessionary access for a wide range of agricultural products, from the African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) states. Lomé beneficiaries financed from the European development fund (EDF) can also write into their national indicative programmes requirements for technical and structural adjustment aid which will benefit their export regimes.

The United Kingdom also actively participates in the United Nations conference on trade and development (UNCTAD) and other relevant international forums which encourage developing countries in their own efforts towards sustained economic development.

Office of Electricity Regulation

Mr. Mullin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many people are employed by OFFER; what is their function; and what is the annual cost.

Mr. Eggar: Total staff in post at the Office of Electricity Regulation (OFFER) in December 1992 was 224. This figure includes staff working on consumer and public affairs, legal and technical matters, administration and in the regional offices. The duties of the Director General of Electricity Supply, who heads OFFER, include the regulation of the electricity market and the protection of consumers. The cost of running OFFER in the financial year ending March 1992 was £10·5 million. OFFER's costs are recovered from annual fees paid by licensees.

Oil and Gas

Mr. Richards: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures are being taken to ensure that those companies which receive the right to drill offshore under the 14th round of oil and gas licensing do so in an environmentally responsible manner; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Special conditions to protect wildlife and the environment are attached to licence awards. These conditions are agreed with other Government Departments and the Joint Nature Conservancy Committee (JNCC).

Gasoline

Mr. Legg: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what changes to gasoline composition have occurred in the United Kingdom since 1970;

(2) what is the level of aromatic hydrocarbons in the super premium unleaded grade and the unleaded premium grade of gasoline in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: The information is not held centrally.

Deregulation Unit

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received from the civil service unions about the work of the deregulation unit.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: I am not aware of any such representations.

British and Commonwealth Company

Mr. Radice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he expects to publish his Department's report into the collapse of the British and Commonwealth Company.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Inspectors were appointed on 15 June 1990 under section 432 of the Companies Act 1985 to investigate and report on the affairs of Atlantic Computers plc and Atlantic Computer Systems plc, both major companies in the British and Commonwealth group. The inspectors are in the final stages of their investigations but they have not yet submitted their report; I will consider publication when it is received.

Overseas Assets

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement outlining his Department's responsibilities in respect of investigating companies' compliance with United Kingdom accounting requirements on valuation of overseas assets.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: A company's compliance with the United Kingdom accounting requirements on the valuation of overseas assets is a matter for the directors and auditors. Where evidence was presented suggesting that without good reason the relevant statutory accounting requirements had not been applied, appropriate inquiries would be considered in the normal way.

Brewing Industry

Mr. Wareing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 8 June, if he will list the exclusive supply agreements in the brewing industry which have received exemption from article 85 of the treaty of Rome.

Mr. Neil Hamilton [holding answer 11 June 1993]: Since 1983, supply agreements operated by the brewing industry have been able to gain automatic exemption from article 85 of the treaty of Rome by complying with the provisions of EC regulation 1984/83. There is no record of agreements which have benefited from this block exemption because no Commission decision is necessary for the exemption to apply. In addition, some agreements in the brewing industry will have been given individual exemption from article 85 by the EC Commission. Details of these individual exemptions are published in the official journal of the European Communities, but a record of them is not kept by the United Kingdom Government and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Saudi Arabia (Exports)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the level of exports from Britain to Saudi Arabia in each of the last five years; and what information he has on the proportion of such exports which were on commission.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 14 June 1993]: This information is regularly published in "Business Monitors" MA20 and MM20, "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom", copies of which are available in the Library.

Information on the proportion of exports on commission is not available.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Charity Law

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he is able to indicate the nature of the review which is presently taking place of the law relating to charities in Northern Ireland; how long the review has been in progress; and by what means he intends to introduce legislation to deal with the issue.

Mr. Mates: The review is an internal one involving the relevant Departments and has been in progress since March 1992. The law and administration of charities is quite different in Northern Ireland compared with the position in Great Britain and the main thrust of the review is to examine those aspects of the reforms to charity law and administration in Great Britain which may have implications for Northern Ireland. If it is decided to introduce new legislation, it is likely to be in the form of a Northern Ireland charities Order in Council under the Northern Ireland Act 1974.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to honour the commitments in the 1991 White Paper "Privatisation of Northern Ireland Electricity" concerning provisions for existing employees to obtain a direct stake in the industry and concerning parallel provisions for shares for former NIE employees and those persons who transferred to successor generating companies to NIE.

Mr. Atkins: The objective behind any employee share purchase is to give employees the opportunity to obtain a direct stake in the company in which they are employed. This is the objective lying behind the special arrangements offered to employees of NIE for the purchase of shares in NIE. Former employees of NIE are entitled to register and apply for shares in the flotation and benefit from the incentives offered, which are enhanced for customers. Those employees who transferred to successor generating companies may also be able to participate in any share incentive schemes made available by their new employers.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Television Service

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council, pursuant to his answer of 5 February, Official Report, column 27, what further developments have taken place regarding the provision of a live feed of the Chamber of the House to hon. Members' offices.

Mr. Newton: There is little that I can usefully add to my earlier reply to the hon. Member. Proposals for the establishment of a parliamentary data and video network, on which the clean feed from the Chamber would be carried, are still under consideration by the Information Committee. I understand that the Committee hopes to be able to report to the House by the end of the year.

EDUCATION

Spelling

11. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what efforts are being made to improve standards of spelling in schools.

Mr. Forth: We are seeking to raise standards in all the basic language skills, including spelling, through the development of national curriculum English. Our proposals for revising the English Order, currently the subject of extensive consultation, give a strengthened emphasis to accurate spelling as one of the writing skills essential for the effective communication of meaning. To emphasise the importance of these skills, 5 per cent. of the marks in all GCSE written examinations are now allocated to spelling, punctuation and grammar.

Testing

12. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to review testing procedures for schools or to change the role of the new curriculum and advisory body in this area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Patten: I have asked Sir Ron Dearing to conduct a wide ranging review of the manageability of the national curriculum and the associated testing and assessment framework. The prospective remit of the new Schools Curriculum and Assessment Authority is laid out in section 232 of the Education Bill currently before Parliament.

27. Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement about the current situation regarding school tests.

Mr. Robin Squire: Most primary schools will have completed the tests of seven-year-olds. Fourteen-year-olds should have been sitting tests over the last week and a half. I deeply regret some teachers' boycott of these tests, which are necessary to monitor progress and raise standards.

My right hon. Friend has asked Sir Ron Dearing to conduct a review of the national curriculum and assessment framework. He expects to have Sir Ron's recommendations in July.

26. Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will meet the representatives of teachers' organisations to discuss key stage testing.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has no plans for such a meeting. Teacher associations should make their views known to Sir Ron Dearing, the chairman designate of the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority, who is conducting a review of the national curriculum and assessment.

Graduate Teaching Qualifications

13. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has for developing access to graduate teaching qualifications.

Mr. Patten: The Department has discussed with the Higher Education Quality Council the provision of access courses for entry to initial teacher training. I understand that the council is planning to publish a list of such courses later this year.

Grant-maintained Schools

14. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will set out his plans for promoting the advantages of grant-maintained status within the local education authorities' network of schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Patten: By the end of May, 2·4 million of the Department's publications on self-governing status had been distributed, mainly in response to requests.

The Department has also organised 16 regional conferences on "Going GM" and three further events are planned for later this term. Almost 3,000 headteachers and governors of LEA maintained schools have attended the conferences, representing around 1,700 schools.

24. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is his estimate of the cost of the Funding Agency for schools in April 1996 (a) on the assumption that his targets for the number of schools opting for grant-maintained status is met and (b) on the assumption that the number of schools opting for grant-maintained status increases at the present annual rate.

Mr. Robin Squire: Parents will decide through ballots how many schools become grant maintained. On current trends, most secondary schools and a significant minority of primary schools could be GM by April 1996. The running costs of the FAS will depend on a number of factors, including growth of the sector, but on this basis might be of the order of £20 million in 1996-97. Over time, we expect the establishment of the FAS to result in savings in DFE running costs and, as the FAS takes on responsibility for the provision of school places, to lead to a reduction in the central administration costs of LEAs.

Primary Education

15. Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the current number of children in primary school education in England.

Mr. Robin Squire: The latest available figure is for January 1992, when there were 4·1 million children in maintained primary schools.

Victorian Schools

16. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education whether he will make special provision for modernising Victorian schools in urban areas.

Mr. Forth: The Government already provide substantial capital resources for school buildings. LEAs can choose to use the resources available to them to give priority to modernising Victorian buildings if they wish. Capital bids from the governors of voluntary-aided and grant-maintained schools are considered on their merits.

Schools (Disabled Access)

17. Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to meet local education authority representatives to discuss the accessibility of schools for children with physical disabilities.

Mr. Forth: Local education authorities and school governors may seek meetings with Ministers or officials to discuss general capital issues at any time. It is very likely that in some of these meetings the agenda will include access for disabled pupils.

A-levels

18. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement on the levels of achievement at A-level.

Mr. Boswell: More people than ever before are taking A-levels, passing them and passing them well. They will continue to set a benchmark for academic achievement. They are a key part of our strategy to provide clear and attractive pathways to high levels of academic and vocational achievement.

Special Educational Needs

19. Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what estimate he has made as to the main factors influencing the length of time it takes local education authorities to produce statements of special educational needs.

Mr. Forth: The Audit Commission/HMI survey "Getting in on the Act" published in June 1992 looked carefully at the operation of procedures for making assessments and statements. Its conclusion was that a variety of factors could cause delay, but that lack of resources was not one of them.

The Education Bill provides for regulations which will for the first time set statutory time limits for the assessment and statementing processes. The Bill also requires the Secretary of State to issue a code of practice which will guide LEAs in their operation of those processes. The Government's aim is to ensure that assessments are concluded—and, where necessary, statements produced —as quickly as is consistent with thoroughness.

Pre-school Education

20. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he next intends to meet the Association of County Councils to discuss the provision of nursery education.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has no plans to meet the Association of County Councils to discuss this matter.

29. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he is taking to improve the quality of educational input in different forms of pre-school provision.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department has increased its grant to the Pre-school Playgroups Association for staff training and development from £179,000 in 1990-91 to £887,000 in 1993-94. It also supports training and development work undertaken by the British Association for Early Childhood Education and by the Early Childhood Unit of the National Children's Bureau.

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many pre-school education places were available in England at the latest available date; and what percentage that number is of the total number of children in the relevant age group.

Mr. Robin Squire: Information on the number of education places is not available. In January 1992 there were nearly 630,000 pupils below compulsory school age in maintained nursery and primary schools in England of whom 330,000 were in nursery provision. The under-fives participation rates were 49 per cent. and 26 per cent. respectively.

Youth Service

21. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is his estimate of the total sum needed on an annual basis to meet the current statutory requirements in respect of youth service provision.

Mr. Boswell: The Government do not determine centrally how much should be spent on particular local government services. It is primarily for individual local authorities to decide how to discharge their duty to secure adequate provision out of the resources made available to them under revenue support grant.

Schools (Funding)

22. Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received regarding the balance of funding between primary and secondary schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: We have received a number of recent representations from schools and hon. Members about primary and secondary school funding under local management of schools, including one from the North West Primary Heads Forum. We have made clear that this is a matter for individual local education authorities.

Further and Higher Education Charters

23. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received from students on the further and higher education charters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: We are currently consulting on the draft further and higher education charters. To date two representations have been received from students; from the University college London union and the other from the South East Wales Students Association.

Grammar Schools

25. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he is taking to ensure that there will be continued provision of grammar school places.

Mr. Forth: The provision of school places to be filled on the basis of academic ability is a matter for local education authorities and governing bodies, taking account of local needs and the wishes of parents and the community. My right hon. Friend will continue to consider very carefully any proposals put to him for the introduction or cessation of selective admission arrangements which would amount to a significant change in the character of the school.

Financial Assistance

28. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment he has made of the adequacy of financial assistance to enable people to continue or re-enter education.

Mr. Boswell: Most students on designated full-time and sandwich courses leading to a first degree or certain comparable qualifications are eligible for mandatory awards and student loans. Students on other courses can apply for a discretionary or postgraduate award. The Government have commissioned a survey of the income and expenditure of students on designated courses, and the Gulbenkian and Sir John Cass's Foundations are undertaking a study of the provision of discretionary awards.

Oxford and Cambridge College Fees

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received about the basis for calculating grants for college fees at Oxford and Cambridge.

Mr. Boswell: The Department has received representations from those acting on behalf of the colleges at Oxford and Cambridge, as part of the annual negotiations on the level of college fees.

Music Funding

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make it his policy to ring-fence funding at local education authority level for (a) inter-school instrumental teaching, (b) orchestras, (c) choirs and (d) chamber music.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has no plans to change the current arrangements for funding school music at local education authority level. He considers it right that local authorities should determine the appropriate level of spending on music services in the light of their judgment of local needs and priorities and in the light of the demand from schools.

Outdoor Education

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make it his policy to ensure that local education authorities have a continuing responsibility to provide outdoor education for pupils at all state sector schools in their area.

Mr. Robin Squire: No. Where funds have been delegated to individual schools, it is their responsibility to determine—having regard to the requirements of the National Curriculum Order for Physical Education—the level of provision for outdoor education needed, and how it should be provided.

Pupil Selection

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to alter the interpretation of significant change of character to increase the selection of pupils in (a) local authority maintained and (b) grant-maintained schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: None.

HEALTH

Mental Health

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the percentage of acutely mentally ill statutorily detained in each of the last five years, by region and in London.

Mr. Bowis: The latest available information is shown in the table.

A change in the method of data collection following the Korner review in 1987 means that figures for years prior to 1987-88 are not directly comparable with later years.

Precise figures for London are not readily available, but an approximation can be made by amalgamating the four Thames regions.

Patients formally admitted to NHS facilities as a percentage of all admissions under the mental illness specialty, by regional health authority, 1987-88 to 1989-90

Regional Health Authority	Year ending 31 March 1987-88 per cent.	1988-89 per cent.	1989-90 per cent.
Northern	7	6	7
Yorkshire	6	7	8
Trent	8	10	11
East Anglia	7	9	10
North West Thames	18	12	15
North East Thames	10	9	10
South East Thames	7	7	7
South West Thames	16	20	15

South Western	12	7	8
West Midlands	8	8	9
Mersey	7	8	8
North Western	7	8	8
Special Hospitals	8	8	9
Thames Regions	12	12	12

Note: The above figures are calculated using data from the Korner aggregate return KH15 and the Hospital Episodes Statistics (HES) system. 1987-88 was the first year of collection. The figures for that year may therefore be less reliable than later years.

Hospital Beds

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds are currently available at (a) the Royal London hospital, (b) St. Bartholomew's hospital and (c) the London chest hospital.

Dr. Mawhinney: The available information is at unit level only and details by specific site are not separately identifiable. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the respective national health service trust and health authorities for details.

Paediatric Beds

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many paediatric beds there are in each provider unit in the Thames regions.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Average daily number of available paediatric[1] beds by provider unit Thames regions

	1991-92
North West Thames Region

Doncaster Health Authority

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Doncaster health authority made an application for authority by statutory instrument to distribute trust charitable funds to health trusts; and what is the number of the relevant statutory instrument.

Dr. Mawhinney: Doncaster health authority lodged a request to transfer charitable funds to the Doncaster Royal infirmary and Montague national health service trust on 24 May. The statutory instrument has not yet been made.

Trent Regional Health Authority

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she is yet able to make a statement over the location of a new high-security unit in the Trent regional health authority area.

Mr. Bowis: Rampton hospital already provides high security psychiatric services. There are no current plans for a further high security unit to be located in Trent region. I understand that Trent regional health authority is planning further development of its medium-secure service, but that no firm decision have been taken about this.

Single General Practitioner Practices

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many single-handed general practitioner practices there are (a) in England and (b) in London; and what is their average patient holding.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is shown in the table:

	England	Greater London
Number of single-handed GP practices	2,867	772
Average patient list size for single-handed GPs	2,118	2,276

Note: Data relate to 1 October 1992 except for the average patient list size for Greater London, for which the latest available figure is for 1 April 1992.

Prescriptions

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what would be the cost of exempting all recipients of disability working allowance from the payment of prescription charges;

(2) how many recipients of disability working allowance qualify for free prescriptions on the ground of low income in the most recent 12-month period available;

(3) what is her response to recommendation 16 of the third report of the Social Security Select Committee (HC, 1992-93, No. 284–I) that disability working allowance recipients should be entitled to free prescriptions in the same way that family credit recipients are.

Dr. Mawhinney: The health benefits unit does not keep a record of the social security benefits received by people who claim help from the national health service low income scheme. The estimated current annual cost of extending automatic help with national health service costs, to recipients of the allowance and their dependants, on the same basis as it is available to those receiving income support or family credit, would be around £0·75 million. The Government will respond in due course to the third report of the Social Security Select Committee (HC 1992-93, No. 284–I).

Patients Charter

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish for each health authority the reports on the performance of individual local hospital and ambulance services against patients charter rights and standards.

Mr. Sackville: Health authorities will be publishing annual reports on performance by their principal providers against patients charter rights and standards as required under the charter.

Notifiable Diseases, Avon

Mr. Aspinwall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health is she will state the number of cases of notifiable diseases reported in the County of Avon in 1992, by category.

Dryburn Hospital, Durham

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many admissions there were to wards 2 and 10 of Dryburn hospital, in the City of Durham constituency, for the last 12 months for which figures are available; and what figures she has for the time periods for which beds in those wards were occupied by each of those admissions;

(2) how much was spent in the last 12 months for which figures are available, by Dryburn hospital in the City of Durham constituency on (a) nursing appointments, (b) administrative appointments and (c) medical appointments.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Professor John Clarke, the chairman of the North Durham district health authority, for details.

Practice Charters

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many family health services authority and general practitioner practice charters have now been produced; and if she will list them.

Dr. Mawhinney: All family health services authorities were required to develop and produce local charters by 1 April 1993. We do not yet have any information on the numbers of general practitioner practices which have voluntarily produced their own practice charter.

Hospital Ophthalmic Departments

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidelines her Department gives to health authorities for record keeping and collating statistics in hospital ophthalmic departments;

(2) what data health authorities are required to collate from hospital ophthalmology departments.

Dr. Mawhinney: Purchasers and providers are required to keep agreed sets of data on all general in-patient and out-patient activity and for patients awaiting elective admission. The information requirements are described in module 1 (hospital services) and module 3 (paramedic and cross-sector services) of the national health service data manual, copies of which are available in the Library. In addition, in relation to hospital ophthalmic departments, details of sight tests undertaken and numbers of glasses prescribed by the hospital eye service must be kept.

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of referrals from general practitioners and optometrists to hospital ophthalmology out-patients clinics in each year since 1985.

Dr. Mawhinney: The available information is shown in the table. Separate figures for referrals from optometrists are not available centrally.

Blind and Partially Sighted People

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were registered blind and partially sighted in each year since 1985; and what figures are projected for registration in (a) five and (b) 10 years time.

Mr. Bowis: The information held centrally is shown in the table. The Department has not made projections for future registrations.

Eye Diseases

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people aged (a) under 40, (b) 41-65, (c) 66-70 and (d) over 70 years suffered from glaucoma, diabetic retinopathy, macular eye disease and cataracts in each year since 1985.

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally. Data on the causes of blindness and partial sight was first collected by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys in 1990-91 and is currently being processed.

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has regarding the incidence of eye disease leading to blindness or hospital treatment in the United Kingdom, each of the EC countries, the United States of America and Japan.

Mr. Bowis: Information on the incidence of all eye disease is not available centrally. Data have been collected for 1990-91 on the causes of blindness and partial sight referred to opthalmologists and this information is being prepared by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. Comparative data for other countries are not available.

In 1991-92, in England, there were 184,000 finished consultant episodes and 64,000 day cases in the hospital eye service, and 613,910 referrals made by the general optical service to opthalmologists.

Hospital Places (Allocation)

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she is taking to ensure equality of treatment between patients of fund-holding and non-fund-holding general practitioner practices in the allocation of hospital places.

Dr. Mawhinney: Guidance agreed with the joint consultants committee was issued to hospital consultants in June 1991, in EL(91)84, a copy of which is available in the Library. This stated that waiting times should not be offered to one general practitioner which would disadvantage the patients of another practice. Where a unit has spare capacity, this may be offered to any purchaser.

Nurse Grading Appeals

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will set out by regional health authority how many nurse clinical grading appeals are pending at a national level; what amount of money these claims involve; what steps are being made to speed the appeal process; and when she estimates this process will be completed;

(2) if she will set out by each health authority region the number of nurse clinical grading appeals still outstanding, the amount of money these claims involve, the steps being made to speed the appeal process and when the region is expected to have dealt with all appeals.

Mr. Sackville: The information on the number of appeals outstanding is shown in the table. No estimate of the total sum of arrears of pay due to be paid as a result of grading appeals has been made. Regional health authorities have been asked to clear all outstanding appeals by 31 October 1993.

Nurses and midwives clinical grading appeals outstanding as at 31 May 1993

Limited List Prescribing

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many letters have been received by her Department about the proposed extension of the limited list for pharmaceutical products from (a) the medical profession, (b) right hon. and hon. Members, (c) members of the public and (d) patient representative bodies; and if she will indicate in each case broadly how many of those letters supported the proposed extension and how many opposed it;

(2) how many representations she has received from right hon. and hon. Members about her proposed extension of the limited list for pharmaceutical products; in what form those representations were made; in how many cases those representations supported the extension of the list.

Dr. Mawhinney: There have been 174 letters from the medical profession; 981 letters from right hon. and hon. Members; 438 letters from members of the public and several letters from 11 of the bodies representing patients. A total of 130 representations have been received from right hon. and hon. Members in the form of parliamentary questions to Ministers. There have also been a number of requests for meetings with Ministers. These letters and representations have raised concerns about the selected list scheme.

Clothier Inquiry

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the location of (a) the administration and secretarial facilities for the Clothier inquiry and (b) Sir Cecil Clothier's office; and what links the administration of the inquiry has with the Trent regional health authority headquarters;

(2) where the Clothier inquiry is to be based; and what funding is to be made available for witnesses and the parents of the victims in respect of their travel expenses, loss of time from work and child minding.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The address of the independent inquiry is:

Office of Sir Cecil Clothier KCB QC
c/o Davies Arnold Cooper Solicitors
6-8 Bouverie Street
LONDON
EC4Y 8DD

The inquiry will be conducted independently of Trent regional health authority. One employee of the RHA has been seconded permanently to the inquiry for its duration, to act as the clerk.

Reasonable expenses incurred by witnesses in assisting the inquiry will be met. Claims for such expenses should be submitted to the clerk for consideration.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements have been made under the present Clothier inquiry in respect of financing legal representation for the parents.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The investigative rather than adversarial nature of the Clothier inquiry means that there is not the need for extensive legal representation of witnesses. If the parents wish to be accompanied to give evidence to the inquiry, by a lawyer or anyone else, additional expenses will be allowed to cover reasonable costs incurred.

United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visitors

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many disciplinary hearings the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visitors has held within the last five years; and what was their outcome;

(2) if she will list the members of the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visitors professional conduct committee stating (a) their profession, (b) the body from which they were elected or appointed and (c) the chair of that body.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to consult the council for details.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the remit of the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visitors professional conduct committee; and what procedures it is obliged to follow in the course of disciplinary proceedings.

Mr. Sackville: Section 12 of the Nurses Midwives and Health Visitors Act 1979, requires the council to constitute committees, by rules, to deal with proceedings for a person's removal from, or restoration to, the register, for the suspension, or termination of the suspension, of a person's registration in the register and to make rules governing the procedure of these committees. The relevant rules are set out in the Nurses, Midwives and Health Visitors (Professional Conduct) Rules 1993 Approval Order 1993 (Statutory Instrument 1993 No. 893).

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the members of the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visitors, stating (a) their profession, (b) the body from which they were elected or appointed and (c) the chair of that body.

Mr. Sackville: The information requested has been placed in the Library. Members of the council are either elected under the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting (Electoral Scheme) Order 1992 (Statutory Instrument 1992 No. 2159) or appointed by the Secretary of State under section 1 of the Nurses, Midwives and Health Visitors Act 1992. Members are not elected or appointed as representatives of particular bodies.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Television Licences

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many people paid their television licences at a concessionary rate in each year since 1985.

Mr. Brooke: The estimated number of households covered by a concessionary television for each year since 1985-86 is as follows:

Period	Number
1985-86	502,000
1986-87	554,000
1987-88	596,000
1988-89	645,000

Period	Number
1989-90	688,000
1990-91	635,000
1991-92	630,000
1992-93	639,000

Albert Dock

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are the latest tourist figures for the Albert dock; and how they are calculated.

Mr. Sproat: I understand that the Albert dock received 5 million visitors in 1992. This figure is calculated by an independent research company on behalf of the Albert Dock Company.

Community-based Sport

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what measures he is taking to promote community-based sports programmes in England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The Sports Council, which is funded by my Department, is active in promoting and funding community-based sports programmes. In 1992-93 they provided over £13 million to assist the development of over 500 projects. The business sponsorship incentive scheme for sport launched in November 1992 aims to increase the amount of business sponsorship going into grass roots sport including community-based projects. The scheme has a budget for Great Britain of £3·7 million in 1993-94. In addition schedule 12 to the Education Bill will enable school governing bodies to enter into joint management agreements for the community use of school facilities.

Performing Arts

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what measures he is taking to promote the performing arts in England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The Government recognise the great value of the arts in this country both for their own sake and for their contribution to the economy. It is one of the objectives of the Department of National Heritage to encourage the living arts to flourish.

The Government have demonstrated their commitment to the arts through the generous settlements which the Arts Council has received. Since the Government took office in 1979, the Arts Council's grant has increased by 45 per cent. in real terms. Even within the present restraints on public expenditure, I have been able to increase the Arts Council's grant this year by £4·4 million to £225·6 million, a rise in cash terms of 2 per cent.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what communications his Department has had with the national steering committee of the nuclear-free zone local authorities on the matters of (a) nuclear testing and (b) nuclear non-proliferation.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office recently wrote to the national steering committee of the Nuclear Free Zone Local Authorities in reply to a letter about nuclear testing and non-proliferation.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the United Nations informed Her Majesty's Government that it was banning all visits to UNPROFOR by persons not directly connected with UNPROFOR; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We were advised by the United Nations on 1 April 1993 that visits to UNPROFOR would not be accepted from 5 April 1993.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many jobs have been gained or lost in the European Community in each year since 1985.

Miss Widdecombe: The following table shows the available information:

Net increase in numbers of people in employment (thousands)

Year	[1] EC 10	[1] EC 12
1985-86	1,052	n/a
1986-87	868	1,492
1987-88	2,012	2,490
1988-89	1,440	2,042
1989-90	2,763	3,200
1990-91	338	600

Source:
Eurostat "Labour Force Survey 1983-91".
[1] "EC 12" covers the present 12 member states. Spain and Portugal joined in 1986, so comparable figures can be calculated for 1985-86 onwards only for the 10 previous member states, designated in the table as "EC 10".

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the annual rate of turnover in employment for the last year for which figures are available.

Miss Widdecombe: The Department does not publish or collect statistics relating to the annual rate of turnover in employment.

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people in (a) Accrington and Rossendale, Blackburn, Burnley and Pendle travel-to-work areas in total and (b) Accrington and Rossendale travel-to-work area over the age of 60 years who are unemployed are specifically excluded from the unemployment statistics because of their age.

Miss Widdecombe: The claimant count is a by-product of the system designed to pay unemployment-related benefits. It comprises those claiming unemployment benefit, income support or national insurance credits, who say that they are unemployed and satisfy the conditions for claiming benefits.

Unemployed people aged 60 years and over are not required to be available for work in order to receive income support and national insurance credits. Unlike people aged under 60 years, they do not have to attend at an Employment Service local office to claim these benefits and consequently, if they choose not to attend, will not appear on the claimant count.

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people in (a) the Accrington and Rossendale, Blackburn, Burnley and Pendle travel-to-work areas in total and (b) the Accrington and Rossendale travel-to-work area would be eligible for unemployment benefit if they were not excluded from the calculation because they are claiming other sources of benefit.

Miss Widdecombe: The claimant count is a by-product of the system designed to pay unemployment-related benefits. It includes those claiming income support or national insurance credits on account of being unemployed as well as those claiming unemployment benefit itself. No information is available on those who do not claim these benefits.

School Leavers

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list for each year since 1988 the number of pupils in Greater Manchester, Lancashire, Cheshire and Merseyside reaching the minimum school leaving age and the number who entered employment directly, entered a youth training scheme on leaving school, returned for a further period at school, or entered a further education college; and if he will provide such estimates as are available for 1993.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is available only for the whole of the north-west region and is given in the following table. The information is compiled by United Kingdom heads of careers services on behalf of the Careers Service. This information is not yet available for 1992 and 1993. Information for 1988 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Numbers of pupils leaving secondary school at minimum school leaving age in the North West region, London and their destinations for the years 1989-1991

	1989	1990	1991

Palace of Westminster (Safety Standards)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 8 June, Official Report, column 227-28, if he will set out the dates of all inspections carried out in the Palace of Westminster relating to health and safety; and if he will give details of all fire safety regulations and standards with which the Palace of Westminster has been found to comply.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The following planned inspection visits to the Palace of Westminster have been made by the Health and Safety Executive since its formation in 1975:

23 August 1978
19 July 1985
3 February 1986
20 September 1989
9 January 1993
8 April 1993

In addition, visits have been made in connection with construction activities. However, as these are recorded against individual contractors, they cannot be separately identified without incurring disproportionate cost.

Fire safety regulations and standards are the responsibility of my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary.

PRIME MINISTER

Correspondence

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Prime Minister when the hon. Member for Lewisham, Deptford, can expect to receive a reply to her letters of 8 February, 31 March and 4 May regarding the concerns of her constituents, Paul and Elisabeth Towlson.

The Prime Minister: Shortly.

Public Expenditure Review

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects the current review of public expenditure being carried out by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury to be completed.

The Prime Minister: We expect to complete the reviews by the end of this Parliament, although preliminary conclusions from the first four reviews of social security, health, education and home affairs should inform this year's public expenditure survey.

India

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he made and what assurances he received on human rights from the Indian Government during his visit to the country in January this year; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I raised British concerns about human rights with the Indian Prime Minister. He assured me of his Government's commitment to respect human rights and determination to take firm action against wrongdoers. He also confirmed that he would be introducing legislation in the spring session of the Indian Parliament to set up an independent Human Rights Commission. This legislation was tabled on 14 May.

Allivane International

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received since January 1991 on the role played by Allivane International in exporting arms and military equipment to Iran.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of representations from the hon. Member and from the hon. Member for Glasgow, Shettleston (Mr. Marshall) since January 1991 on the role of Allivane International in exporting arms and military equipment to Iran. Allegations about illegal exports by this company were investigated by Her Majesty's Customs in 1987-88. No prosecution was begun.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 15 June.

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 15 June.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions the procedure of paragraph 74 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" has been invoked in relation to official visits overseas; and at what total cost for the latest available year.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 14 June 1993]: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

WALES

Technology Initiative

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish with regard to the sum he has allocated for the technology initiative in Welsh secondary schools (a) the method he used to inform schools, (b) the name of each school that submitted a bid, (c) the criteria used by his Department to determine the application and (d) the sum of money allocated to each successful school.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Welsh Office wrote to all directors of education and chairs of governors of grant-maintained schools in Wales inviting bids under the initiative. A copy of the letter was also sent, for information, direct to the head teacher of all eligible schools in Wales. The closing date for bids is 16 July and I expect to be able to announce details of successful bids in early September.

Schools selected for support will be expected to show evidence of a capacity to establish a technological ethos which will pervade the curriculum as a whole, as well as delivering a distinctive offering in the teaching of technology itself.

Account will also be taken of the degree to which the school can demonstrate a commitment to developing links with local businesses and giving parity of status to vocational and academic studies. The project put forward should directly contribute to the achievement of the schools technology and staff development plans and add value and improve existing facilities at the school. Full details of these criteria are included in the letter sent to all eligible schools.

NHS Trust Chief Executives

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish for the chief executives of (a) the Ceredigion and Mid Wales national health service trust, (b) the Glen Clwyd district general hospital trust, (c) the Wrexham Maelor hospital national health service trust, (d) the Gwent Community Health national health service trust, (e) the Powys Health Care national health service trust, (f) the Llandough hospital national health service trust, (g) the Glan Hafren national health service trust, (h) the Carmarthen and district national health service trust, (i) the Swansea national health service trust, (j) the Llanelli/Dinefwr national health service trust, (k) the Bridgend and district national health service trust and

Nursery Education

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what future powers his Department proposes to take concerning nursery education in Wales;

(2) if he will make a statement on the future of nursery education in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: There are no plans to alter the present basis for provision, which is at the discretion of local authorities in the case of LEA-maintained schools.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) nursery schools and (b) nursery classes there are in each of the counties of Wales; and what were the comparable figures for 1973.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Information on the number of classes in nursery schools is not collected centrally. The earliest year for which comparable information on nursery schools is available is 1975-76 and 1977-78 was the earliest year in which comparable information on the number of nursery classes in primary schools was collected.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the level of public expenditure on the school meal service in each year since 1979 in cash and real terms.

[1] Revised estimates.

Beaches

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact of the proportion of Welsh beaches credited in the national beach awards by the Tidy Britain Group on tourism in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I am pleased that 39 beaches in Wales —over 90 per cent. of those which applied—were credited with national seaside awards by the Tidy Britain Group. This is a significant increase over the number of awards made last year and represents a substantial achievement requiring exacting standards of water quality and beach management. I am sure that these awards will provide a boost to tourism in Wales.

Mature Students

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what financial help and support is available in Wales for mature students in full-time education; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Local education authorities in England and Wales have a duty to provide mandatory awards to students who are personally qualified and who attend designated higher education courses. All courses that attract mandatory awards also attract student loans. In certain circumstances the mandatory award provides for an extra allowance for older students.

LEAs may also provide discretionary awards to students on non-designated courses or to those who do not qualify for mandatory awards. In addition, discretionary help may be available from other sources such as institutional access funds, a career development loan or the educational trust funds and charities.

School Performance

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his best estimate of the cost of implementing his proposals for the publication of information on schools' and colleges' performance; and where he has published his estimate.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Decisions on the format and extent of the publication of school and college performance data this year will be taken in the light of responses to consultation currently being undertaken. Costs, when known, will be met from within sub-head F.15(1) of class XV, vote 5 of the Supply Estimates 1993-94 (HC495-XV) published on 9 March 1993.

A copy of the consultation paper and of HC495-XV are available in the Library of the House.

Cancer

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps the Welsh Office it taking to reduce the incidence of cancer in Gwynedd.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The prime responsibility for improving the health of the people of Gwynedd lies with the local health authorities. An action plan to reduce the incidence of cancer forms part of the local strategy for health which I approved earlier this year. This strategy was informed by the "Protocol for Investment in Health Gain: Cancers" which was published by the Welsh Health Planning Forum in December 1990.

Recycling

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many recycling centres are currently in operation in each county in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This information is not held centrally. I refer my hon. Friend to the district councils, which are responsible for recycling.

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of household waste from each county in Wales has been recycled in each year since 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on the percentage of household waste in Wales which is recycled is not available.

Press and Public Relations

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total amount spent by each district health authority and NHS trust in Wales on press and public relations in (a) 1989-90, (b) 1990-91 and (c) 1991-92.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the annual total estimated cost of paying unemployment benefit and assuming the unemployed total, not seasonally adjusted, to be that as at April 1993.

Mr. Redwood: The latest available expenditure estimate, for 1990-91, was published by the Central Statistical Office in table 8.6 of the 1993 edition of Regional Trends (No. 28), which is available in the Library of the House.

TRANSPORT

Transport Research Laboratory

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the research projects undertaken in each of the last three years by the Transport Research Laboratory and the cost of each project.

Mr. Key: I have placed in the Library tables listing projects undertaken by the Transport Research Laboratory in 1992-93 for the Department of Transport and other public sector customers. Information for prior years in the form requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. I have placed in the Library copies of the published research programmes for 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Trunk Roads

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department has spent in each of the last 10 years buying mineral rights for land compulsorily purchased for trunk road schemes.

Mr. Key: I regret that this information is not held centrally and could therefore be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ship Safety

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what controls on standards of safety his Department exercises over ships sailing under flags of convenience in British and EC waters; and how these are monitored and satisfied.

Mr. Norris: The United Kingdom takes a leading role within the International Maritime Organisation in developing internationally agreed safety standards and ensuring the implementation of those standards by every flag state. In addition, the United Kingdom and 14 other European countries, including all the EC coastal states, operate a co-ordinated system of inspection of foreign ships entering their ports. Each member of this system, known as the memorandum of understanding on port state control—MOU—has agreed to inspect 25 per cent. of individual ships calling at their ports. The United Kingdom has set a higher target of 30 per cent. and in recent years this has been met. It is estimated that around 85 per cent. of foreign ships entering the MOU region as a whole are inspected at least once annually. Within this system, those ships flying the flags of countries with poor safety records are, from July this year, to be selected for special attention.

London Travelcard

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will bring forward legislation to ensure the continued existence of the London Travelcard; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: The Railways Bill includes provisions which will give the franchising director power to require franchisees to participate in multi-modal ticketing schemes such as the London Travelcard. The Secretary of State will give him guidance on the exercise of that power, and franchisees will then be required to participate in such ticketing arrangements in accordance with the terms of their franchise agreements. The legislation that the Government hope soon to bring forward to deregulate London bus services will give all operators the right to participate in multi-modal/multi-operator ticketing schemes on fair terms. We fully recognise the importance and value of the London Travelcard, and are actively working with all the parties concerned to see how its future can best be secured. We have made it clear that if further changes to legislation are needed to ensure the continuation of Travelcard, such changes will be incorporated in the proposed Bill.

Traffic Accidents

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish figures showing the numbers and proportions of children in each standard region killed or injured in traffic accidents, giving the most recently available annual figures.

Mr. Key: The numbers and proportions of children in each standard region killed or injured in traffic accidents in 1991 are shown in the table.

Road Safety

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he is taking to improve road safety.

Mr. Key: The Government have a target to reduce road casualties by one-third by the year 2000 taking the average for 1981-85 as the baseline. Our programme for achieving this was set out at length during the debate which took place on 15 May 1992. It includes a continuing programme of publicity campaigns aimed particularly at reducing the amount of drinking and driving and reducing speed in urban areas, the provision of grant to local authorities in support of highway engineering for road safety, continued negotiation of improved vehicle standards and measures to facilitate the enforcement of road traffic law.

In the last year we have published a new "Highway Code" and a policy document on speed. The Road Traffic Act 1991 has been commenced and a major experiment established into the rehabilitation of drink-drive offenders. A record £50 million of transport supplementary grant has been allocated to local safety schemes and more than fifty 20 mph zones have now been approved.

Provisional statistics for 1992 show that fatalities are 24 per cent. below the 1981-85 baseline and that the one-third reduction target has already been achieved for serious injuries, despite a 38 per cent. increase in traffic.

West Wellow Bypass

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will extend their deadline date for public consultation on the alternative routes for the A36 West Wellow bypass from 12 July to 12 August.

Mr. Norris: The public consultation period is being extended to 13 September.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration his Department or any agencies employed by him has given to a route south of West Wellow for the A36 bypass of the village.

Mr. Norris: The Department has considered route options for the proposed A36 West Wellow bypass south of the existing trunk road, but rejected them on environmental grounds.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give details of the environmental assessments undertaken by his Department or agencies in respect of the four alternative routes known as purple, green, yellow A and yellow B for the A36 bypass of West Wellow.

Mr. Norris: Environmental assessments undertaken for the route options are contained in three landscape reports, an ecological appraisal and a preliminary appraisal report. They are available for inspection at the public exhibitions currently being held in West Wellow.

Motor Vehicles

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the percentage annual change in road use by motorised vehicles in each year since 1979.

Mr. Key: The annual percentage change in road use by motorised vehicles in each year since 1979 is given in the table.

All motor vehicle traffic in Great Britain

Year	All motor vehicle traffic
	(Billion vehicle Km)	Percentage change on previous year
1978	256·49	—
1979	255·87	−0·2

[1] Provisional estimate.

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the number of licensed motor vehicles on the roads (a) in 1983 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Key: The information requested was published recently by HMSO in "Vehicle Licensing Statistics 1992". This shows that the total number of motor vehicles licensed in Great Britain as at 31 December 1983 were 20,209,000. As at 31 December 1992, the latest year available, the number of licensed motor vehicles had increased by 23 per cent. to 24,851,000.

Trunk Roads

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provision has been made for expenditure on trunk roads in each of the next three years.

Mr. Key: The provision for expenditure on trunk roads in England is £2,092 million in 1993-94, £2,151 million in 1994-95 and £2,059 million in 1995-96.

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the total number of jobs involved in current highway projects on the trunk road network.

Mr. Key: Some 50 new construction schemes are under construction and many major maintenance projects are under way on the English trunk road network. The number of jobs on these sites varies from day to day. In addition, there are people working in the industries supplying aggregates, steel, communications equipment, and other materials. On the basis of comments by independent bodies, it is estimated that, each £30,000 of capital expenditure directly supports one job. On this basis, the £1,932 million we plan to spend on new construction and capital maintenance in 1993-94 will directly support 60,000 to 70,000 jobs, and a good many more besides in supplying industries.

London Underground

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has for the relief of traffic congestion on London Underground;

(2) what proposals he has to reduce passenger overcrowding on the London Underground.

Mr. Norris: London Transport and London Underground Ltd. are responsible for the management of the underground system, including decisions on measures to relieve overcrowding and congestion. Such measures currently include both improvements to the existing network such as the £750 million modernisation of the Central line and the £28 million modernisation of Bank/Monument station, and plans for new lines, notably the Jubilee line extension and crossrail.

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much central Government expenditure is allocated to improving safety standards on the London Underground.

Mr. Norris: The Government provide a block grant to London Transport—LT—as a whole. We do not allocate specific amounts either to London Underground Ltd—LUL—or to expenditure on improving safety standards. Decisions on such matters are taken by LT and LUL.

Light Rail Projects

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many light rail projects are planned in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Freeman: Local authorities are primarily responsible for initiating light rail projects, and I am aware of around 30 that are planning or considering such projects for their area. These are in addition to the schemes towards which the Government has provided resources, the Manchester Metrolink scheme, which opened last year, and the South Yorkshire Supertram scheme, which is under construction and the first phase of which is due to open in early 1994. The Government have also provided funds towards the development of the Midland Metro scheme.

Wheel Clamping

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effect of wheel clamping on levels of illegal parking.

Mr. Key: Research carried out by the Road Research Laboratory indicates that wheel clamping on public roads significantly increases the degree of compliance with parking regulations, which in turn allows traffic to flow more freely.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to reduce carbon dioxide emissions from motor vehicles in order to help fulfil the commitments the Government gave at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my right hon. Friend to the hon. Members for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) and for Ellesmere Port and Neston (Mr. Miller) on 24 May, Official Report, columns 417-18.

Birmingham Relief Road

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the implications for the tolling design of the Birmingham northern relief road of "Paying for Better Motorways", Cm. 2200.

Mr. Key: "Paying for Better Motorways" makes it clear that no decisions have been taken on whether to charge directly for the use of existing motorways. Legislation would be required for any form of charging. We see no need to revise the current plans for the Birmingham northern relief road. The private sector has already taken on responsibility for costs and risks associated with the scheme.

Road Surfaces

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made, in respect of each stretch of motorway and trunk road, of the likelihood of the road surface being damaged by hot weather; and, in respect of each, what repairs will be carried out and when.

Mr. Key: The standards and specifications used by the Department of Transport for the design and construction of all motorways and trunk roads make due allowance for the effect of hot weather. However, damage does sometimes occur in exceptional circumstances. In addition to normal monitoring, during periods of unusual weather conditions extra monitoring is undertaken. Problems are rectified as quickly as possible and in such a way as to cause minimum inconvenience to road users.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the cost of repair in respect of each stretch of motorway and trunk road of repairing damage caused, or likely to be caused, by defective concrete and reinforced steel construction; and what plans he has to undertake repair work to ensure minimum disruption to motorists.

Mr. Key: The Department of Transport spends some £16 million each year on the rehabilitation of concrete roads. This is mainly to rectify the effects of many years of wear and tear from heavy traffic; only a very small proportion of the work is to remedy defective materials and workmanship. Concrete roads are regularly inspected and any necessary repair work is carefully planned and co-ordinated to ensure minimum disruption to road users, by working at night, for example.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which stretches of (a) motorway and (b) trunk road, with the number of miles in each case, have been constructed with concrete and reinforced steel.

Mr. Key: Of the 250 miles of motorway with a concrete surface, about 65 miles are reinforced with steel. For all-purpose trunk roads, there are 210 miles of which 80 are reinforced. Many roads have concrete as part of the pavement but have a blacktop surface. Taking these into account, approximately 20 per cent. of motorways and 8 per cent. of all-purpose trunk roads have concrete as a part of the structural pavement layers. Roads with long—above 10 miles, but not necessarily continuous—lengths of concrete carriageway are:

	Lengths (miles)
M20 in Kent	38
M40 in Oxfordshire/Warwickshire	38
M11 in Essex	30
A12 in Essex	29
M25 in Surrey	22
M42 in Warwickshire	19
M27 in Hampshire	16
A1 in Nottinghamshire	16
M5 in Somerset	15
M6 in Lancashire	13
A45 in Suffolk	13
M2 in Kent	12
M25 in Essex	12

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give full details of the design specification required of contractors who (a) build and (b) repair roads; and what plans he has to review the specification required of the tenderer.

Mr. Key: Contractors involved in the construction and repair of the Department's roads are required to carry out their work in accordance with the specification for highway works which forms part of the manual of contract documents for highway works. The content is subject to continual review with the publication of an update approximately annually. Designs for road construction are based on standards set out in the design manual for roads and bridges. Copies of both documents are being made available in the Library of the House.

MV Tigris

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what response he has received from the Greek authorities in respect of representations made to them by his Department regarding the alleged dumping of coal residue in international waters west of Foula in 1992, by the MV Tigris; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: The response from the Greek authorities received last month states that the competent Greek authorities have investigated the matter and questioned the master of the vessel. He confirmed that:

a. MV Tigris was on 13 May 1992 and at 1445 GMT in the position mentioned and the Captain was on the bridge;
b. A crew member was on the starboard side where he was piling coal dust after a clean up of the hold of the ship;
c. Competent officers under Captain's orders ensured that remainders of cargo were not shovelled into the sea;
d. The Captain-issued the order since the vessel was in a Special Area;
e. The crew member on the starboard side did not shovel coal dust over the side of the vessel.

The Greek authorities did not impose a penalty.

We remain concerned about this matter and are considering how to take it further.

Cyprus Turkish Airlines

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to prevent the traffic of Cyprus Turkish Airlines between Stansted and Heathrow.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 14 June 1993]: If Cyprus Turkish Airlines were to fly to or from the United Kingdom they would require the permission of the Secretary of State under article 88 of the Air Navigation Order 1989. It is an offence to operate without this and an airline would be liable to prosecution.

No applications have been received from Cyprus Turkish Airlines.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Poverty Passports

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if Her Majesty's Government support the proposal by the President of the European Commission for the issue of poverty passports to enable disadvantaged EC citizens to claim a range of benefits in order to lift them out of poverty; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: Disadvantage takes different forms in different countries and, in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity, it is accepted that action lies primarily with member states. Community-wide "poverty passports" would not, therefore, be appropriate. Mechanisms already exist to deal with the portability of benefits between member states.

War Pensioners

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent changes there have been to the treatment allowance available to war pensioners suffering from chronic illnesses; and how much was spent on treatment allowances for pensioners in 1991, 1992 and in 1993 to date.

Mr. Hague: Treatment allowance, which in effect brings a war pension up to the 100 per cent. rate, is payable where the pensioner is receiving treatment, in hospital or elsewhere, for his war-pensioned disablement. Legislation has been amended recently so that, from 12 April 1993, new awards of treatment allowance will be made only when the war pensioner incurs a loss of earnings as a result of the treatment. The Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions was consulted about this change.

Information on expenditure on treatment allowance is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Retirement Pensions

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of (a) men and (b) women in the latest year for which figures are available reached retirement age with entitlement to (i) the full basic state pension, (ii) some state earnings-related pension or additional pension, (iii) an occupational pension and (iv) a personal pension.

Mr. Hague: The information is not available in the form requested.

The available information regarding recipients of basic retirement pension and additional pension resident in Great Britain at 30 September 1992, the latest date for which figures are available, is in the table.

	Men aged 65 [1] Per cent.	Women aged 60 [1] Per cent.
Full category A retirement pension	68·0	16·0
Full category B retirement pension (widow/widower)	—	1·5
Full category B retirement pension (married women)[2]	n/a	7·5
Notional additional pension[3]	71·5	32·0

[1] Figures expressed as percentages of the 1991 based population projections for mid-1992 rounded to the nearest 0·5 per cent. The following main categories of benefit recipients are not shown in the table:
People receiving pension at less than the full rate;
Women receiving pension partly on their own and partly on their husband's contributions;
People receiving invalidity benefit post-pensionable age.

[2] The standard rate of category B retirement pension payable to a married woman is approximately 60 per cent. of the full category A rate.

[3] The figures relate to notional entitlement to additional pension with retirement pension prior to any contracted-out deduction in respect of guaranteed minimum pension or protected rights payment arising from membership of a contracted-out pension scheme or a personal pension scheme used in place of the additional pension. The numbers therefore include cases where only guaranteed minimum pension or protected rights is in payment.

In 1989, the most recent year for which figures are available, it is estimated that 66 per cent. of men aged 65 to 69, and 36 per cent. of women aged 60 to 64, had entitlement to some occupational pension. Information on numbers of men and women reaching retirement age with a personal pension is not available.

Income Support

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost in a full year of restoring income support entitlement to those aged 16 and 17 years.

Mr. Burt: Information is not available to calculate the cost of restoring entitlement to income support for 16 and 17-year-olds.

Copenhagen Conference

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the level of British Government participation in the conference in Copenhagen organised by the Danish EC presidency on 3 and 4 June, entitled, "Fighting Against Social Exclusion—A Challenge to the 1990s"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: The British Government was represented at this conference by two officials from the policy group in the Department.

Disability Benefits

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many claims have been received to date by his Department for (a) compensation, (b) an ex-gratia payment or (c) both from people who claimed disability living allowance, attendance allowance or mobility allowance on or after 3 February 1992; how many in each category were (i) accepted or (ii) refused; and what is the total cost to his Department for such payments over this period;

(2) how many people are expected to receive a special compensatory payment under the special arrangements for people who claimed disability living allowance, attendance allowance or mobility allowance on or after 3 February 1992 in total; how many of those will receive (a) £10, (b) £20, (c) £30, (d) £40, (e) £50, (f) £60, (g) £70 and (h) over £70 compensation; and what is the expected overall cost to his Department;

(3) how many people whose attendance allowance or mobility allowance (a) came up for renewal or (b) was being reviewed on or after 3 February 1992 experienced interruption in their benefit for a period exceeding three months; and how many of these have been awarded compensation;

(4) how many people who claimed disability living allowance, attendance allowance or mobility allowance between 3 February 1992 and 31 March 1993 would have been eligible for compensation had the new compensation arrangements linking the scheme to Benefits Agency performance targets been brought into effect from 3 February 1992.

Mr. Scott: The administration of disability living allowance and attendance allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 14 June 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to the points raised in your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about compensation and ex gratia payments for people who have claimed Disability Living Allowance (DLA), Attendance Allowance (AA) and Mobility Allowance (MobA). I will deal with each of your points in turn.

Firstly, I should explain the effect of the revised arrangements and special retrospective scheme, which was recently announced.

Until 1 April 1993, compensation, for delays in payment of benefit, is only considered when the delay in payment of benefit in new claims was at least 12 months. The delay had to have been caused by official error and the arrears of benefit had to be £50 or more.

From 1 April 1993, the date from which compensation may be paid has been brought forward, whilst the other criteria remain the same. Compensation will be considered where a payment of benefit is delayed for 6 months beyond the target set for clearing the bulk of claims.

In recognition that this improvement will be too late for people who claimed DLA last year and suffered unacceptable delay due to the exceptional problems following its introduction, a special compensatory payment will be made.

This will apply to those people who made a claim to DLA, or MobA on or after 3 February 1992, were paid before 1 April 1993 and suffered a delay in the payment of benefit of more than 8 months. Payment will be made at the rate of £10 per month for each month in excess of this 8 month period.

The number of people who have received payments of compensation for late payment of benefit on or after 3 February, having claimed DLA, AA or MobA, is 186 at a cost of £25,779·84. The number of people who have received an ex gratia payment, made in respect of, for example, telephone bills is 162 at a cost of £9,316·96. These numbers will however include claims to benefit made prior to 3 February 1992. In the same period 129 people were refused a compensation payment and 74 people were refused an ex gratia payment. We have no record of people who claimed both. These figures are provisional and may be subject to amendment.

It is not possible to predict how many people will receive each of the amounts you quoted by way of special compensatory payments. It is anticipated that some 80,000 to 90,000 people will benefit from the scheme at a cost of around £3 million.

Arrangements for compensation for those people who have experienced an interruption in the payment of their benefit exceeding three months remain the same. These people would originally have made a claim to AA or MobA, which at renewal would have been paid as one of the components of DLA. Since 3 February 1992, 141 people experienced an interruption of this duration or more and have received a payment of compensation. The amount of compensation paid is £5,204·43. These figures are provisional and may be subject to amendment.

Requests for review are not subject to this three-month period, which applies to interruptions in payment. They are subject to the same period as new claims.

The information on how many people would have been eligible for compensation, had the new arrangements been brought into effect from 3 February 1992, is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However these claims would have been subject to consideration of a payment of compensation where payment of benefit had been delayed for six months beyond the target date set for clearing the bulk of claims. In addition, the delay would have to have been caused by official error and the arrears of benefit would have had to be £50 or more.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report. A copy will also be placed in the Library.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were claiming sickness or invalidity benefit in each month in each of the last three years (a) in the area covered by the Wales area directorate and (b) in each of the districts in Wales.

Mr. Scott: The administration of sickness benefit and invalidity benefit is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 14 June 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how many people were claiming Sickness or Invalidity Benefit in each month in each of the last three years (a) in the area covered by the Wales Area Directorate and (b) in each of the districts in Wales.

The information has been obtained in the format requested. The statistics for the number of people claiming Sickness or Invalidity Benefit at the last working day of each month of the last three years in the area covered by the Wales Area Directorate (Wales as part of the former Wales and South West Region prior to April 1991) are provided on the table. The statistics for each of the districts in Wales are provided on appendix 1.

[1]Note SB and IVB claimants were counted together up to April 1991.

It should also be noted that the figures include customers who may have claimed Sickness Benefit and Invalidity Benefit but who may not be in receipt of the benefit. These cases will be "credits only" cases where the person is registered sick and receiving National Insurance credits, also cases where termination action has not been completed. The figures are based on a 100 per cent. clerical count of cases in the local office and are therefore subject to amendment.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Wales received (a) sickness benefit and (b) invalidity benefit in (i) March 1990 and (ii) March 1993.

Mr. Scott: The administration of sickness and invalidity benefit is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Barry Jones, dated 14 June 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how many people in Wales received (a) sickness benefit and (b) invalidity benefit in (i) March 1990 and (ii) March 1993.

Figures are not yet available showing the number of recipients of Invalidity Benefit (IVB) and Sickness Benefit (SB) in Wales in March 1993. However, I am able to tell you that as at 30 March 1990 10,300 people in Wales were in receipt of SB and 137,500 people were in receipt of IVB.

This information has been obtained from a one per cent sample of claimants.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Performance Targets

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many people working in public services now have their remuneration linked to performance targets as a result of the citizens charter programme.

Mr. David Davis: Information on the number of public servants with their remuneration linked to performance targets is not held centrally.

As the citizens charter first report: 1992 (Cm 2101) explained, performance-related pay is progressively becoming established as a feature of public sector pay schemes. Performance pay schemes cover half a million civil servants; discretionary allowances are available for primary school teachers; 40 per cent. of local authorities have performance-related pay schemes; London Underground managers have a proportion of their pay linked to performance; quality of service affects London Executive Board members' pay by up to 35 per cent.; and British Rail's performance against quality of service objectives affects all executive board members' pay by up to 20 per cent.

ENVIRONMENT

Environment Summit

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the events, and give full details, scheduled to take place at the environment summit in Manchester in September which specifically involve children; and on what basis children will be invited to participate.

Mr. Yeo: The children's environment summit will be held in Manchester on Saturday 18 September. The children attending will be invited to put forward ideas for a long-term environmental initiative.

A competition will be launched later this month to select 60 children aged between eight and 15 to participate.

Climate Change

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the organisations which responded to his departmental consultation document on climate change; and what action he has taken in response to the comments received.

Mr. Yeo: We received more than 250 responses to the discussion document: "Climate Change—Our National Programme for CO_2 Emissions." A list of the respondents has been placed in the Library of the House. Copies of all the responses have been placed in the library of my Department. They have all been read very carefully and will be taken into account in finalising the national CO_2 programme. The programme will be published later this year.

Council Tax Registers

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those public utilities, organisations or companies which currently have direct access to council tax registers.

Mr. Baldry: None of these bodies has rights of access to information about the state of a council tax valuation list going beyond those available to all persons under section 28 of the Local Government Finance Act 1992.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to extend the scope of access to council tax registers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend has no plans to extend access to information in council tax valuation lists.

Homeless Elderly

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the night shelters or hostels within the Greater London area that are specifically allocated for use by homeless elderly people within the Greater London area.

Mr. Baldry: This information is not held centrally, although the Department part-funds resource information services to publish an annual London hostels directory, which lists hostel accommodation in London. The entry for each hostel shows, inter alia, any age restrictions on residents. I am placing copies of the directory in the Library.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what survey has been undertaken by his Department on the welfare of elderly homeless people sleeping rough in London during the first three months of 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The Department has not undertaken such a survey. The age breakdown of people sleeping rough in central London is given in the report of independent research into the effectiveness of the rough sleepers initiative, commissioned by the Department from Geoffrey Randall and Susan Brown, entitled "The Rough Sleepers Initiative: an Evaluation", published in January 1993. Copies of this report are in the Library.

Landfill Management

Mr. Henry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to examine the issue of criminal liability of private sector companies which take over the management of local authority landfill sites under the Environmental Protection Act 1990, and the Water Act 1989, which then cause pollution as a direct result of waste deposited in the past.

Mr. Yeo: We have no plans to examine the issue of criminal liability in these circumstances.

However, my right hon. and learned Friend the then Secretary of State announced on 24 March 1993 at column 633 a wide-ranging review by an interdepartmental group of officials, under the chairmanship of his Department, of the problems associated with contaminative uses of land. Among the issues to be covered by this review will be civil liability for contamination.

Mobile Home Owners

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek to amend the Planning and Compensation Act 1991 to extend compensation payable under it to mobile home owners affected by motorways completed in the last 10 years.

Mr. Baldry: Under a provision inserted by the Planning and Compensation Act 1991, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport intends later this year to make regulations enabling highway authorities to make payments to the owners of mobile homes which are affected by a specified level of noise arising from the construction or use of new or altered roads. The powers apply only to cases where the works giving rise to noise came into use no earlier than 12 months before commencement of the provision. The regulations which my right hon. Friend proposes to make will accordingly apply to new or altered road schemes which first came into use on or after 25 September 1990. We are not persuaded of the case for any extension in the scope of the powers.

Water Prices

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the heads of the regional water companies to discuss the basis for water price structure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: My right hon. Friend's predecessors have from time to time met chairmen of the water companies. The basis for restrictions on water charges is set out in the water companies' instruments of appointment, compendia of which are available in the Library. Under the Water Industry Act 1991, the Director General of Water Services has the duty to set limits to the prices companies may charge. The director general has published a number of consultation papers concerning his approach to setting price limits at the first full review in 1994 which will take effect from 1 April 1995. Under section 2 of the Water Industry Act 1991, the director general must enable companies to obtain the funds to finance their duties while protecting the interests of their customers.

Radon Gas

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what grants are available to help householders pay the cost of remedial work in their homes to prevent contamination by radon gas; how many grants he estimates have been made; and how many houses are estimated to be at risk.

Mr. Yeo: Local authorities have powers under the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 to award discretionary renovation grants to help home owners with radon remedial measures. Information on the number of grants given for this purpose is not collected by the Department. The National Radiological Protection Board estimates that 100,000 houses are above the Government action level.

Company Relocations, Merseyside

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many companies from outside Merseyside have relocated within the Merseyside development corporation area since 1991.

Mr. Baldry: A recent survey carried out on behalf of MDC has indicated that approximately 200 companies have been established within MDC's area since 1991. Ten of these companies moved into MDC owned premises from outside Merseyside. In addition, there have been relocations by three Government organisations into the MDC area.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the cost to Government of relocating companies to the Merseyside development corporation area since 1991.

Mr. Baldry: It is not possible to put a figure on cost to Government in relocating companies to the MDC area since 1991 as much of the information is commercial in confidence. However, since 1991 MDC has given grant assistance of more than £3 million to companies within MDC's area, thereby creating or retaining jobs.

Red List Substances

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the United Kingdom input figures, and their dates, for each of the 23 red list substances, which are to be used as the baseline for the Government's commitment to reduce riverine, estuarial and direct coastal aqueous discharges to the sea by 50 per cent.; and if he will disaggregate inputs of each substance to the North sea and other coastal waters of England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Yeo: The available information is contained in "The Implementation of the Ministerial Declaration of the Second International Conference on the Protection of the North Sea," published by my Department in February 1990, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Discharges of red list substances in Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Northern Ireland respectively.

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the latest available figures relating to riverine, estuarial and direct coastal discharges of the red list substances; and what are their dates, disaggregating the data to provide input figures of each substance to the North sea and other coastal waters of England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Yeo: The latest available information is contained in "Controlling the Inputs of Persistent Chemicals to Marine Waters from Land-Based Sources", a paper by the chief scientist of the National Rivers Authority given to the British Association for the Advancement of Science at its Southampton meeting in August 1992. A copy of this is in the Library of the House. Discharges of red list substances in Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Northern Ireland respectively.

Forestry

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government will publish their response to the Environment Select Committee's first report of the current Session on "Foresty and the Environment"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: The Government are today publishing their response to the Environment Select Committee's report on "Forestry and the Environment". We welcome the Committee's report as a valuable contribution to the debate on this important topic.

The Government welcome the Committee's recognition of the important role of forestry in meeting a wide range of environmental, economic and social objectives. The Government also welcome the Committee's support for the continued expansion of forestry cover.

In taking forward the relevant policies, the aim of the Government is to ensure that encouragement of increased woodland cover complements the goal of conserving and enhancing the environment. The statement published by the Forestry Commission on behalf of forestry Ministers in September 1991 set out the broad policy framework: the present response to the Committee's report highlights various developments which have occurred since then. These include the publication of additional environmental guidelines with which applicants for the woodland grant scheme have to comply, the publication last year of guidance to local authorities on the preparation of indicative forestry strategies to assist landowners and others drawing up new planting schemes, and provision by the Forestry Commission of a public register of grant applications to improve the public's awareness of forestry planting proposals.

In the wider policy context, the response confirms the Government's commitment to publish by the end of this year a national plan for implementing the statement of forest principles agreed last year at the Earth summit in Rio de Janiero. The Forestry Commission is co-ordinating the preparation of this plan, and will seek the views of non-governmental organisations before it is completed. The plan will set out the arrangements for implementing forestry policy, including the delivery of multiple objectives in forests throughout the United Kingdom.

The response points to the Government's current review of the effectiveness of existing incentives for forestry investment and options for the ownership and management of the Forestry Commission's woodlands with a view to possible changes which would improve the effectiveness of the delivery of the Government's forestry policy objectives.

The response announces the Government's intention to review existing consultation arrangements for planting and felling proposals; and it confirms that a review of current procedures to maintain public access where appropriate to forests and woodlands sold by the Forestry Commission as part of its disposals programme will take place later this year.

The response also announces the Forestry Commission's intention to devote a greater proportion of its resources to the community and national forest initiatives, and to undertake a study of the extent of neglected and derelict woodlands with a view to making recommendations on any additional action required.

Copies of the Government response are being laid before the House and will be available in the Library.

Displaced Persons

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of the special financial assistance to be given to local authorities in respect of displaced persons from the former Yugoslavia and unaccompanied refugee and asylum-seeking children.

Mr. Curry: Financial assistance is to be given to local authorities under two special grant schemes. Details are contained in "Special Grant Report (No. 8)" which has been laid before the House of Commons for approval. These two grant schemes will provide support to those authorities which are most affected by the influx of displaced persons from the former Yugoslavia and by the pressure on local services caused by the arrival at major ports of entry of refugee and asylum-seeking children from other parts of the world.

Local Government Staff Commission

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to issue policy guidance to the Local Government Staff Commission (England).

Mr. Baldry: I am placing in the Library a copy of the policy guidance which we are issuing to the Local Government Staff Commission (England).

The Government recognise the anxieties which many local authority staff have about their future when reorganisation of local government in the shire counties takes place over the next few years.

We are keen to ensure that the staff commission looks carefully at all the staff issues involved. The policy guidance provides a framework for the commission to consider the complex arrangements relating to staff which will need to be resolved by local authorities.

The commission will focus specifically on mechanisms for staff transfer to, and recruitment by, the new authorities, and on the scope for any prior consideration arrangements for staff whose posts are lost in reorganisation.

Over the coming months, the staff commission will be talking extensively to local governments at all levels: the local authority associations, individual local authorities directly affected—their staff and their representatives—and listening to their views and concerns.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce a de minimis threshold to exempt smaller local authorities from compulsory competitive tendering for construction-related and corporate services.

Mr. Curry: Competition provides many benefits to local authorities: better managed services, higher quality work and significant financial savings. However, the Government recognise that CCT involves additional administrative requirements, which need to be taken into account.

For this reason we introduced de-minimis thresholds for the services subject to CCT under the Local Government Planning and Land Act 1980 and the Local Government Act 1988. Where the amount of work falls below these thresholds, authorities are not obliged to seek competitive tenders—though they can do so voluntarily if they wish.

During our joint discussions on the implementation of white-collar CCT, local authority representatives have proposed that de-minimis thresholds should similarly be adopted for professional and corporate services.

I have considered these comments, and accept the principle. I have asked my officials to discuss with local authority representatives the appropriate form and amounts of the thresholds which will achieve broadly the same objectives as those thresholds already in place for manual services. I have also accepted the argument that a local authority needs a satisfactory staffing level to perform adequately the core client roles which may not be suitable for competitive tendering.

White collar CCT covers a range of different services. The deminimis thresholds adopted will need to reflect these differences. For some services, a threshold based on the total value of the service may be appropriate, for others one based on the number of staff employed, or a combination of the two, may better meet authorities' needs. I am anxious that we consider all options.

I will make further announcements on the proposed thresholds for individual services in due course.

As with the existing services, local authorities will of course be free to tender services below threshold levels voluntarily. Authorities should take every opportunity to improve services and reduce costs through market testing.

Meantime, I hope this early announcement about the decision in principle to adopt deminimis thresholds for the white collar services will be helpful to local authorities.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library copies of the written submission appeals submitted by Castle Point borough council, Harlow district council and Gloucestershire county council against his proposed cap of their budgets.

Mr. Baldry: I have today placed copies of these documents in the Library.

Executive Bodies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment to whom each executive non-departmental public body sponsored by his Department is statutorily or legally responsible; and which such bodies are subject to (a) surcharge, (b) investigation by the Parliamentary Commissioner, (c) scrutiny by the Audit Commission or National Audit Office, (d) the statutory provisions for open Government which apply to local authorities, (e) performance indicators, and (f) any provisions under the citizens charters.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 10 June 1993]: The Department of the Environment currently sponsors 29 executive non-departmental public bodies, details of which are in "Public Bodies" and the Department's 1993 annual report (Cm. 2207). The functions and responsibilities of each non-departmental public body are specified in its founding legislation. I appoint and specify the terms of service of the members of the board of each non-departmental public body and am responsible for non-departmental public bodies' use of resources and the general framework within which they are required to operate. The chief executive of most non-departmental public bodies is designated as the non-departmental public body's accounting officer and, together with the departmental accounting officer, is liable to appear before the Public Accounts Committee to account for the use of public funds.

(a) The concept of surcharge as used in the Local Government Finance Act 1982 applies only to local authorities.

(b) The non-departmental public bodies subject to investigation by the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration are:

Commission for the New Towns (excluding housing functions)
Countryside Commission
Housing Corporation
Local Government Commission
London Residuary Body
National Rivers Authority (excluding flood defence functions)
Nature Conservancy Council for England (English Nature)
Rural Development Commission
United Kingdom Eco-Labelling Board
Urban Development Corporations (excluding town and country planning functions)

(c) The Comptroller and Auditor General, as head of the National Audit Office, is the statutory external auditor of:

Audit Commission
Countryside Commission
Nature Conservancy Council for England
Joint Nature Conservation Committee
Rural Development Commission

The Comptroller and Auditor General also has a statutory right to inspect the books of the National Rivers Authority and, by agreement, those of other NDPBs. Under the provisions of the National Audit Act 1983 he may also carry out examinations into the economy, efficiency and effectiveness of NDPBs for which he is the external auditor of which receive more than half their income from public funds.

The Audit Commission is the statutory external auditor of the London Pensions Fund Authority and the London residuary body.

(d) The provisions of the Local Government (Access to Information) Act 1985 apply only to those local authorities specified in the Act.

(e) As a matter of policy, all NDPBs are required to develop and use performance indicators both for their own internal management and to inform the public about their work.

(f) All NDPBs are required to apply the principles of the citizens charter in their dealings with the public.

Essex Coast

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to make an announcement about the Essex coast protection scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: I have been asked to reply.

The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has overall policy responsibility for coast protection in England. Grant aid is available under the Coast Protection Act 1949 to maritime district councils for carrying out works to protect land from erosion or encroachment by the sea. Such works must be technically sound, economically worthwhile and environmentally acceptable to qualify for approval and grant aid. There are a number of works currently under construction or consideration by the maritime district councils in Essex.

SCOTLAND

Energy Saving Trust

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many meetings he has had with the chairman and chief executive of the Energy Saving Trust, what resources his Department has committed to the trust to date; and if he will make a statement on the progress made in achieving the aims of the trust to date in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 9 June 1993]: The prime responsibility for promoting energy efficiency rests with my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment who provides support for the Energy Saving Trust. It would be a matter for the trust to make any progress report. Meantime there has been no meeting between either the chairman or chief executive of the trust and the Secretary of State for Scotland.

HIV/AIDS and Drug Abuse

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the allocations for each health board in respect of (a) misuse in drugs services and (b) HIV/AIDS service operations in (i) 1993-94, (ii) 1992-93 and (iii) 1991-92.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 7 June 1993]: The allocation of moneys to each health board in Scotland for drugs and HIV/AIDS services is shown in the tables.

Miscarriages

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what provision he has made to help those who have suffered miscarriage;

(2) whether he will provide guidance on best practice for hospitals to help those suffering a miscarriage or recurrent miscarriage.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 14 June 1993]: Grant aid is provided towards the core costs of the Stillbirth and Neonatal Death Society (SANDS) and also to assist it to develop a self-help network providing support to bereaved parents, their families and friends.

The SANDS publication "Miscarriage, Stillbirth and Neonatal Death. Guidelines for Professionals"; the Scottish Health Service Advisory Council report "Everybody's Death Should Matter to Somebody; the Care of the Dying in Scotland" and the Department of Health publication "Welfare of Children and Young People in Hospital", all of which include good practice guidance for the care of those who have suffered a miscarriage, were issued to health boards and health and social care professionals during 1991. Guidance leaflets published by the Miscarriage Association and Support After Termination for Abnormality (SATFA) have also been recommended for use by NHS professional staff.

Counselling of bereaved parents or families is, of course, included in the curriculum for medical and nursing education.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of pregnancies end in miscarriage; and what is the ratio of miscarriages to live births in (a) Scotland as a whole and (b) each of the health board areas.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 14 June 1993]: The information for known pregnancies in 1991, the latest year for which figures are available, is as follows:

Health board of residence	All pregnancies[1]	Spontaneous abortions (miscarriage)	Per cent.	Ratio spontaneous losses: live births

Infertility

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps are taken to ensure health boards are provided with guidance on the provision of infertility treatment and counselling.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 14 June 1993]: Good practice guidance and advice on the organisation and management of all aspects of infertility treatment, including counselling, is contained in the National Medical Advisory Committee's report on infertility services in Scotland, which was published on 10 March. This report has been issued to health boards and commended to them for implementation.

Guidance to licensed centres on the provision of treatment, again covering counselling, is also contained in the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority's code of practice.

Electoral Registration Statistics

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the latest estimates of those aged 17 years and over, plus 63 per cent. of those aged 16 years, for each district council area and parliamentary constituency, together in each case with the equivalent year's electoral registration figures, also expressed as a percentage of these population estimates.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 14 June 1993]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave on 9 February, at columns 516-17.

Health Staff

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) district nurses, (b) community midwives, (c) health visitors, (d) community psychiatric nurses and (e) practice nurses were employed in the NHS in Scotland in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 7 June 1993]: The information requested is shown in the table:

Enterprise Zones

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many jobs have been (a) created and (b) lost in each of the enterprise zones on an annual basis; and how many jobs were lost in the area of each enterprise zone in each of the three years before its creation.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 8 June 1993]: Comprehensive information on job losses and redundancies is not held centrally. The information on jobs created and lost on enterprise zones is not available in the form requested. However, following is the information available on net job creation in each of the Scottish enterprise zones (and which takes account of job losses in the zone):

Enterprise zone	Date of designation	Estimated net job creation since designation
Clydebank	August 1981	3,700

Cervical Cancer

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many women aged (a) 20 to 40 years, (b) 41 to 60 years and (c) 61 years and over (i) have had cervical cancer diagnosed, (ii) have died from cervical cancer and (iii) have undergone treatment and survived, in each of the past seven years.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 8 June 1993]: The information requested is detailed in the table:

Notes:

Cancer of the cervix (ICD-9 180[1]) in Scotland: numbers of new cases registered, numbers of cases registered from hospital records[2], numbers of deaths up to 31 December 1990 and one and three year survival rates[3] by age and year treatment commenced.

[1] International Classification of Diseases Ninth Revision—Code 180.

[2] Most registrations are made on the basis of medical records or pathology reports. Selecting cases registered from hospital records excludes a small number of cases notified to the registration system only at the time of death. Most of the such cases will be of persons, usually elderly, who were not treated.

[3] The survival rates were calculated using the 'life table' method and represent the proportions of survivors at the first and third anniversary of the date treatment commenced.

Passive Smoking

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what statutory provisions govern the extent to which, or means by which, a person can sue for damages or compensation for illnesses caused by passive smoking in the workplace; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 8 June 1993]: There are no statutory provisions expressly dealing with illnesses caused by passive smoking in the workplace. However, regulation 6 of the Workplace (Health, Safety and Welfare) Regulations 1992, section 4 of the Factories Act 1961 and section 7 of the Offices, Shops and Railway Premises Act 1963 make provision for the ventilation of workplaces. Regulation 25(3) of the 1992 regulations also deals with the provision of suitable arrangements in rest rooms and rest areas to protect non-smokers from discomfort caused by tobacco smoke.

Breaches of duty under these provisions are actionable in so far as they cause damage.

TRANSPORT

Red Star Parcel Service

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the sale of the British Rail Board's Red Star Parcels business will commence.

Mr. MacGregor: The board has today invited prospective purchasers of its Red Star parcels business to apply for an information memorandum describing the business and the proposed basis for sale. The closure date for receipt of detailed proposals is 13 August 1993.

Mersey Ferries

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what requests he has received to end the royal charter which currently covers ferry services across the River Mersey.

Mr. Freeman: None.

Train Accident, York

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the cause of the train accident at York on 23 April which involved hospital treatment of injured persons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail is at present conducting an inquiry into the events which led to this accident. Until conclusions are reached, I am unable to comment on the cause, but I understand that the Health and Safety Executive's railway inspectorate is keeping closely in touch with BR on this matter. The inspectorate will consider the report of the BR inquiry in due course and take any necessary action.

M1 to M62 Link Road

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what account was taken of the desirability of reducing carbon dioxide emissions in the cost benefit analysis for the M1 to M62 link road.

Mr. Key: The reduction of carbon dioxide emissions is not a factor in the Department's cost benefit economic analysis.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has had from hon. Members, lobby groups, businesses and the general public with regard to the M1 to M62 link road.

Mr. Key: The public consultation has so far resulted in:

58 parliamentary questions
137 letters from hon. Members to Ministers
718 letters from the public to Ministers over 1,500 letters to officials
12 petitions containing over 20,000 signatures

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to seek private sector finance for the M1 to M62 link road.

Mr. Key: Although this scheme is at an early developmental stage, we would be willing to consider any approaches from the private sector about financial involvement.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received since the formal consultation process ended from local authorities with regard to the M1 to M62 link road.

Mr. Key: Representations have so far been received from Kirklees metropolitan district council and the City of Wakefield MDC since the end of the consultation period.

Railway Centre, York

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will establish a permanent working group incorporating (a) his Department, (b) British Rail, (c) York Chamber of Commerce, (d) relevant local authorities and (e) other relevant interests for the promotion and protection of the Greater York area as a railway centre.

Mr. Freeman: I would be happy to meet hon. Members and representatives of the local authorities and the York Chamber of Commerce to discuss the impact of our proposals for the railways on the York area. I will write to the hon. Member and other hon. Members concerned with proposals for such a meeting.

"Is Your Flight Affected by a Royal Flight"

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the Civil Airports Authority regarding the leaflet it has distributed to airfields entitled "Is Your Flight Affected by a Royal Flight"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: None. The leaflet advertises a free telephone service which provides aviators with up-to-date information on temporarily restricted airspace which they should avoid, for their own safety and the safety of others. Royal flights are not the only reason why a temporary restriction might be imposed, as the leaflet indicates.

Forward Look

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will designate one of his Ministers to be responsible for his Department's contribution to the Government's science and technology Forward Look.

Mr. MacGregor: Paragraph 2.37 of the recent White Paper "Realising Our Potential—A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology" describes the preparation of the Forward Look by the Office of Science and Technology, and the participation of Government Departments through the existing, well-established machinery of the official and ministerial Cabinet Committees on Science and Technology.

Near-market Research

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his Department's policy is with regard to the funding of near-market research.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to paragraphs 2.20 to 2.22 of the White Paper "Realising Our Potential—A Strategy for Science, Engineering, and Technology".

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many auxiliary coastguard (a) patrol hours and (b) training hours were worked in each coastguard district in the United Kingdom in each year since 1979; and how many are expected to be worked in the current year.

Mr. Norris: The historic information on the patrol and training hours could be given only at disproportionate cost. The estimate for the current years figures for the coastguard districts are as follows:

Mr. Norris: The information in the form required is not readily available and could be given only at a disproportionate cost. The total auxiliary coastguard pay and allowances, including training costs, for coastguard regions for financial years in actual prices are as follows:

Region	1990-91 £	1991-92 £	1992-93 £
Aberdeen	201,889	187,103	200,123

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many auxiliary coastguard (a) patrol hours and (b) training hours were worked in each coastguard region in the United Kingdom in each year since 1979; and how many are available in the current year.

Mr. Norris: The historic information on the patrol and training hours could be given only at disproportional cost. The estimate for the current years figures for the coastguard regions are shown as follows:

Mr. Freeman: The information in the form requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

British Rail (Appointments)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of Railtrack's senior appointments come from (a) BR, (b) his Department, and (c) elsewhere; and how pay levels for people in (a) and (b) have altered.

Mr. Freeman [pursuant to his reply, 30 March 1993, column 165]: Mr. Horton's appointment as chairman-designate of Railtrack was announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, on 2 February 1993, during the second reading debate of the current Railways Bill. With effect from 3 February, Mr. Horton's salary was increased from £28,640 to £120,000, in recognition of the extra work and responsibilities he was being asked to take on, in planning and implementing the creation of Railtrack, in addition to his ongoing duties as a member and vice-chairman of the BR board.

ENVIRONMENT

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department's 15th "Annual Digest of Environment Statistics" was published; how many copies were printed; at what cost; and to whom the digest is being distributed.

Mr. Yeo: The 15th annual "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics" was published on 27 May 1993. It is on sale through bookshops, priced £14.95. Her Majesty's Stationery Office has printed 1,500 copies, of which my Department has purchased 450. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses and have been sent to other Government Departments, to those who contributed data and information and to other contacts.

Council Tenants

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each local authority the number and total value of cash incentive grants made to council tenants in 1992-93.

Mr. Baldry: The table shows the number of value of cash incentive scheme grants made to local authority tenants in 1992-93 under section 129 of the Housing Act 1988.

Water Charges

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the possibility of water companies using council tax banding rates for charging purposes.

Mr. Baldry: Many customers have expressed the view that the fairest way of paying for water and sewerage services is in relation to the amount used. There is no evidence as yet that council tax banding provides a reasonable proxy for water usage.

Air Pollution, London

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the level of air pollution in London; what targets he has for reducing it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: Air quality is currently monitored automatically at four sites in London by my Department.

So far this year the air quality measured at these four sites has been "good" or "very good" on at least 96 per cent of days. On occasions particularly during hot sunny weather, photochemical smog may be produced which can lead to poor air quality.

The main source of air pollution in London is vehicle exhaust emissions. Measures to deal with such emissions include the requirement for catalytic converters on new cars from 1 January this year. This will reduce emissions from each car by at least 80 per cent. In addition, the MOT emission check introduced for cars from 1 November 1991 should secure substantial reductions in carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons. A metered smoke test was introduced in the annual test for heavy diesels on 1 September this year.

Council Tax, Harlow

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the substance of representations he received other than from Harlow district council in deciding on the limits to be imposed on the council's rates for council tax for 1993-94.

Mr. Baldry: We received representations from both of the main opposition groups on Harlow council, and from the hon. Member for Harlow (Mr. Hayes). The Conservative group suggested various options for reducing the authority's expenditure, criticised a number of policy decisions taken by the authority and considered that a budget of about £11·5 million for 1993-94 would be achievable. These representations were supported by the hon. Member for Harlow.

The Liberal Democrat group considered that the final cap should be higher than our proposed cap but lower than the authority's alternative.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which representations made on behalf of Harlow district council in relation to the probable consequences of reductions in net expenditure contemplated by his proposed council tax cap he has rejected.

Mr. Baldry: Before taking his decision on the level of the final cap for Harlow my right hon. Friend took account of all the relevant available information, including all representations, both written and oral, made by and on behalf of the authority in support of its alternative cap.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment from which hon. Members he has received representations about council tax capping for (a) Harlow and (b) Castle Point for 1993-94.

Mr. Baldry: We have received representations from the hon. Members for Harlow (Mr. Hayes) and for Castle Point (Dr. Spink) on capping for 1993-94 in relation to Harlow and Castle Point respectively.

Radon

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he has received from the National Radiological Protection Board about the number of deaths and incidence of lung cancer attributable to the presence of radon in houses; what assessment he has made of the results of the programme to tackle the radon problem; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: The National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) estimates that 2,000 cases of lung cancer per annum are attributable to the presence of radon in houses. Measurements of radon have been made in 140,000 houses and 35,000 more are being processed. The Government's programme to identify homes with radon levels above the action level is continuing, and is subject to continuous assessment.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps are taken to ensure that expenditure and revenue controls imposed on a local authority by his Department are not so substantial or at such short notice as to make the reduction unreasonably difficult to achieve.

Mr. Baldry: In recent years, as local authorities themselves requested, we have announced our provisional capping criteria well in advance of the date by which they must set their budgets.

Before proposing a cap for any authority designated for capping, my right hon. Friend takes into account all available relevant information. It is then open to an authority to challenge its proposed cap and to suggest some higher alternative. The supporting case made by the authority and all other relevant available information about its circumstances is carefully considered before a decision is taken on its final cap. That final cap must in the view of my right hon. Friend be reasonable, achievable and appropriate in all the circumstances of the authority.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the five highest year-on-year reductions in net expenditure required of a local authority to bring its budget into conformity with the controls imposed under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980, since the Act came into force.

Mr. Baldry: The Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 contains no provisions relating to the reduction of local authorities' expenditure.

Merseyside Development Corporation

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what major developments are projected within the Merseyside development corporation area for the next five years.

Mr. Baldry: Merseyside development corporation has a substantial programme of encouraging major developments throughout the designated area. MDC's policies are discussed at the ministerial corporate plan meeting and with officials at Merseyside task force throughout the year. MDC's strategy is to secure the self-sustaining regeneration of Merseyside and great emphasis is placed on attracting investment to the area. Twenty-two major developments are projected within MDC's area over the next five years. These include five developments on land not owned by the corporation but which could require MDC support.

The list is as follows:

South Liverpool
Riverside Housing Area
Herculaneum—Commercial Development
Brunswick Business Park—Further refurbishment of industrial/commercial units
East Brunswick Housing Site
South Ferry Island—Commercial/residential development

Liverpool Waterfront
Kings Dock—Leisure development

Wall Insulation

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he gave to proposing improvements to wall insulation in his Department's consultative document on building regulations (conservation of fuel and power); and what public guidance he gives on cavity wall insulation.

Mr. Baldry: The current proposals for revising part L of the Building Regulations would significantly improve wall insulation taking the fabric of the wall as a whole. In particular the proposals would no longer allow lower standards of wall insulation where double glazing is fitted.

The Department's Building Research Establishment has produced a number of publications over the years on cavity wall insulation and made contributions to publications produced by for example the British Standards Institution, and the National House-Building Council. Two of its publications are:

Report No. 143 "Thermal insulation avoiding risks"; and NHBC Good Practice Guide: "Thermal insulation and ventilation".

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to make it illegal for recycled CFCs to be used except where proof is demonstrated that none will be used to service leakages.

Mr. Yeo: No.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to establish an annual audit indicating the amount of CFCs and hydrochlorofluorocarbons purchased by United Kingdom companies.

Mr. Yeo: No, this would impose an unnecessary burden on business, given the tight controls on the supply of CFCs and the supply and use controls we will be negotiating for HCFCs.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will bring forward legislation to ban the sale of CFC and hydrochlorofluorocarbons technology and equipment.

Mr. Yeo: Production and supply of new CFCs will end in the European Community by 1 January 1995, with an 85 per cent. cut from 1986 levels by 1 January 1994.

HCFCs are necessary in the short to medium term in some applications to phase out CFCs quickly. Within the EC we will be pressing for strict controls to ensure that HCFCs are used only where other more environmentally suitable alternatives are not available.

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people will be enforcing the phase out of CFC 113 in the United Kingdom; and what information he has as to how many staff will be involved in each of the other European Community countries.

Mr. Yeo: CFC 113 is no longer produced in the United Kingdom. Enforcement of the controls on its importation is carried out by HM Customs and Excise. No officers are exclusively engaged on this work which is carried out alongside their enforcement of other prohibitions and restrictions. I have no information on staff involved in other member states.

Ozone Depletion

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to establish an information hotline to advise on emissions of ozone-depleting substances.

Mr. Yeo: None.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to ensure that all products made with or containing any ozone depleting substances are clearly marked.

Mr. Yeo: The Government strongly support the European Community eco-labelling scheme which looks at all the effects of products on the environment. There are no plans to have a separate scheme for products containing or made with ozone-depleting substances.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce a more rigorous regime of fines and penalties for the emission of ozone depleting substances.

Mr. Yeo: None. The disposal of waste ozone-depleting substances by releasing them to the atmosphere is an offence under section 33(1)(c) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. The penalties available to the courts for that offence are, on summary conviction, up to £20,000 fine or six months' imprisonment or, on conviction on indictment, an unlimited fine or up to two years' imprisonment.

Leeds Development Corporation

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, by local authority ward, the numbers of jobs created by the Leeds development corporation in each year since its creation.

Mr. Baldry: Official statistics for employees in employment are made available for local authority wards and aggregations of them by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment. The area covered by the Leeds development corporation does not coincide with ward boundaries.

Information on the numbers of jobs created within the area covered by Leeds development corporation is compiled by the development corporation. The numbers of jobs created within its development area in each year since its designation are:

Year	Number
1988-89	1,526
1989-90	2,458
1990-91	2,320
1991-92	210
1992-93	830

Science and Technology

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will designate one of his Ministers to be responsible for his Department's contribution to the Government's science and technology "Forward Look."

Mr. Yeo: Paragraph 2.37 of the recent White Paper "Realising Our Potential: A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology" describes the preparation of the Forward Look by the Office of Science and Technology, and the participation of Government Departments through the existing, well-established machinery of the official and ministerial Cabinet Committees on Science and Technology.

Natural Environment Research Council

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to draw up a concordat of co-operation between his Department and the Natural Environment Research Council.

Mr. Yeo: As the recent White Paper "Realising Our Potential: A Strategy for Science and Technology" makes clear, a new system of research councils will come into effect on 1 April 1994. The Government have proposed that each of these new research councils should work with the Government Departments with which they have a significant policy connection to draw up and publish concordats.

Near-market Research

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what his Department's policy is with regard to the funding of near-market research.

Mr. Yeo: I refer the hon. Member to paragraphs 2.20 to 2.22 of the White Paper "Realising Our Potential: A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology".

Planning Appeals

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) pursuant to his answer of 8 June, Official Report, column 197-98, concerning planning appeals, if he will name each project listed.

(2) pursuant to his answer of 8 June, Official Report, column 197-98, concerning planning appeals, if he will list the parliamentary constituencies in which the projects were located;

(3) pursuant to his answer of 8 June, Official Report, column 197-98, concerning planning appeals, how many and which of the projects went ahead; and in which parliamentary constituency each was situated.

Mr. Baldry: The following information is given for the 113 planning appeals decided by the Secretary of State between 1 April 1986 and 31 December 1992 following a local inquiry and contrary to the recommendations of the planning inspector. It is not possible to say whether the projects listed went ahead but the nature of the decision made is indicated. Aggregate data on the outcome of earlier planning appeals has been included in successive reports of the chief planning inspector (copies of which are placed in the House Library) but details of those individual projects could be provided now only at disproportionate cost.

Benomyl

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what investigations are being carried out into the impact of the use of Benomyl and related products on the environment.

Mr. Yeo: Benomyl and related fungicides are used on a wide variety of crops to prevent certain fungal diseases. They have been used for many years without any detrimental effects on the environment being observed. The pesticide will be reviewed in due course at European Community level under the new Pesticides Directive, 91/414/EEC.

Rough Sleepers

Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the outcome of the recent consultation exercise on the next phase of the Government's rough sleepers initiative; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Under the first phase of the rough sleepers initiative, from 1990-91 to 1992-93, the Government provided resources of £96 million to assist people sleeping rough in central London.

Independent research, funded by this Department, into the effectiveness of the rough sleepers initiative, shows that it has been a success. Through the initiative, several thousand people with a history of sleeping rough have been provided with accommodation. The number of people sleeping rough in central London has fallen by more than a half, from estimates of over 1,000 before the initiative began, to around 420 at a count in November 1992.

The Government have made available a further £86 million over the next three financial years, 1993-94 to 1995-96, to continue the rough sleepers initiative in central London. On 18 January 1993 I issued a discussion paper, "The Rough Sleepers Initiative: The Next Three Years". It contained a range of proposals, based on recommendations from the independent research, aiming to ensure closer targeting of resources on central London's street homeless.

Almost 100 organisations responded to the paper. There has been a broad measure of support for the main thrust of our proposals. In the light of those responses, I am today issuing a strategy document that outlines the way forward for the rough sleepers initiative over the next three financial years until 1995-96, to assist our aim to make it unnecessary for people to sleep rough in central London.

We will continue to concentrate on funding permanent accommodation in houses and flats, with outreach work and resettlement support from voluntary organisations, to allow people sleeping rough to make a successful transition to a settled life. To ensure the better targeting of resources we are concentrating help on a limited number of specialist agencies with referral rights into RSI permanent accommodation; making referral agencies responsible for upholding the eligibility criteria; focusing some of the resources on zones, commencing with the Strand, with particular encouragement for consortia to come forward with proposals to reduce significantly the numbers sleeping rough in a specific area; and reducing the number of housing associations to develop permanent move-on accommodation under the initiative. Also, we are aiming to move towards a more contractual relationship with agencies, in the form of grants with tight, clearly-defined objectives. This, along with regular counts of the number of people sleeping rough in central London, will assist the better monitoring of the initiative.

The further £86 million made available for this initiative, and the proposals in the strategy document to target resources more closely on those in need, will ensure that people sleeping rough in central London will continue to be helped to start a new life away from the streets. I am keen that this initiative should make a further significant impact on the problem of people sleeping rough in the capital.

I have arranged for copies of the strategy document to be placed in the Libraries of this House and the other place.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Bail Hostels

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of (a) residents of bail hostels and (b) people remanded in the community for a similar range of offences have been convicted subsequently of an offence committed while they were on remand, in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Maclean: Information is not available in the form requested. RPU report 65 "Offending while on bail; a survey of recent studies" is available in the Library. However, this report does not give detail on bail hostels alone; no such study has been published.

Juvenile Offenders

Sir Anthony Durant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding current measures to deal with persistent juvenile offenders.

Mr. Maclean: Representations have been received from a wide range of agencies and individuals. Since 2 March 1993, when my right hon. and learned Friend, the Member for Rushcliffe (Mr. Clarke), made his statement at columns 139-42 in which, inter alia, he outlined the Government's proposals for a new secure training order, most representations have agreed with the Government's conclusion that the existing arrangements are unsatisfactory and have given general support to the new measures which we have proposed.

Firearms Control Board

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he now expects to make a statement as to the date that the Firearms Control Board will be set up.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No decision has yet been taken on whether to establish a new civilian firearms control board. My right hon. and learned Friend will make an announcement as soon as possible.

Drugs-related Offences

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drugs-related offences were reported in the Metropolitan police area in January-December 1992; and how many resulted in prosecutions and convictions respectively.

Mr. Maclean: Information for 1992 is not yet available. Information on drug seizures and offenders dealt with in 1992 will be published later this year in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Statistics of drugs seizures and offenders dealt with, United Kingdom, 1992" (area tables), a copy of which will be placed in the Library.

New Age Travellers

Mr. Aspinwall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to introduce measures to deal with serious types of illegal trespassing and threats to the public by new age travellers.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The proposals which were announced on 31 March to strengthen section 39 of the Public Order Act 1986 and to give the police new powers to deal with illegal rave parties will be introduced as soon as a legislative opportunity arises.

Mr. Aspinwall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constables of the forces involved on the cost of the police operation code-named Haystack over the recent bank holiday weekend to control convoys of new age travellers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Operation Haystack was the police operation mounted by Gloucestershire constabulary to deal with the activities of new age travellers in its area over the May bank holiday. I understand from the chief constable that the cost of the operation, including the deployment of officers who would have been on duty anyway, was approximately £200,000.

Police, Wales

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many policemen there are in each Welsh police authority indicating (a) the number from ethnic backgrounds, (b) who are Welsh speakers and (c) in total; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Information on numbers of officers who speak Welsh is not held centrally. The other information requested is set out in the table.

As at 28 February 1993

	Total police officers	Officers from ethnic minorities
Dyfed-Powys	961	Nil
Gwent	1,004	9
North Wales	1,366	1
South Wales	3,175	22

Paul Malone

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what costs were incurred by the West Yorkshire police in carrying out the first investigation into allegations of a possible miscarriage of justice concerning the case of Paul Malone.

Mr. Charles Wardle: This is a matter for the chief constable of the West Yorkshire police.

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what costs have been incurred to date by the Metropolitan police in carrying out the current investigation into allegations of a possible miscarriage of justice concerning the case of Paul Malone.

Mr. Charles Wardle: This is a matter for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis.

Police Retirements

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the reasons for the retirement of (a) Chief Superintendent McQuoid of the West Yorkshire police and (b) detective chief inspector Howard Jones of the Metropolitan police force.

Mr. Charles Wardle: These are matters for the individual officers. Under the terms of the Police Pension Regulations 1987 a police officer may retire with full pension rights payable immediately after 30 years pensionable service. Both officers had completed 30 years service with the police at the time of their retirements in March 1990 and May 1993 respectively.

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement detailing the policies relating to retirement of senior police officers during lengthy internal police investigations; and what consideration is given to potential retirements when appointing particular officers to inquiries.

Mr. Charles Wardle: These are matters for police authorities and chief officers in individual cases.

Crime Statistics

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences in the Metropolitan police area were committed by (a) juveniles up to the age of 16 years and (b) young people aged 17-20 years in January to December 1992; what proportion of total offences were (i) car-related, (ii) drugs-related, (iii) robbery, (iv) violent crimes and (v) other; and how many resulted in prosecutions and convictions respectively.

Mr. Maclean: Information is not collected centrally on the number of offences committed by offenders.

Table A shows the number and percentage of "known offenders" (those cautioned and found guilty) by age group in the Metropolitan police district (including City of London) for the offences listed in 1991. Table B shows the number of defendants prosecuted and convicted in the Metropolitan police district (including City of London) for the same offences by age group in 1991.

Mr. Maclean: Information on the number of offences recorded in the Metropolitan police district and the number per thousand population is contained in the following table. The percentage increase between 1963 and 1992 was 412 per cent. and between 1979 and 1992 it was 169 per cent.

Mr. Maclean: The available information on notifiable offences relates to vehicle crime which includes offences of theft of and from a vehicle and aggravated vehicle taking. In the Metropolitan police district in 1992, there were 241,437 recorded offences.

Security Firms

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1987.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The following private security firms are currently employed by the Home Office:

Airline Security Consultants Limited
Burns International Security Services Limited
Group 4 Court Escort Services Limited
Group 4 Remand Services Limited
Group 4 Total Security Limited
Grundig International Limited
Harlow Security Systems Limited
Lisburn Security Services
Maritime Aviation Security Services
Reliance Security Service Limited
SDA (1979) Limited
Securicor Security Services Limited
Securiguard Services Limited
Security Wales Limited
UK Detention Services Limited

The value of each contract is a matter of commercial and contractual confidentiality. Information about the total value of such contracts for each financial year since 1987 is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Information about the number of staff employed on each contract is also not readily available; in some cases the number varies from day to day according to operational requirements.

Strip Searching

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the amount of drugs and explosives detected for each of the past five years as a result of (a) strip searching of convicted and remand prisoners and (b) strip searching of other people.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested in part (a) of the question was collected centrally only from mid November 1990. Information prior to that date could be gathered only by a manual search at disproportionate cost. Additionally it is not possible to give the quantity of drugs found, only the number of occasions when drugs were found on a prisoner's person.

The total numbers of such incidents are as follows:

	Drug finds (incidents)
1990[1]	59
1991	269
1992	289
1993[2]	184

[1] From mid November 1990.
[2] To end May 1993.

There are no recorded incidents of explosives being found as a result of the strip searching of convicted and remand prisoners.

I regret that the information requested in part (b) of the question is not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Fire Service, Wales

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will visit (a) Queensferry fire station, Deeside and (b) Buchley fire station, Clwyd;

(2) if he will make a statement on the future of the fire service in (a) Clwyd and (b) Wales;

(3) if he will visit Clwyd county council headquarters, Mold to discuss the future of the fire service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans at present to visit Clwyd. Our proposals for the future structure of the fire service in Wales are set out in the White Paper on the future of local government in Wales (Cm. 2155), which was published on 1 March 1993, and on which we are still receiving comments.

Criminal Injuries (Compensation)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 8 June, Official Report, column 182, how many awards of between £550 and £799 were made by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board in each year since 1986-87.

Voting Rights

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to publicise the extension of voting rights in European and local elections of EC nationals resident in this country once the Maastricht treaty has been ratified prior to the deadline for inclusion on electoral registers for voting in the European elections of 20 April 1994; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what was the outcome of his most recent meeting with electoral registration officers to discuss the arrangements for the extension of voting rights to EC nationals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My officials have had an informal discussion with some electoral registration officers on the practicalities of implementing the new voting rights provided by the Maastricht treaty. We shall bring forward legislative proposals to give effect to the new voting rights once the Maastricht treaty has been ratified in all the member states. We shall take steps to publicise the new voting rights at that time.

Electoral Registers

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will issue updated guidance notes to electoral registration offices on the use of alternative sources of information for the purposes of cross-referencing the draft electoral register subsequent to the abolition of the community charge register; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Electoral registration officers use a number of different sources of information to assist them in their task of drawing up registers of electors. We regularly issue guidance for electoral registration officers but have no plans to issue advice following the replacement of the community charge.

Prisoners (Costs)

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost per week, month or year of keeping a prisoner in the various categories of prison.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Sir Nicholas Fairbairn, dated 16 June 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General, Mr. Lewis, from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the cost of keeping a prisoner in the various categories of prison.

The average weekly cost of keeping prisoners in the financial year 1991-92—the latest year for which information has been published—was as follows:

	Weekly cost
Type of establishment	£ per prisoner per week
Local prisons and adult remand centres	437
Dispersal prisons	807
Category B training prisons	438
Category C training prisons	363
Open adult prisons	316
Closed youth establishments	452
Open youth establishments	551
Female establishments	629
All operational establishments	442

Ticket Touts

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a further statement with respect to his policy on the introduction of legislation to outlaw ticket touting at sporting and entertainment events.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 14 June 1993]: The Government are committed to implementing the Taylor report's recommendation that there should be a new criminal offence of ticket touting at football matches. This is because of the implications such touting may have for public order and public safety. We intend to introduce the appropriate legislation when there is a suitable opportunity in the parliamentary timetable.

More generally we believe that, although some may find touting objectionable, it would not be appropriate for the criminal law to prohibit people from re-selling tickets which they have lawfully obtained, any more than it would be appropriate to forbid people to sell their other possessions. Such an offence would in any event be unenforceable. Neither would it be appropriate for the Government to attempt to regulate the price at which tickets may be resold. It is, however, already an offence for touts to deceive their customers as to the type of tickets they are selling, or obtain tickets by theft, fraud or intimidation. It is also open to the organisers of sporting or other entertainment events to impose contractual conditions on the sale of their tickets, forbidding resale and invalidating the tickets if they are sold on to third parties.

NORTHERN IRELAND

School Meals

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the level of public expenditure on the school meal service in each year since 1979 in cash and real terms.

Mr. Ancram: Net expenditure on school meals and milk (figures for which are not recorded separately) is as follows:

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the average price of a school meal in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in cash and real terms in each year since 1979.

Strip Searching

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the amount of drugs and explosives that have been detected for each of the past five years as a result of (a) strip searching of convicted and remand persons and (b) strip searching of other people.

Mr. Mates: Only prisoners are full-searched within the Northern Ireland prison service. Records of finds of drugs and explosives in prisons in Northern Ireland have not been maintained for the whole of the past five years or in such detail as to quantify amounts of various items detected. The following list details only those finds of drugs clearly identified as resulting from full searches. No explosives have been detected. GP Practices

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many single-handed general practitioner practices there are in Northern Ireland; and what is their average patient holding.

Mr. Ancram: At 1 May there were 85 single-handed general medical practices in Northern Ireland, with an average patient list size of 2,014.

Health Authorities and Trusts

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) health authorities and (b) trusts were in existence in Northern Ireland on 1 April; and what is his forecast of the number on 1 April 1994.

Mr. Ancram: On 1 April there were in existence in Northern Ireland four health and social services boards and six HSS trusts and I do not expect there to be any change in the number of authorities purchasing services on behalf of their resident populations by 1 April 1994. However an additional four units have already been approved for trust status and it is intended that they, together with any units which make successful applications in the current third round, will be established to come into operation on 1 April 1994 when necessary changes to the law have been made.

Innovation Support

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to improve the ease of access to innovation support programmes by small and medium-sized enterprises.

Mr. Atkins: In 1992 the Government published a regional research and development strategy for Northern Ireland "Innovation 2000". That strategy specifically recognised the need to promote research and development, collaboration and innovation in small to medium sized enterprises (SMEs). Government also established the industrial research and technology unit (IRTU) which provides single door access to an extensive range of support facilities for industry. These facilities include access to the SMART and teaching company schemes, product development programmes and EC support mechanisms for SMEs. IRTU also provides technical and scientific support services and delivers a programme of promotional initiatives designed to increase competitiveness and innovation. The recently published IRTU corporate plan emphasises the particular importance of technology transfer, awareness programmes and collaboration at local, national and international level.

Near-market Research

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his Department's policy is with regard to the funding of near-market research.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to paragraphs 2.20 to 2.22 of the White Paper "Realising Our Potential—A Survey for Science, Engineering and Technology".

Research and Development

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to improve the take up of grants and other incentives for research and development by small and medium enterprises.

Mr. Atkins: Given their importance in the region's economy, Northern Ireland's research and development strategy and the corporate plan and activities of its industrial research and technology unit are focused on increasing innovation and competitiveness in small to medium enterprises. A range of consultancy and technology transfer services are available; there is a programme of support for research and development, including the SMART awards and product development; and sustained promotional and awareness raising initiatives are undertaken. The SMART awards and teaching company scheme have been particularly successful in the region.

Science and Technology

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will designate one of his Ministers to be responsible for his Department's contribution to the Government's science and technology "Forward Look."

Mr. Atkins: Paragraph 2.37 of the recent White Paper "Realising Our Potential—A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology" describes the preparation of the Forward Look by the Office of Science and Technology and the participation of Government Departments through the existing, well-established machinery of the official and ministerial Cabinet Committees on Science and Technology.

PRIME MINISTER

THORP

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations he has had on the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of representations.

LINK Scheme

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Prime Minister what proportion of the LINK scheme budget is being transferred from the Department of Trade and Industry to the Office of the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

The Prime Minister: LINK is an interdepartmental mechanism for promoting collaborative, precompetitive research involving industry and the science base. As such there is no distinct LINK scheme budget. The Department of Trade and Industry, like other participating Departments, uses money from its overall research and development budget to support LINK programmes and projects where these provide a way of meeting its departmental objectives. The Department's financial commitment to LINK will continue to be substantial and is unaffected by the transfer of responsibility for the LINK steering group and its secretariat to the Office of Science and Technology.

Teaching Company Scheme

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Prime Minister if lead responsibility for the teaching company scheme is being transferred from the Department of Trade and Industry to the Office of the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

The Prime Minister: At present, no single Department of state or research council has lead responsibility for the teaching company scheme and no decision has been taken to change this arrangement.

EMPLOYMENT

Market Testing

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what evaluation he has made of the effect on the number of jobs on Merseyside of the introduction of market testing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None.

The information requested on the effect of the Government's market testing programme on the number of jobs on Merseyside can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

As far as the Employment Department group is concerned, the current market testing programme affects a total of about 118 staff in Merseyside county, 108 based at the Health and Safety Executive's site in Bootle, and about 10 Employment Service staff involved in the delivery of job clubs on Merseyside. There will be opportunities for both private sector companies and in-house teams to bid for the departmental work concerned. This will encourage enterprise and the economy generally and Merseyside will benefit from this as much as anywhere else.

EC Social Fund

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many (a) men and (b) women were on European social fund training courses in each of the regions of the United Kingdom at the latest available date.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Comprehensive details of the breakdown of European social fund applicants are not readily available at regional level and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Social Affairs Council

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment pursuant to his answer of 7 June, Official Report, columns 95-96, what were the voting figures for each member state recorded in the meeting of the European Community Social Affairs Council held on 1 June.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No formal votes were taken at this Council meeting.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list for each constituency (a) the latest unemployment figures, (b) the latest figures for those who have been out of work for at least one year and (c) the latest figures for those who have been out of work for at least five years; and if he will give the percentage rates for each category by travel-to-work area.

Miss Widdecombe: Information showing unadjusted claimant unemployment by duration and as a percentage of the total work force can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Industrial Injury

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the number of working hours lost as a result of industrial injury in 1992.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The figures for 1992 are not available. An estimate of absence from work due to workplace injury is available for the year 1989-90 from the special supplement of questions on accidents to the 1990 Labour Force Survey. An estimated 23·2 million days absence occurred in Great Britain in 1989-90. This figure is equivalent to about 170 million hours lost for a five day working week of 37 hours.

SCOTLAND

Health Authorities and Trusts

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) health authorities and (b) trusts were in existence in Scotland on 1 April; and what is his forecast for 1 April 1994.

Mr. Stewart: On 1 April 1993 there were 15 health boards, and 17 NHS trusts in Scotland. There are no plans to change the number of health boards but a further 23 hospitals units have applied to become NHS trusts on 1 April 1994. These applications have been released for public consultation.

GP Practices

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many single-handed general practitioner practices there are in Scotland; and what is their average patient holding.

Mr. Stewart: There were 228 unrestricted principals in single handed practices in Scotland at 1 October 1992, the latest date for which information is available centrally. Their average list size was 1,440.

Islands (Subsidies)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library the Halcrow Fox report on Government subsidies to the Scottish islands.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Once the final report on the findings and conclusions of the ferry subsidies impact study has been completed and submitted to the Scottish Office by Halcrow Fox, St. Andrews Economic Consultants and PA Cambridge Economic Consultants, my right hon. Friend will arrange to have a copy placed in the Library of the House.

Housing, Edinburgh

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish available details of Scottish Homes' major Edinburgh initiative to stimulate existing and new housing suppliers to produce new homes for the private rental market.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Scottish Homes has recently approved 143 houses for market rent in Edinburgh. Its total investment to the end of 1992-93 was around £1·3 million.

Housing Associations

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many housing association tenants in Scotland have now vacated housing association tenancies under the tenant's incentive scheme.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since April 1990 a total of 267 tenants have received a grant under the tenants incentive scheme.

Shared Equity Housing

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress Scottish Homes has made with the development of its share equity pilot; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Scottish Homes is examining a number of new ways of promoting low cost home ownership, including the possibility of shared equity arrangements. It hopes to run a pilot later this year.

Public Transport

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking on the Scottish Consumer Council's recommendations following the recent survey of the facilities for babies and children travelling on public transport.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is for the relevant transport operators to consider the Scottish Consumer Council's recommendations. The Government are, however, committed to the development of a fully accessible transport system and are concerned that account should be taken of the particular need for adequate and safe facilities for babies and children.

Housing

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what sums have been (a) spent in 1992-93 and (b) committed in 1993-94 by Scottish Homes to (i) the provision of furnished accommodation, (ii) the development and piloting of lead tenancies and (iii) the promotion of the tenant's incentive scheme.

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: The information is set out in the table:

£ million

	1992-93	1993-94[1]
Furnished accommodation[2]	0·110	0·850
Lead tenancies[3]	—	0·043
Grants paid under the tenants incentive scheme	1·336	1·500

[1] Estimated expenditure.
[2] 1992-93 expenditure covers Scottish Homes' own stock only: estimated expenditure for 1993-94 covers own stock and grants to housing associations.
[3] Covers only development costs, not funding of actual units.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of housing associations and housing co-operatives funded by Scottish Homes have agreements whereby local authorities have 50 per cent. nomination rights.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Performance standards for housing associations, issued jointly by Scottish Homes and the Scottish Federation of Housing Associations, requires associations and co-operatives to seek nomination arrangements with district councils in whose area they operate but details of individual arrangements are not held centrally.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether (a) research on housing matters and (b) professional postgraduate courses related to housing are funded from the housing or the education budget.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 June 1993]: The Scottish Office environment department funds research on housing matters; and student support for postgraduate diplomas in housing is shared between the Scottish Office environment department and the Scottish Office education department.

Criminal Justice System

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to improve the operation of the Scottish criminal justice system.

Mr. Lang: The first report of the groups which have been reviewing court programming under the chairmanship of Sheriff Principal Gordon Nicholson, QC and Sheriff Graham Cox was published on 11 June. Copies of the report, which contains proposals for improving court programming mainly within the existing legislative framework, have been placed in the House Libraries. Copies have also been sent to the various interests and comments requested by the end of September.

The Government have also been considering measures which would involve statutory change and is publishing today a report entitled "Review of Criminal Evidence and Criminal Procedure", together with a consultation paper seeking the public's views on the proposals in the report. Copies of both have also been placed in the House Libraries.

The proposals in the report aim to secure a substantial reduction in the time wasted by both civilian and police witnesses in attending court for trials which do not take place and in giving evidence which is not contested. They include pre-trial hearings to ensure cases are ready to go to trial; more active management of the pre-trial period; a new form of disclosure of the prosecution case; and the possibility of reduced sentences for those who plead guilty early. The results would include a better deal for thousands of civilian witnesses and more police time released for other duties. The consultation period will last until 30 September and I look forward to receiving views on the proposals from a wide range of interests.

The publication of this report marks the first stage of the process. Later in the year the Government intend to embark on a second round of consultations. This will look at the function and verdicts of the jury in criminal trials, the way in which appeals against conviction and sentence in the criminal courts are dealt with and any matters arising from the report of the Royal Commission on Criminal Justice which have implications for the Scottish criminal justice system. Any proposals for legislative change will be formulated in the light of responses to these two wide-ranging consultation exercises.

Shetland Oil Spill

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made by the ecological steering group he announced on 26 January in relation to the Shetland oil spill.

Sir Hector Monro: The steering group expects to make an interim report on 17 June. I shall arrange for copies to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for de minimis thresholds for white collar compulsory competitive tendering.

Mr. Stewart: Current compulsory competitive tendering activities under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 and the Local Government Act 1988 are subject to de minimis thresholds. Where the amount of work falls below these thresholds, authorities are not obliged to seek competitive tenders, though they can do so voluntarily if they wish.

The Government accept the principle that de minimis arrangements should apply to CCT activities for professional and corporate services. We also accept that a local authority needs to perform adequately the core client roles which may not be suitable for competitive tendering and that de minimis arrangements should address these issues.

It is our view that different de minimis thresholds may be appropriate for different services and that different bases for calculating these thresholds may be appropriate. For instance for some services a threshold based on the total value of the service may be appropriate, for others one based on the number of staff employed or a combination of the two may better meet authorities needs. The details of the arrangements to be applied will form part of the current discussions with local authority interests on the implementation of CCT extension. Further announcements will be made in due course.

As with the existing services, local authorities will of course be free to tender services below threshold levels voluntarily.

Prisoners

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the cost per week, month or year of keeping a prisoner in the various categories of prison.

Mr. Lang: The approximate cost per year of keeping a prisoner in the various main categories of prison in Scotland for 1992-93, calculated as total current expenditure, divided by average prisoner numbers, was as follows. For the remand category, the figure was £22,500, for the secure young offenders institution category, £23,000 and for adult secure prisoners the figure was £24,550. This compared to a figure of £31,000 for open and semi open adult prisons and £31,500 for the open and semi open young offenders institution category.

Shipping Services

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pusuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Robertson) of 26 May, Official Report, column 589, on shipping services to Scottish islands, what consideration will be given in his review to the need for public sector support for private sector investment.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 June 1993]: The Government remain committed to continuing to support essential shipping services to the Scottish islands whether these services are provided by public or private sector operators. The shipping subsidies review will consider a range of different financing and ownership options.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Robertson) of 26 May, Official Report, column 589, on shipping services to Scottish islands, whether his review will include bulk shipping services.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 June 1993]: Yes.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Robertson) of 26 May, Official Report, column 589, on shipping services to Orkney and Shetland, what plans he has to extend the principle of giving additional assistance to P & O Scottish Ferries Ltd. to enable net tariffs of users of the service to remain unchanged to services to islands provided by other operators.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 June 1993]: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Scotland, announced that he intended to make available a further £1·934 million in the current year to increase the amount of subsidy available for services provided by P&O to Orkney and Shetland. The additional assistance is to be provided to P&O Scottish Ferries Ltd. to enable it to maintain the present level of roll-on/roll-off services in respect of passengers and cars. I have no plans to increase further the level of support for shipping services in the current year.

Conservation Sites

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, by habitat category, sites which in the opinion of Scottish Natural Heritage qualify for designation as special protection areas under the EC directive on the conservation of wild birds (79/409/EEC); which of these are awaiting designation; and if he will indicate a timetable for their designation.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 8 June 1993]: The information is set out in the table. The sites have not been selected by reference to any habitat category but to their ornithological importance. The Government are working closely with Scottish Natural Heritage with a view to accelerating the rate of designation of special protection areas and to completing the designation programme as soon as possible.

HIV/AIDS and Drug Abuse

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set out the criteria used by him in allocation resources to health boards for their work in (a) HIV/AIDS and (b) drug misuse including the criteria in respect of (i) education and (ii) prevention in these areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 7 June 1993]: Allocations to assist health boards in responding to the extra burdens imposed by HIV and AIDS are being made in 1993-94 by means of service agreements with the management executive of the national health service in Scotland. The agreements take into account the number of HIV and AIDS cases in each health board area and the estimated costs of treatment and care. For prevention activity, including public education campaigns, the allocations include an amount calculated according to weighted capitation principles. HIV and AIDS allocations may also be used for relevant activities to counter drug misuse; but in addition some £2·4 million is being made available in 1993-94 specifically for drug misuse purposes. Of this amount, some £1·3 million has been allocated to four health boards in support of specific projects. The remainder has been divided among all health boards on the weighted capitation basis.

Social Housing (Transfers)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the organisations awarded grants to help those in the social housing sector to move from one area to another, the sums awarded in each case, and the nature of the work that each grant will pay for.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 June 1993]: Grant is given to HOMES—Housing Organisations Mobility and Exchange Services—which is a national organisation acting as a clearing house for public sector tenants who wish to move between one local authority area and another. It operates two schemes—a national mobility scheme under which members agree to commit 1 per cent. of their net lettings in any one year to mobility applicants, and a tenants exchange scheme which facilitates swaps between council tenants. Grant is provided by the Department of the Environment, the Scottish Office, the Welsh Office and the Department of the Environment in Northern Ireland, and the Scottish contribution in 1993-94, calculated on a formula related to the activity taking place in Scotland, will be a maximum of £121,015.

This grant will facilitate national mobility scheme moves and exchanges involving moves of tenants within, or to and from, Scotland, and will also assist towards funding of a development worker for Scotland who is to be appointed during the course of 1993-94.

Housing and Community Care

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those projects awarded a grant for 1993-94 which promote or develop effective links between housing services and community care, and the amount awarded to each.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 June 1993]: Support for projects combining housing and community care will come from a number of Government programmes in 1993-94. Grants totalling £514,000 have been awarded through the mental illness specific grant, to projects designed to increase community based mental health facilities, including special housing. In addition, £15 million of bridging finance has been made available to health boards for community care projects, some of which may well involve housing. Grants totalling £5·978 million have already been made under the urban programme for hostel and other accommodation, day care services, and home care for the elderly; and further grants may be made during 1993-94. A total of £135,000 has been made available to voluntary housing bodies for community care, including provision for the elderly.

In addition, Scottish Homes makes grants to housing associations which promote effective links between housing and community care including in particular grants made under the new revenue funding arrangements known as the special needs allowance package (SNAP) to meet the additional housing management costs involved in providing for people with special needs. It is estimated that SNAP grants in 1993-94 will amount to around £4 million.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) who are the members of the review body currently considering the further sale of assets of the Forestry Commission; and when she expects the review body to report;

(2) what consideration is being given to the further sale of assets of the Forestry Commission; and if she will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 14 June 1993]: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury (Mr. Smith) on 20 April 1993 at column 89.

In respect of current disposals, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for the Western Isles (Mr. Macdonald) on 1 April 1993 at column 392.

Prescribed Process Regulations

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 19 May, Official Report, column 218, what prosecutions have been undertaken resulting from breach of the prescribed process regulations since 31 July 1992.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 14 June 1993]: The results of a survey on the operation of local authority air pollution control in Scotland during its first year (1 April 1992 to 31 March 1993) are currently being analysed. From 54 returns so far received from the 56 district and islands councils, the survey indicates that no prosecutions were undertaken during that period.

Dounreay

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the radiological and economic consequences of the spillage of radioactive thorium at building D1203 at the nuclear power development establishment at Dounreay on 27 March.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 14 June 1993]: The spillage of radioactive thorium at building D1203 at the AEA technology plant at Dounreay on 27 March was contained entirely within the plant. It did not result in any increased radiation exposure of plant personnel and had no environmental effects.

The economic consequences of the incident are a matter for the management of AEA Technology.

EDUCATION

Special Needs

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make it his policy to continue to make provision for local education authorities to plan and review the education of all children with special needs within their area.

Mr. Forth: The Education Bill currently before Parliament would strengthen provision for all pupils with special educational needs in an area. It would put duties on the funding agency and on the local education authority to take account of the need for making suitable SEN provision where they have responsibility for planning school places in an area. It provides for further co-operative arrangements between the sectors over local SEN provision.

Responsibility for making provision for the majority of pupils with SEN rests with school governors, who will be required to formulate and report on their policies for children with SEN. Schools' performance will be systematically inspected against their policies by independent inspectors. The Bill would require the Secretary of State to issue a code of practice to which local education authorities and all maintained school must have regard in respect of pupils with SEN. It provides for local education authorities to make available SEN support services to grant-maintained and local education authority-maintained schools to assist governors.

The duties of local education authorities towards pupils who may need an assessment and a statement and their duty to review all the arrangements for pupils with SEN are reinforced in the Bill.

Teachers (Clerical Support)

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much money was spent in each of the last five years on clerical support for teachers in schools.

Mr. Forth: Information is collected centrally only for schools' expenditure on administration and clerical staff combined. For the five years up to 1991-92, the latest year for which information on actual spending is available, this expenditure was as follows:

Local education authority-maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools England

Year	Total expenditure[1] £ thousand
1987-88	196,520
1988-89	219,020
1989-90	260,678
1990-91	335,181
1991-92	[2]404,267

[1] Total expenditure on administrative and clerical staff, cash, £ thousands.
[2] Provisional.

Note:
"Administrative and clerical staff" includes such staff as school secretaries, clerks, typists, receptionists and telephonists. Details on premises related staff (caretakers, etc.) and education support staff (such as laboratory technicians) are collected separately.

London School of Economics (Fees)

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received on the plans by the London School of Economics to charge fees for university tuition; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 14 June, Official Report, column 420.

Market Testing

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list all the market tests that have taken place in his Department since November 1992 and indicate, in each case, whether the result was the maintenance of in-house provision, or whether the service was contracted out.

Mr. Boswell: The Department's market tests listed in Cmnd. 2101 for completion by 30 September 1993 are still in progress.

Science and Technology

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education whether he will designate one of his Ministers to be responsible for his Department's contribution to the Government's science and technology "Forward Look."

Mr. Boswell: Paragraph 2.37 of the recent White Paper "Realising Our Potential—A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology" describes the preparation of the "Forward Look" by the Office of Science and Technology, and the participation of Government Departments through the existing, well-established machinery of the official and ministerial Cabinet Committees on Science and Technology.

Industrial Research

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education whether the Higher Education Funding Council for England will take industrially relevant research into account in future research assessment exercises.

Mr. Boswell: Universities and colleges were free to submit evidence of the full range of their research in the assessment exercise undertaken last year by the Universities Funding Council. This included research related to the needs of industry. The White Paper "Realising our Potential: A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology" indicates that the Government will expect research relevant to industrial and other users to be taken into account in future assessment exercises.

Near-market Research

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what his Department's policy is with regard to the funding of near-market research.

Mr. Boswell: I refer the hon. Member to paragraphs 2.20 to 2.22 of the White Paper "Realising Our Potential —A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology". Funding for research through the Higher Education Funding Council for England is intended to support mainly basic and strategic research.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what has been the real increase in education expenditure on matters within the responsibility of local education authorities since 1979, in money and percentage terms; and what is (a) the level by which LEAs in total and (b) the extent to which each individual LEA currently spends beyond its education standard spending assessment SSA, according to the latest expenditure figures available, in money and percentage terms.

Mr. Forth: Total local authority expenditure on education in England has increased by £3,197 million or 17·6 per cent., in real terms between 1979-80 and 1991-92, the latest year for which data are available. This comparison does not allow for the transfer or responsibility for about £900 million—in 1992-93 prices —of expenditure on local authority higher education to the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council from 1 April 1989.

Information on LEAs' budgeted expenditure is taken from returns to the Department of Environment. The figures for English LEAs' education budgets for 1992-93, both individually and in total, together with the figures for their overall education standard spending assessments and the differences in cash and percentage terms, are set out in the table.

For several reasons, it is necessary to be cautious about drawing conclusions from the figures. Education SSAs are not spending targets as LEAs are free to determine their own spending priorities. The budget figures were provided at the beginning of the 1992-93 financial year. Outturn expenditure may well be different. LEAs may also not recognise the budget figures because their budget returns have been adjusted by the Department of Environment to make them comparable with their education SSAs.

Notes:
[1] Information on budgeted expenditure is taken from Local Authorities' returns to the Department of Environment on forms RA92/93 and RA(SG)92/93. Figures have been repriced to outturn.
[2] The education budgets for Inner London authorities have been adjusted so as to exclude expenditure funded through education grant for Inner London authorities, and make them comparable with education SSAs. Inner London education grants are paid to provide, through the support of expenditure on education, transitional help to local tax-payers in Inner London boroughs and in the City of London where the authorities inherited responsibility for the education service from the Inner London Education Authority.
[3] Figures on budgets and education SSAs have been rounded to 2 decimal places.

Further and Higher Education Funding Councils

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the names of the members of the regional committees of the further education and higher education funding councils who have already been nominated, together with the regional committees to which no appointment has yet been made and the date on which any outstanding appointment will be made; which organisations were consulted on the appointments; and what was the form and nature of any such consultation.

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. Friend announced on 14 April the appointment of the chairmen of seven of the nine regional advisory committees of the Further Education Funding Council. The chairmen are:
Greater London:—Mr. Trevor Thomas CBE
Northern:—Mr. Haydn Biddle
North West:—Mr. Peter Blount
Yorkshire and Humberside:—Mr. Terry Bramall
East Midlands:—Dr. Eric Cliffe
Eastern:—Councillor Paul White
South East:—Mr. Harry Morris CBE

The chairmen of the West Midlands and the South West regional committees will be announced shortly.

My right hon. Friend intends that there should be 12 members of each regional committee, who will be appointed in a personal capacity apart from the two members of each committee who will be representatives of the training and enterprise councils in each region. The membership will be announced as soon as possible.

Suggestions for members have been received from a variety of sources, including a number of bodies which were invited to suggest candidates from a business, local authority, special educational needs and adult learners' background, in order to supplement the names already submitted. These bodies were the CBI, the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, the Engineering Employers Federation, the local authority associations, SKILL, the National Bureau for Students with Disabilities, and the National Institute of Adult and Continuing Education.

The Higher Education Funding Council for England does not have regional committees.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what remuneration is to be paid to the chairmen and members of the regional committees of the further and higher education funding councils.

Mr. Boswell: There is no salary or fee for the chairmen and members of the Further Education Funding Council's regional committees. Travelling and subsistence allowances are paid by the Funding Council under the usual arrangements. The Higher Education Funding Council for England does not have regional committees.

Physical Education

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on maintaining physical education as an integral part of the national curriculum.

Mr. Robin Squire: The importance of physical education in our schools is not in doubt. As a foundation subject of the national curriculum physical education is compulsory for all pupils aged five to 16 in maintained schools in England and Wales.

EC Education Council

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the outcome of the Council of EC Education Ministers which met on Friday 11 June.

Mr. Boswell: The Council adopted a resolution on vocational education and training in the 1990s; the Council and the Ministers of Education meeting within the Council adopted conclusions on co-operation in higher education, agreed to extend by a year the mandate of a sub-committee of the Education Committee concerning long-term arrangements for the European Schools, exchanged views on the entry of all young people into working life and society, and discussed the Commission's guidelines for Community action in the field of education and training.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Structural Steel

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received about the dumping of structural steel in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Heseltine: Whilst I have received representations about the dumping of steel in the United Kingdom I have received no representations about dumping of structural steel from countries outside the Community.

Ceramic Industry

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what negotiations in the current general agreement on tariffs and trade round affect the ceramic industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The ceramic industry is primarily affected by the market access negotiations on reductions in customs duties. My Department was made aware of the industry's interests at an earlier stage of the negotiations, in particular as regards the very high duties on some imports into the United States, and these are being addressed by the European Commission in the negotiations.

Fuel Cell Research

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all the projects supported by his Department since 1990 involving research into fuel cell technology giving the amount of money involved in each project.

Mr. Eggar: Since 1990 the DTI has supported 16 projects on advanced fuel cells worth over £4 million in total. They are:

Composite Solid Oxide Fuel Cell (SOFC) Membrane Development	910,000
System Integration Study for SOFC Combined Heat and Power (CHP) Systems	64,000
Internal Reforming on SOFC Anodes	219,000
Evaluation of Integral Planar SOFC Concept—Phase 1	49,000
Evaluation of Fuel Cell Components	85,000
Development of Membrane Electrode Assemblies	216,000
Experimental Studies on Low Cost Solid Polymer Fuel Cells (SPFCs)	2,000,000
Development of Cathode Material for SOFCs	79,000
Development of High Temperature Bonds for SOFCs	50,000
Scale up of Components for SOFCs	70,000
SPFC Applications Study	50,000
SOFC Design Study	62,000
Initial Studies on MEAs	127,000
Fuel Cell Membrane Testing	13,000
SPFC Design Study	51,000
Implications of Design, Materials and Fabrication for SOFCs	55,000

A further 13 projects, worth about £5 million in total, are currently being considered.

In addition, the DTI has funded several consultancy studies related to fuel cells.

Export Control

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he has taken to ensure that the policy described in the British Overseas Trade Board's forward plan published on 9 June will take into account current export control regulations on sensitive technology and equipment exports.

Mr. Needham: The opportunities outlined in the British Overseas Trade Board's "Forward Plan" take full account of current export control regulations. On page 84, exporters are reminded of export controls and are encouraged to contact the DTI's Export Control Organisation to ensure that they are not breaching any current regulations. Copies of the "Forward Plan" are available in the Library of the House.

Market Testing

Ms Mowlam: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all the market tests that have taken place in his Department since November 1992 and indicate, in each case, whether the result was the maintenance of in-house provision, or whether the service was contracted out.

Mr. Eggar: In my Department's current market testing programme no market tests, involving competition between the existing in-house service providers and the private sector, have been completed as yet. However, invitations to tender are now beginning to be issued.

Export Promotion

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what role and responsibilities he envisages for the 100 business people he plans to recruit from the private sector to assist with export promotion; and if he will make a statement.

Mr Needham: I expect the export promoters recruited from business to go out and encourage companies throughout the country to take advantage of opportunities to export. With their business skills and experience, and their first-hand knowledge of specific overseas markets, the export promoters will be able to offer informed advice and assistance which will add to and complement our existing export services. I am sure they will help us to deliver our best ever service to British exporters.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many of the 100 business people he plans to recruit from the private sector to assist the DTI with export promotion have been secured; and when he expects to have completed the recruitment process.

Mr. Needham: We now have 31 export promoters on secondment from the private sector, including a few who are still in the process of joining my Department. In addition more than 20 other candidates are currently under consideration, and more offers come in every day. We have also received assurances from a number of companies that they are actively identifying high-calibre people to put forward as they become available. We intend to complete the recruitment process by the end of the year.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent initiatives he has undertaken and intends to take to assist the promotion of British exports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: In addition to policies to improve the climate for business, such as the deregulation initiative, we have taken a number of steps to improve the already excellent services the Government offers businesses wishing to export.

Under the newly created post of director general of export promotion, we have set up two new divisions concentrating solely on promotional work. They will have up to 60 extra staff to allow individual coverage of the United Kingdom's top 80 export markets. We are also recruiting 100 men and women from the private sector on secondment to bring their skills and experience to assist these divisions in their export promotion work.

Under the overseas projects board, we are establishing sector task forces chaired by senior business people to co-ordinate our efforts to secure the business that flows from major overseas projects. The Government have also made available to United Kingdom exporters more than £2 billion of additional export credit cover for key markets over the next three years, and ECGD has reduced its premium rates by an average of more than 25 per cent. over the last year.

These initiatives will build substantially on the current matrix of support available to help our exporters under the joint DTI and FCO overseas trade services operation worldwide, to ensure that ever greater numbers of United Kingdom exporters get the additional support they deserve to help them win in world markets.

Lumsden Machine Co.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what monitoring has been carried out by the insolvency service since receivers were called in to the Lumsden Machine Co., Gateshead; and whether the receiver has subcontracted work in the company back to enterprises in which the original beneficial owners of the company have an interest.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: My Department's insolvency service has no power to intervene in the day to day conduct of receiverships and does not, therefore, monitor such cases on an individual basis.

In this case, officials have spoken to the receiver's office who have confirmd that one of the company's contracts which remained incomplete at the date of the receiver's appointment required a small amount of further work involving specialised equipment. The receiver has confirmed that he sub-contracted this work to an associated company, but the sub-contract was on a commercial basis and at a proper market price and enabled the expeditious completion of the contract for the benefit of the receivership.

Coal Industry

Mr. David Porter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement regarding developments in the Government's policies relating to the coal industry since publication of the White Paper on coal.

Mr. Eggar: Subsidy. The Government indicated in the White Paper "The Prospects for Coal" that it was willing to offer financial support to both British Coal and private sector coal producers who could secure a genuinely additional market for United Kingdom underground coal for electricity generation at world-related prices where this was consistent with the relevant European Community provisions.

Evidence received by the coal review, and the separate review conducted by the Trade and Industry Select Committee, argued that there was potential for an additional market for coal for electricity generation, and that a subsidy related to the difference between world-related prices and production costs could offer the United Kingdom coal industry the chance to secure that market.

The Government have offered to enable the industry to explore this opportunity by being prepared to offer such a subsidy. It is now up to the United Kingdom coal industry to demonstrate that it can achieve additional sales.

We invite underground coal producers, and prospective coal producers who are seeking licences for closing British Coal pits, to provide us with firm evidence of the additional sales for electricity generation they believe they can secure, and the amount of subsidy they require. This should be backed by supporting information including a comparison of the proposed price with world market prices, expected production costs etc. Once we have had time to assess the information provided we shall make a further announcement on arrangements for the subsidy.

Generators' Coal Stocks

The Government have issued directions under section 34 of the Electricity Act 1989 to National Power and PowerGen, requiring them to hold stocks of coal at power stations sufficient to enable normal electricity supplies to be maintained for a period of nine months in the event of a complete interruption of supplies from British Coal. In 1992-93 the stock levels required varied from some 10 million to 20 million tonnes depending on the time of year. The stocks held by the two electricity generators at the end of May 1993 stood at approximately 31 million tonnes.

The Government are reviewing the required stocking level for 1993-94 and subsequent years with the electricity generators.

Working Practices

Coal Mines Regulation Act 1908

The White Paper "The Prospects for Coal" announced the Government's intention, subject to a consultation process, to remove the impediment to efficiency represented by the limits placed on undergound working hours by the Coal Mines Regulation Act 1908. The Department issued a consultation document inviting representations by 28 May 1993. The Department expects to make its decision known in the course of the summer.

150 Man Limit

In the White Paper "The Prospects of Coal", the Government set out their intention to legislate, as soon as opportunity allowed, to remove the restriction in section 36(2) of the Coal Industry Nationalisation Act 1946 under which British Coal is only able to license mines at which the number of persons employed to work below ground is at no time likely to exceed, or greatly to exceed, 150. The Government's present intention is that such legislation should enable this restriction to be lifted, where appropriate, in respect of licences that are in existence at the time the legislation comes into force as well as future licences.

Matters Consequent on Privatisation

The White Paper "The Prospects for Coal" reaffirmed the Government's intention to bring forward the legislation necessary to privatise the coal industry as rapidly as possible, and set out the Government's proposal to establish a new public sector body, to be known as the Coal Authority, which would be responsible for licensing all coal mining activity, including that in existing British Coal mines and all current and future private sector mining operations, but which would itself be prohibited from mining.

The Government's present intention is that licences issued by British Coal under current legislation, and the associated agreements, should be allowed to run their term, with the terms materially unchanged except by agreement. The coal authority would take over British Coal's role as licensor under these licences and its title to the land, property, coal mines and coal reserves concerned. Where British Coal has rights and obligations as mine operator in relation to licensees in respect of interaction between mines the Government's present intention is that those rights and obligations should attach to whoever is licensed by the coal authority to operate the British Coal mine concerned—which might for a time continue to be British Coal.

Refractory Industry

Mr. Ashton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what grounds he has changed his policy on the EC anti-dumping action with regard to the importing of sintered magnesite refractory materials from China; what studies he has made of the effect of his change in policy on the British refractory industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 15 June 1993]: My Department is currently consulting interested parties in the United Kingdom about a European Commission proposal for a definitive anti-dumping duty on dead-burned (sintered) magnesite from China. I shall then decide the United Kingdom's response to the proposal.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the projects undertaken by PA management consultants for his Department in the last three years.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 15 June 1993]: The consultancy contracts awarded by the DTI to PA Management Consultants over the last three years are as listed.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Civil Servants (Directorships)

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what conditions or guidelines have been set down relating to the appointment of former civil servants, on or shortly after taking early retirement, to non-executive directorships of executive agencies.

Mr. David Davis: No special conditions or guidelines have been set down concerning the appointment of retired civil servants as non-executive members of executive agency boards. The normal scheme of rules relating to payments made under the principal civil service pension scheme (PCSPS) in the event of re-employment would apply as appropriate.

Market Testing

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) if he will give details for each of the services provided externally as a result of market testing (a) the cost saving, (b) the quality of service charges and (c) the change in the number of people employed, compared with the in-house provision of the service;

(2) how many market-testing initiatives have (a) now been completed, (b) are currently under way and (c) are planned; and if he will give details of the initiatives in each category;

(3) if he will give details of the results of the market-testing exercises undertaken to date; and whether each testing exercise indicated that the service should be provided in-house or externally.

Mr. Waldegrave: Comprehensive information is not held centrally. But when the current market testing programme for the period to September 1993 is completed, I shall publish aggregated results for the civil service as a whole in line with the citizens charter principle of providing more information on Government activities.

Research Councils

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who will conduct the study he is commissioning of the detailed allocation of responsibilities between the new research councils.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have asked Sir David Phillips to conduct the study, backed by the full resources of the Office of Science and Technology. He will be working closely with the research councils, other Government Departments, and representatives of industry and the scientific community.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he is taking to ensure that more research council staff are recruited from industry.

Mr. Waldegrave: The recruitment of more senior staff from industry will be a matter in due course for individual research councils, having regard to their charter obligations and mission statements.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he is taking to encourage industrially oriented research organisations to strengthen their links with their local business communities.

Mr. Waldegrave: I and my officials are in frequent contact with members of the Association of Independent Research and Technology Organisations (AIRTO). I am impressed by their current links with local business communities. AIRTO members are fully behind the plans for a network of one stop shops being progressed by the President of the Board of Trade and are also actively engaged in the postgraduate training partnerships which have strong local links.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to appoint the Director General of Research Councils; and if the appointment will be the subject of advertisement and open competition.

Mr. Waldegrave: The post of director general of the research councils will be advertised and the appointment made in due course through open competition.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to announce the membership and remit of the Director General of Research Councils expert group.

Mr. Waldegrave: An announcement will be made at the appropriate time, following appointment of the director general.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if the posts of chairman and chief executive of the new research councils will be subject to advertisement and open competition.

Mr. Waldegrave: I shall inform Parliament in due course of the arrangements made for these appointments.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if advice tendered by the Director General of Research Councils expert group will be made public.

Mr. Waldegrave: I will discuss the best way of structuring the relationship between the director general and his expert group with the former, when he is appointed.

Science and Technology

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to announce the membership and remit of the new Council for Science and Technology.

Mr. Waldegrave: In due course.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will provide additional funds for his science and technology public awareness campaign in addition to money supplied from existing budgets.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government have made clear that they will continue to allocate public resources on the scale necessary to finance the policies in the White Paper.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster under what circumstances he expects reports of the Council for Science and Technology to be withheld from publication.

Mr. Waldegrave: Reports generated by the council will normally be made openly available. The need to respect commercially sensitive information would be one factor which might prevent this.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what criteria he uses for the commission of external advice on science and technology matters.

Mr. Waldegrave: Commissioning external advice is considered on a case-by-case basis when policy decisions on science or technology issues would benefit from an informed contribution from high-quality independent experts.

Scientists and Engineers

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what research was commissioned by his office on the future supply of and demand for scientists and engineers qualified to PhD level prior to the publication of the White Paper, "Realising our Potential".

Mr. Waldegrave: A list of the research studies which informed the White Paper on the supply of scientific manpower is provided in section G of the bibliography.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to announce the membership and remit of the new co-ordinating committee for the science and engineering research base.

Mr. Waldegrave: In due course.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the component parts of the science and engineering base as defined in his recent White Paper, "Realising our Potential", and their level of funding in each year since 1979 in cash terms and at constant prices.

Mr. Waldegrave: The science and engineering base of the United Kingdom may be considered in terms of the research and postgraduate training capacity of:

(a) Universities and colleges of higher education (HEIs),

(b) Research councils and their institutes and units,

(c) Research Council central facilities available to researchers,

(d) Internationally-based Research Council-supported facilities available to researchers

Tables 1 and 2 provide information on the basic funding provided to the separate components of the science and engineering base from the science budget and the block grants from the higher education funding councils. It has been necessary to group items (b) and (c) in the tables as disaggregated data is not consistently available over the time period requested.

Universities and research councils also receive significant funding from other sources including charities, Government Departments, industry and the EC.

Foresight Programme

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to announce the membership of the foresight programme steering group.

Mr. Waldegrave: In due course.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what will be the relationship between the panels of experts of the foresight programme and sector advisory bodies of the Department of Trade and Industry.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Office of Science and Technology and the Department of Trade and Industry will work closely to ensure that the technology foresight programme receives technological and market information from technical experts and from the industrial sectors sponsored by the Department.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if the reports of the foresight programme steering group and the panels of experts will be made public.

Mr. Waldegrave: Yes.

Postgraduate Research

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he is taking to encourage industrial and academic partnerships in the provision of post-graduate research and training.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government would like to see more research students undertaking work in industrial and commercial settings. There are already a number of initiatives promoting such industrial and academic partnerships, including CASE awards, postgraduate training partnerships and engineering doctorates, and the White Paper encourages these developments.

Public Research Establishments

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who is to undertake the Government's review of the public research establishments; what the timescale of the review will be; and if the review will be made public.

Mr. Waldegrave: The scrutiny of public sector research establishments will be undertaken over the coming months by the efficiency unit, in conjunction with Government Departments. It is normal for efficiency unit reports to be published.

Research and Development

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the total Government expenditure on research and development in each year since 1979 in cash terms and at constant prices.

Mr. Waldegrave: The table lists the expenditure (in cash and constant prices) by Government on research and development as defined in the annual review of Government funded research and development 1992. Information on expenditure on this basis is not available before 1982-83.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Royal Family

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the application of the value added tax regime to (a) members of the royal family, (b) transactions relating to private residences of the royal family and (c) transactions relating to royal palaces.

Sir John Cope: Members of the royal family, their private residences and royal palaces are subject to value added tax like private citizens and other buildings with the exception that gifts to reigning monarchs are relieved from tax on importation.

Relocation and Amalgamation

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the sections and organisations within his Department for which there are plans for relocation or amalgamation.

Mr. Nelson: There are no current plans permanently to relocate any part of the Department. The organisation of the Treasury is kept under regular review and new sections are created and existing ones amalgamated from time to time.

Monetary Policy

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes in monetary policy he plans in the light of recent discussions at the OECD; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: The Government have no such plans.

The United Kingdom's monetary policy is set to meet the Government's objective of keeping underlying inflation within the range of 1 to 4 per cent. and to bring it down to the lower part of that range by the end of the current Parliament. The level of base interest rates is consistent with sustainable growth and the Government's inflation objective.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each year since 1980-81 the level of the PSBR; what was the contribution of the sale of assets in each year; and what were the main sources of these asset proceeds.

Mr. Portillo: The information requested is set out in the table.

Sterling

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the effect of the depreciation of sterling against the ecu since September 1992 on the sterling value of European Community funding for regional and social policy initiatives; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: The main sources of funding for the Community's regional and social policies are the structural funds. Structural fund allocations are made in ecus; and the depreciation of sterling against the ecu since September 1992 is likely to result in a higher level of sterling receipts than otherwise would have been the case.

Mr. Peter Clowes

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the latest position with regard to the Government's litigation against Mr. Peter Clowes and Mrs. Pamela Clowes.

Mr. Nelson: On 8 June, the High Court granted in favour of the Government an order for damages awarded against Mr. and Mrs. Clowes to the sum of £31 million. This meets the Government's claim against them for damages in full; the Government will pursue all available assets to meet the claim by all means available.

The Government continue to pursue vigorously any claims which show the prospect of reducing the cost to the taxpayer of the ex-gratia payments scheme for Barlow Clowes investors.

HEALTH

Teenage Pregnancy

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) births and (b) abortions took place for women aged (i) under 16 years and (ii) between 16 and 19 years in each year since 1980.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table:

	16-19	46,547	216

Conception figures for 1991 and 1992 and abortion figures for 1992 are not yet available.

[1] The figures given for 1992 include 17 stillbirths of 24 to 27 weeks gestation which occurred between 1 October and 31 December. On 1 October 1992, the legal definition of a stillbirth was altered: from a baby born dead after 28 weeks of completed gestation or more, to one born dead after 24 completed weeks gestation or more.

[2] The number of conceptions to girls under 16 is greater than the number of births and abortions to girls under 16, because many girls who become pregnant at age 15 will have the birth or abortion at age 16. Further, a conception in one calendar year can lead to a birth or abortion in the next calendar year.

Consultant Psychiatrists

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of consultant psychiatrists in each region and in London; and what is the number per head of population.

Dr. Mawhinney: The regional information requested is shown in the table. In inner London there were 205 consultant psychiatrists at 30 September 1991, or 8·8 per 1,000 population. These figures do not include data for the Newham and Haringey district health authorities, for which consultant data are not available, and exclude consultants working in the special health authorities.

Notes:

(a) Figures calculated using unadjusted population figures.

(b) Since consultants are entitled to hold contracts in more than one region, an element of duplication exists in the above regional figures, ie a consultant psychiatrist can be shown in more than one region. The England figure does NOT include any such duplications.

Accident and Emergency Departments, London

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many house officers, senior house officers, registrars, senior registrars, associate specialists, staff grade and consultants are working in accident and emergency departments in London and each of the Thames regions.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is shown in the table.

Numbers of hospital staff in accident and emergency in the Inner London area and Thames regions—30 September 1991

TOTAL	166	179	190	140	112	2

Notes:

(a) An element of duplication may exist in the above figures since doctors are entitled to hold contracts in more than one region.

(b) The number of senior registrars in accident and emergency in inner London is not available—contracts held at a regional level only.

(c) The consultant data for inner London do not include Newham and Haringey district health authorities, for which contracts are held at regional level only.

(d) Thames regions figures include inner London figures.
(e) Pre-registration house officers are not contracted to work in accident and emergency departments.

Acute Psychiatric Beds

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of acute psychiatric beds, by region and in London.

Mr. Bowis: The information is shown in the table. Psychiatric beds are classified as short or long stay rather than acute or non-acute.

Sports Remedial Therapists

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances fund-holding general practitioners may refer patients for treatment to sports remedial therapists who are not registered practitioners.

Dr. Mawhinney: General practitioner fund holders are free to make referrals, within the scope of the scheme, provided they are satisfied that the practitioner to whom the referral is made is suitably qualified.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for each regional health authority, the national health service units that will not have trust status after the fourth wave of applications.

Dr. Mawhinney: The number of units not applying for trust status in the fourth wave is shown in the table. The precise number of directly managed units remaining after the fourth wave will depend on the number of fourth wave candidates approved.

Psychiatric Hospitals

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what study she has made of the results of the closure of psychiatric hospitals in the United States of America; and what plans she has to modify Government policy in the light of this study.

Mr. Bowis: The Government are aware and keep abreast of mental health developments in the United States of America and other parts of the world and takes account of relevant experience in formulating policy.

Personal Social Services

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much, in real cash terms, was available to councils in the Northern region, for spending on personal social services in 1979; what is the amount provided for 1993-94; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: The system employed for the distribution of central Government support for local authority services has changed substantially since 1979; it is not possible therefore to give comparable figures on how much was available in that year and the current year. Expenditure in 1978-79 by local authorities in the northern region, and resources available for 1993-94, including community care, are shown in the table. Increases over the 15-year period will have been subject to population and boundary changes. For the region as a whole, the increase in expenditure reflects that for England and demonstrates the Government's commitment to the development of personal social services.

Hospital Beds, Durham

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make a statement on the implementation of the patients charter waiting time guarantee in the City of Durham;

(2) how many people are currently waiting for a hospital bed in the City of Durham.

Dr. Mawhinney: Waiting time information is collected centrally by health authority rather than metropolitan area. The North Durham health authority has been extremely successful in meeting the waiting time commitments in the patients charter. None of its patients have to wait more than two years for any in-patient or day case treatment or 18 months for hip or knee replacement or a cataract operation. Latest figures for 30 September 1992 show that 89 per cent. of North Durham patients had been waiting for less than a year.

Dentistry, Durham

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many courses of dental treatment were carried out in the Durham area under the NHS in 1979; and what were the equivalent figures for the last 12-month period for which figures are available.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is shown in the table.

Courses of treatment carried out in the Durham Family Health Services Authority area under the General Dental Service during 1979 and 1992-93

Year	Under 18[1]	18 and over	Total[1]
1979	103,630	153,160	256,790
1992-93	42,476	269,315	311,791

[1] Under the new dental contract introduced on 1 October 1990, most child treatment is undertaken under capitation where no separate course of treatment is identified. These figures are therefore not comparable.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement about the availability of NHS dental treatment in the Durham area.

Dr. Mawhinney: We are advised that patients in the Durham area have had no difficulty in registering with a national health service dentist.

Lung Cancer

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the difference in percentage terms, in lung cancer in women living in Liverpool compared with the national average; what money her Department has made available for the study of the causes of Liverpool's lung cancer cases; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Statistics on the prevalence of particular forms of cancer are not calculated. The mortality rate from a malignant neoplasm of the trachea, bronchus and lung —International Classification of Diseases, ninth revision code 162—in women normally resident in Liverpool is approximately 80 per cent. greater than the rate in England as a whole. The Department has not funded any studies of the causes of lung cancer in Liverpool. Nationally, at least 80 per cent. of deaths from lung cancer are caused by smoking.

Patient Deaths

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients died while on the waiting list for cardiac surgery in each of the last two years for which figures are available.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for State—my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville)—gave to her on 14 April at column 608. The waiting list information requested is not available centrally.

Urgent Operations

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to place specific maximum waiting times on specific urgent operations; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: None at present. As part of the 1993-94 waiting time initiative, the national health service management executive is holding discussions with the medical professions about procedures and protocols for prioritising waiting list conditions. The usefulness of setting maximum waiting times for specific operations is an option which will be explored at these meetings.

Ambulances

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many ambulances were operating in each health authority in England in each year since 1983.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Traffic Casualties

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been paid to the NHS under section 158 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

NHS Staff (Holidays)

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many statutory and public holidays, in addition to bank holidays, are enjoyed by employees of the national health service.

Dr. Mawhinney: Staff employed on national health service Whitley terms and conditions of service are entitled to two additional days paid holiday each year.

GP Fund Holders

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioner fund holders in the Yorkshire region overspent their budgets in (a) 1991-92 and (b) in 1992-93.

Dr. Mawhinney: Five out of the 34 fund-holding units in Yorkshire region overspent their budgets in 1991-92. Information for 1992-93 is not yet available.

Tobacco Advertising

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 44, what was the Government's position on the Commission's directive on advertising of tobacco products.

Mr. Sackville: At the Health Council meeting on 27 May, the Government restated their position that adoption of the draft European Community directive on tobacco advertising is not necessary for the completion of the internal market.

Benomyl and Carbendazim

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what data exist within the Department as to the effects of Benomyl and Carbendazim—related products on women immediately prior to childbirth;

(2) what links have been established between the use of Benomyl and Carbendazim in fungicides and the incidence of anophthalmic and microphthalmic conditions in humans;

(3) what proposals the Government have for scientific inquiries into the use and effects of Benomyl and related products; and what inquiries have taken place so far.

Dr. Mawhinney: Data on the metabolic effects on animals of pesticides are produced from experiments using laboratory animals and evaluated by the independent and Government scientists who advise Ministers before any pesticide is approved for use. I refer the hon. Member to the reply the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State—my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville)—gave the hon. Member for Rochdale (Ms Lynne) on 8 February at columns 478-79, for an explanation of the approval process and the assessment of the data seen.

The data available to the Department do not indicate that Benomyl and Carbendazim-related products used as fungicides in the United Kingdom are likely to cause any adverse health effects to women or to their unborn children immediately before childbirth or throughout their pregnancies. Nor has the Department seen or been notified of any scientific reports that indicate that these products are causing adverse health effects on women or on children.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) on 20 May at column 259, which stated that the Department is commissioning research into the incidence of anophthalmia in Great Britain from the environmental epidemiological unit at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine. The results of this work and the research now being undertaken by Moorfields hospital will be very carefully considered and any necessary action taken.

Alcohol Problems

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether generic monitoring of the implementation of community care will include the gathering of information on services for people with alcohol problems.

Mr. Bowis: Yes.

Benlate

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has held with Dupont in the United Kingdom on the payment of the Dupont Company of compensation in the case of damage to users of Benlate.

Mr. Sackville: None. Such matters should be resolved between an individual and the relevant manufacturer.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Eastern Bloc (Training)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what resources are currently being devoted to the Chancellor of the Exchequer's financial sector scheme for extending work experience and training in the United Kingdom and other OECD countries to assist in modernising the financial services industry in ex-eastern bloc countries; and if he will list Britain's financial services industry organisations participating in the scheme and the locations of current secondees and the lengths of their approximate periods of secondment.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 14 June 1993]: The sum of £9·3 million is allocated to the scheme covering selection costs, air fares, induction training in Britain and British Council management charges. Training is not offered outside the United Kingdom and the scheme is limited to participants from the former Soviet Union and the Baltic states.

I am placing a list with the further details the hon. Member requested in the Library of the House.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Dartmoor

Ms Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the new arrangements for the management of three field monuments on Dartmoor which are in the guardianship of English Heritage.

Mr. Brooke: Yes. I am fully satisfied with the terms of the proposed agreement under which management responsibility for Grimspound, Hound Tor medieval village and Merrivale prehistoric site will be transferred to the Dartmoor National Park Authority from 1 July. These sites are the first to be transferred to local management under English Heritage's forward strategy. The park authority, with its proximity to the monuments, specialised knowledge and volunteer network, is well placed to provide the best care for these evocative sites and the best value for public money. This well illustrates the potential benefits of local management in appropriate cases.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Retirement Pensions

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what percentage of the national insurance fund has been paid out in national insurance rebates, tax reliefs and other incentives in respect of personal pensions contracted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme for 1992-93; and what is the equivalent expected percentage for the years 1993-94 and 1994-95;

(2) what was the cost of the national insurance rebates, tax reliefs and other incentives paid in respect of personal pensions contracted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme for 1992-93; and what are the equivalent expected costs for 1993-94 and 1994-95.

Mr. Hague: The information is in the table. Tax relief is not a cost to the national insurance fund and has not been included in the figures. The percentages are the estimated cost of the rebates and incentives as a percentage of the estimated gross contribution income to the national insurance fund.

Personal Pensions

Year	Cost (£ billions)	Per cent
1992-93	2·50	7
1993-94	2·65	7
1994-95	1·80	5

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the average annual earnings of those who have contracted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme (a) via an occupational pension scheme and (b) in favour of a personal pension plan.

Mr. Hague: Information on those contracting out of the state earnings related scheme via an occupational pension scheme is not immediately available. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as it is. Such information as is available is that the average earnings of members of occupational pension schemes (including those which are not contracted out of the state earnings related scheme) in calendar year 1991, were £16,200 per annum. Average earnings of personal pension optants in the tax year 1990-91 are estimated to be £10,300 per annum.

Post Offices

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his oral statement of 7 June, Official Report, column 23, how many of the post offices referred to receive remuneration for work carried out in addition to the basic flat-rate payment.

Mr. Hague: A number of the approximately 2,700 sub-postmasters referred to may additionally receive some small one-off payments for minor items of business which occur only intermittently and on a small scale, such as payment for the issue of concessionary bus passes. The numbers receiving such payments fluctuate considerably, but because of their intermittent nature, no central record is kept of the total number of sub-postmasters who receive them at any given time.

Alcohol Residential Centres

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security to whom housing benefit payments should be made for alcohol residential centre clients.

Mr. Burt: The same provisions governing direct payment of housing benefit apply to alcohol residential centre clients as to all other tenants. Usually the benefit is paid to tenants, although it must be paid direct to landlords if a tenant has eight weeks or more rent arrears or direct payments of income support are being made. Local authorities may also pay housing benefit direct with the claimant's consent, or if it is in the claimant's best interests to do so, or if a claimant has left a property owing rent.

Disability Benefits

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) new disability living allowance claims and (b) top-up claims have been refused, broken down by the reasons for refusal, in each month since February 1992 at each disability benefit centre and for the country as a whole.

Mr. Scott: The administration of disability living allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard the chief executive of the benefits agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 15 June 1993.

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to the points raised in your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how many (a) new disability living allowance claims and (b) top-up claims have been refused, broken down by the reasons for refusal, in each month since February 1992 at each disability benefit centre and for the country as a whole.

Firstly, it may be helpful for me to say at this stage that new Disability Living Allowance (DLA) claims are dealt with by the regional Disability Benefit Centres (DBCs) and top-up claims are dealt with by the Claims Conversion Unit (CCU).

Annex A shows a breakdown of the number of DLA claims that have been refused, and the reasons for refusal by DBC since February 1992.

A breakdown of refusals on top-up claims by DBC is not available. However, Annex B details the number of top-up claims that have been refused by the CCU, and the reasons for refusal.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) whether the Benefits Agency has now completed its report on the differences in adjudication standards between disability benefit centres;

(2) what steps the Benefits Agency has taken to ensure consistency in adjudication decisions on disability living allowance between disability benefits centres.

Mr. Scott: The administration of disability living allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Sir John Hannam, dated 15 June 1993.

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to the points raised in your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking (i) whether the Benefits Agency has now completed its report on the differences in adjudication standards between Disability Benefits Centres and (ii) what steps the Benefits Agency has taken to ensure consistency in adjudication decisions on Disability Living Allowance between Disability Benefits Centres.

A study concerning standards of adjudication in Disability Benefits Centres is still in progress and findings are not expected to become available until late August 1993. Thereafter, recommendations will be carefully analysed before any changes are implemented.

The aim of the study is to assess standards of adjudication, including variations, across the Disability Benefits Centres and the main Disability Living Allowance Unit(s) at Blackpool. It includes a physical examination of casework, research among staff and an analysis of data arising from Review and Appeals activities.

I hope that you find this reply helpful. A copy of this reply will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

National Insurance

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has as to how many people below the basic rate income tax threshold will pay more national insurance contributions during the 1994-95 financial year as a result of the changes announced in the Budget.

Mr. Hague [pursuant to his reply, 7 June 1993, column 140]: The following information was incorrect:

"It is estimated that in 1994-95 about ¼ million people whose earnings fall below the basic rate income tax threshold will pay slightly more in national insurance contributions."

The correct information is as follows:

It is estimated that in 1994-95 about 2¼ million people whose earnings fall below the threshold for basic rate income tax of 25 per cent. will pay slightly more in national insurance contributions.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Human Rights

16. Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support proposals for an international human rights tribunal.

Mr. Hurd: The world conference on human rights will review the range of international mechanisms for the protection of human rights. We understand that there may be a proposal for an international human rights tribunal. We will give careful consideration to this, and to all other matters before the conference.

Israel

17. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what indications he has received from Arab countries about their willingness to call off the Arab trade boycott of Israel.

Mr. Hurd: The response by Arab countries to numerous approaches on this subject—including an EC demarche—has been uneven. There has been no collective formal response. But there is evidence that some relaxations have been made and the Kuwait Government have this month signalled their intention to discontinue the application of the boycott to third countries. We shall continue to press Arab Governments on this.

25. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to meet the Israeli Foreign Minister to discuss matters pertaining to the peace process.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no immediate plans to meet the Israeli Foreign Minister.

Hong Kong

18. Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet the Governor of Hong Kong to discuss relations with China.

Mr. Goodlad: We keep in the closest touch with the governor of Hong Kong about our discussions with the Chinese authorities on Hong Kong. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and I will next meet the governor when he comes to London on 30 of June for one of his regular visits for consultations. As is customary, the governor will also have discussions with my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister as well as other Ministers and senior officials.

South Africa

19. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made towards the holding of multiracial elections in South Africa.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Negotiating Council has agreed on an election date of 27 April 1994, subject to ratification by the larger negotiating forum on 25 June.

29. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with parties involved in constitutional negotiations in South Africa.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs held useful talks with Nelson Mandela and Chief Buthelezi during their recent visits to London.

Pakistan

20. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received from the Pakistani authorities concerning the progress of the police investigations into the murder of Mohammed Afzal in Juarah village, Pakistan, on 4 October 1992.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The high commission in Islamabad has still not had a full report from the Pakistan authorities about the murder of Mohammed Afzal. It has, however, been told by the Pakistan police that the men accused of the murder have been declared "permanent absconders". The high commission will stay in close touch with the Pakistan authorities.

Angola

21. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government have taken to put pressure on UNITA to abide by the terms of the Bicesse accord and the Angolan election results.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have actively supported United Nations efforts to secure a dialogue between UNITA and the Angolan Government leading to a ceasefire and full implementation of the Bicesse peace accords.

Mongolia

22. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new proposals he has to improve relationships between the United Kingdom and Mongolia.

Mr. Goodlad: Relations with Mongolia are very good. January marked the 30th anniversary of the establishment of our diplomatic relations. Last year saw the introduction of a bilateral aid programme for Mongolia of £2·7 million over three years. This is aimed at helping the Mongolians with their economic reform programme, which is being carried out in the face of considerable hardship.

A bilateral cultural exchange programme, renewed on 11 June, will facilitate cultural and academic contacts and exchanges, English language teaching and joint research projects. Her Royal Highness the Princess Royal, accompanied by Commander Timothy Laurence, RN, will visit Mongolia from 11 to 14 July. A bilateral round table meeting is scheduled to take place in Britain this October.

Cambodia

23. Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the political situation in Cambodia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: We welcome the successful holding of elections in Cambodia last month and congratulate UNTAC on its preparation and conduct. The result is a clear sign that the Cambodian people want to decide their own future. We are encouraging the successful parties to work together constructively to facilitate the emergence of a new Government after a constitution has been adopted.

34. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Cambodia following the elections.

Mr. Goodlad: The high turnout of the Cambodian electorate (89 per cent.) in the elections to the Constituent Assembly last month is a clear sign that the Cambodian people want to decide their own future. We are committed to recognising the results when they are certified as free and fair. Under the terms of the Paris agreements, the newly elected Constituent Assembly will draft and approve a new constitution before transforming itself into a legislative assembly which will form a new Cambodian Government. This is due to take place within three months. Meanwhile we are encouraging the successful parties to work together constructively to facilitate the emergence of a new Government.

Bosnia

24. Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his proposals to secure an end to the conflict in Bosnia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Washington agreement of 22 May set out the immediate steps to be taken by the international community to effectively tackle the conflict in Bosnia. It is intended to help establish conditions for a lasting and equitable settlement, in accordance with the principles of the Vance-Owen peace plan, to the appalling conflict in Bosnia. Some of these steps have already been achieved, for example the adoption of United Nations Security Council resolutions on safe areas in Bosnia and the creation of a war crimes tribunal. Action continues within the United Nations and NATO to follow up other elements of the Washington agreement. Lord Owen and Mr. Stoltenberg are continuing their negotiations with great determination.

32. Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is proposing to take to restore the territorial integrity of Bosnia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: United Nations Security Council resolution No. 836 reaffirms the sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the responsibility of the Security Council in this regard. The principles of the Vance-Owen peace plan for Bosnia provide the framework for securing this.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs by what means, following the Washington agreement, he envisages the implementation of the Vance-Owen plan for Bosnia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The principles contained within the Vance-Owen peace plan provide the framework for securing a political settlement to the conflict in Bosnia. The Washington agreement of 22 May established a series of immediate steps to alleviate the suffering on the ground while work continues to find a lasting and fair political settlement.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to President Izetbegovic in respect of Bosnian Muslim breaches in the ceasefires and the destruction of Croat villages by his forces in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Mr. Goodlad [holding answer 14 June 1993]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met Bosnian President Izetbegovic on 14 June. One of the issues that they discussed was the recent Bosnian-Muslim offensive in central Bosnia, particularly around Travnik. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State underlined our concern at reports of Muslim brutality and ethnic cleansing of Bosnian Croats, and urged President Izetbegovic to order an end to this offensive and begin implementation of the Vance-Owen peace plan.

Global Security

26. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to visit the United Nations to discuss global security.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs expects to visit the United Nations to attend the United Nations General Assembly general debate in September. No dates have yet been fixed.

Exports Promotion

28. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will detail measures his Department takes to promote United Kingdom exports overseas.

Mr. Goodlad: It is a key objective of the Department to promote United Kingdom exports. Seventeen per cent. of frontline diplomatic staff and 48 per cent. of senior locally engaged staff working in 196 missions overseas are employed full-time on this task. In total, nearly a quarter of frontline diplomatic staff time (calculated on the basis of regular returns from posts) is expended on commercial work.

Middle East

30. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made towards peace in the middle east.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Another round of bilateral negotiations between the parties is beginning in Washington this week. There were encouraging signs at the end of the last round in May that the Israelis and Palestinians were beginning to address in detail issues of substance. We continue to urge on all parties the urgent need for further progress.

Social Chapter

31. Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his EC counterparts about the social chapter of the Maastricht treaty.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The social chapter has not featured in recent discussions with other member states.

Iraq

33. Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he intends to review the policy of imposing sanctions on Iraq.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Security Council reviewed the sanctions in force against Iraq on 24 May. The Council concluded that Iraq had not complied with United Nations resolutions, and that there was therefore no justification for change.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Austin Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the impact of sanctions against Serbia on other countries of the former Yugoslavia and neighbouring countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: United Nations sanctions against Serbia and Montenegro place a significant economic burden on neighbouring states. The recent visits of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to Bulgaria, Macedonia and Romania enabled him to discuss this issue with the Governments of those most acutely affected. The international financial institutions are best placed to assess the needs of those affected and provide appropriate support to help these countries develop a suitable policy response.

Iran

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response Her Majesty's Government have made to the proposal put to foreign Ministers of the European Community member states by the United States Secretary of State on 9 June relating to trade and export restrictions on Iran.

Mr. Goodlad: We shall be considering carefully the issues discussed by the EC and United States foreign Ministers with our EC partners. We shall continue to support international efforts to promote a harmonised approach to effective controls on the export of dual use goods to countries of particular concern, including Iran.

Kurdistan

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Turkish Government to cease all military operations in Kurdistan and accept the Kurdish PKK's unilateral ceasefire, and work towards a political solution.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the then Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, the hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones), to the hon. Member for Halifax (Mrs. Mahon) on 28 April at column 440.

We regret the PKK's decision to end the ceasefire, and condemn the recent upsurge of violence in south-east Turkey. We frequently make clear to the Turkish Government the importance we attach to combating terrorism within a legal framework and with full respect for human rights.

Captain John Bashforth

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Indonesian authorities regarding the murder by pirates of Captain John Bashforth; and with what result.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs raised the death of Captain Bashforth with the Indonesian authorities when he visited Indonesia at the beginning of April. Also Her Majesty's Embassy in Jakarta has been in frequent touch with the Indonesian authorities. Since April they have obtained further evidence from the Indonesian authorities which we have passed to the coroner in Buxted for the inquest on 21 June.

Kashmir

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the human rights committee of the European Parliament on the issue of Kashmir; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: None. However, together with our European Community partners, we have emphasised to the Indian Government the importance of respecting human rights in Kashmir.

Eritrea

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy towards the new independent state of Eritrea.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We recognised Eritrea as an independent sovereign state on 14 May. We have had a warm relationship with the former provisional Government, now the Government of Eritrea, and have proposed entering into diplomatic relations. We have committed £12 million of humanitarian aid since January 1992 and also run a modest bilateral aid programme.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 82-83, what was the cost to his Department of each of the visits by the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh; and what were the sums involved in categories of expenditure within the cost of each visit.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 14 June 1993]: The costs to date to the Department of the overseas visits undertaken by the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh during the financial year 1992-93 at the request of Government Departments are as follows:

DEFENCE

Defamation Cases

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by number and title the actions for defamation brought by or against serving members of Her Majesty's armed forces in each year since 1989 in which the Department has provided all or a contribution to one or both sides' legal costs and damages; and at what total cost in each case.

Mr. Hanley: Since 1989 there has been only one such case. It involved the legal costs of a junior NCO who was the subject of an action for defamation arising from a report he made to the military police about alleged assaults on him by another soldier. The full costs of the case are not yet known.

Hercules

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the route flown at low level by Hercules XV193 on 27 May was a standard route established for use by RAF Hercules.

Mr. Hanley: The Hercules fleet do not fly fixed or standard low-flying routes.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) by what means are potential fixed low-flying routes for training of RAF Hercules aircrew surveyed prior to adoption;

(2) how many fixed low-flying routes in the United Kingdom are currently in use by the RAF Hercules fleet; and what is the established periodicity for reviewing and changing any such fixed low-flying routes.

Mr. Hanley: The RAF Hercules do not fly fixed low-flying routes.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many bird strikes have occurred to RAF Hercules aircraft in each year since 1980; and how many were in each of the damage categories 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows:

Birdstrikes to RAF Hercules 1980 to 1992

Category	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988	1989	1990	1991	1992

Note: Breakdown of damage in categories 1 and 2 is not available.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the minimum authorised altitude for the low-level training sortie undertaken by Hercules XV193 on 27 May.

Mr. Hanley: It was 250 ft.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the minimum flying experience required from an RAF Hercules captain to fly the aircraft at (a) 500 ft minimum separation distance, (b) 250 ft minimum separation distance and (c) 100 ft minimum separation distance.

Mr. Hanley: After at least six months service on operational Hercules squadrons, crews are trained, in preparation for specific operational commitments, to fly aircraft at 500 ft minimum separation distance (MSD); the training requires four sorties, totalling 12 flying hours. Subsequently, after six months service on tactical support squadrons, crews are selected for training to fly at 250 ft MSD; the training comprises 20 sorties, totalling 41 flying hours. Approximately six months after qualifying to fly at 250 ft MSD crews undergo a further course of five sorties lasting 12 hours in total. Of these crews, a very small number of specifically selected crews are permitted to fly below 250 ft MSD.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the areas in which RAF Hercules are authorised to fly at less than 250 ft.

Mr. Hanley: Fixed-wing flying below 250 ft in the United Kingdom low flying system is restricted to three sparsely populated areas in northern Scotland, central Wales and the Borders which are designated as tactical training areas.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what further precautionary measures have been adopted in the operation of the RAF Hercules fleet since 27 May.

Mr. Hanley: There is no reason to doubt the validity and safety of current operating procedures and thus no further precautionary measures have been adopted.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the maximum bank angle permitted for turns by RAF Hercules flying at (a) 500 ft minimum separation distance, (b) 250 ft minimum separation distance and (c) 100 ft minimum separation distance.

Mr. Hanley: The maximum permitted bank angle for RAF Hercules flying is 60 deg subject to the aircraft maintaining its authorised minimum separation distance.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many RAF Hercules sorties at less than 250 ft were authorised in each year since 1980.

Mr. Hanley: The numbers of movements authorised into the tactical training areas for flying below 250 ft by Hercules aircraft are as follows:

	Number
1980	1
1981	2
1982	10
1983	17
1984	28
1985	0
1986	15
1987	13
1988	7
1989	9
1990	28
1991	16
1992	9
[1]1993	4

[1] To 30 April.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the route flown at low level by Hercules XV193 on 27 May was also flown by the other aircraft in the formation.

Mr. Hanley: On 27 May Hercules XV193 flew the first part of the low-level element of its route in formation with other aircraft. As planned, the aircraft then broke formation to fly different routes for the final stage of the sortie.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the design bird strike impact strength of the windscreen of the RAF Hercules; and what measures have been introduced to increase the protection of Hercules aircrew against bird strikes since the aircraft's entry in service.

Mr. Hanley: Information on the design bird strike impact strength is not available within my Department. In 26 years of service in the RAF no Hercules crew member or passenger has been injured a a result of bird strikes. As a result no measures to increase the crew's protection have been introduced since the aircraft entered service.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) sorties and (b) flying hours are devoted to low-level flying training in the training syllabus of No. 242 Operational Conversion Unit and in the continuation training programmes of operational Hercules squadrons.

Mr. Hanley: No. 242 Operational Conversion Unit is now 57 (Reserve) Squadron. After six months' service on tactical support squadrons, crews are selected for a five-week low-level flying course comprising 20 sorties and totalling 41 flying hours. Approximately six months after initial qualification crews undergo a further five-day low-flying course comprising five sorties and 12 flying hours.

Explosive devices

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many bombs have been removed or rendered harmless on the coast of England and Wales by the Royal Navy in 1992.

Horse Guards Parade

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of the Life Guards and Blues and Royals attending the Horse Guards parade ceremony on Thursday 27 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Guidelines covering the presentation of new standards, guidons and colours to regiments of the Army are contained in The Queens Regulations for the Army 1975. It is customary that the Sovereign personally presents new standards or colours to the regiments of the Household Divisions in the case of the Household Cavalry on Horse Guards Parade. The men, horses and armoured cars participating in the ceremony on 27 May did so at no extra cost to the defence budget. The cost of transportation of troops to the ceremony was approximately £3,000.

Shells (Uranium)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at which sites his Department has tested armour-piercing shells tipped with depleted uranium.

Mr. Aitken: Since the programme was first authorised and announced to the House, Official Report, 8 March 1979, cols. 777-78 and 25 January 1980, col 395, all United Kingdom depleted uranium firings, with the exception of a few small calibre rounds trialled at West Freugh in the late 1980s, have taken place at the Eskmeals and Kirkcudbright ranges. My Department has also test-fired DU armour-piercing shells at White Sands, New Mexico and Aberdeen proving ground, Maryland in the United States of America and at Gramat in France.

Science and Technology

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will designate one of his Ministers to be responsible for his Department's contribution to the Government's science and technology "Forward Look."

Mr. Aitken: Paragraph 2.37 of the White Paper "Realising Our Potential—A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology" describes the preparation of the "Forward Look" by the Office of Science and Technology, and the participation of Government Departments through the existing, well-established machinery of the official and ministerial Cabinet Committees on Science and Technology.

Near-Market Research

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's policy is with regard to the funding of near-market research.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to paragraphs 2.20 to 2.22 of the White Paper "Realising Our Potential—A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology".

Belize

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration was given by his Ministry prior to the decision to withdraw British forces from Belize being taken, to basing Gurkha regiments being transferred from Hong Kong in Belize rather than the United Kingdom.

Mr. Hanley: We have no current plans to increase the number of Gurkha battalions stationed in the United Kingdom as a result of the rundown of the Hong Kong garrison. A Gurkha infantry battalion from Hong Kong will, however, be deployed to Belize on a six-month tour in October.

German Units (Repatriation)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those units due to be repatriated from Germany as a result of "Options for Change" that have not yet been found facilities in which to be based in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Hanley: Accommodation, in one case albeit only temporary, has been identified for all the units redeploying to the United Kingdom from Germany. In some cases the exact nature of unit and location has not yet been decided.

Lumsden Road Estate, Portsmouth

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the sale price of the Lumsden Road estate, Portsmouth, to European Developments; and what was the net total value of the bid submitted by Swaything Housing Society and Portsmouth Housing Association taking into account the value of nominal rights given back to the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Hanley: This information is commercial in confidence.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the reasons for his decision to dispose of the Lumsden Road site in Portsmouth to European Developments; and what precautions he has taken to ensure that the land is made safe for future use.

Mr. Hanley: The marketing of the Lumsden Road site involved the full disclosure of the site's history to all potential purchasers. The decision was taken to sell to European Developments because it submitted the highest compliant bid. It is now a matter for European Developments and Portsmouth city council to ensure that the site is suitable for the purpose for which it will be used.

"Options for Change"

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the United Kingdom Army, Royal Navy and Royal Air Force bases that (a) have been made redundant and (b) are due to be made redundant as a result of "Options and Change".

Mr. Hanley: A list of the defence estate which has become, or could become, redundant as a consequence of the "Options for Change" is set out.

Alternative defence uses are sought in all cases where an activity ends at a defence establishment and this search continues until the site is disposed of. It does not necessarily follow, therefore, that all the sites listed will be disposed of.

Land Sales

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances, when disposing of publicly owned land, he will not accept the highest bid.

Mr. Hanley: When disposing of surplus property on the open market it is the Department's policy to accept the highest bid, provided that we are satisfied that the bidder is capable of honouring the conditions of the sale.

Directorate General of Defence Accounts

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Directorate General of Defence Accounts for 1993-94.

Mr. Hanley: Under the terms of the agency's framework document, a range of revised targets for 1993-94 has been set which will ensure continuing improvements in the quality of service that the agency provides to its customers, as well as reflecting the continuing need to secure economies in defence spending.

The targets for the period 1993-94 are:

a. to complete the Agency's planned workload, as agreed with our customers, within the funds allocated for this purpose and to cope with any unforeseen requirements in the year;

b. to maintain the Agency's quality of service as defined in the Service Level Agreements and secondary targets;

c. to seek further efficiencies in the use of resources to the advantage of the Agency and its customers, thereby making efficiency savings of at least 1·5 per cent. of the total cash budget (excluding those savings arising directly from centrally managed efficiency measures);

d. to compete for payroll work offered through the Government's Market Testing programme and to win all that is competed for;

e. to carry out a study into the incidence of cost in the Agency so that fixed costs and variable costs are clearly and separately identifiable, with the further aim of reducing fixed costs.

WALES

House Prices

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish figures showing (a) average house prices paid by all buyers, (b) percentage changes in cash prices in prices relative to the preceding year and (c) percentage changes in prices relative to the preceding year after allowing for the effects of retail price inflation in Wales in each year from 1979.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The amount that each health authority spent on headquarters administration in 1991-92 together with its percentage share of total revenue expenditure was as follows:

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There were nine health authorities, eight family health service authorities and 14 NHS trusts in Wales on 1 April 1993. The creation of further trusts will depend on decisions due to be made later this year, following public consultation on formal applications submitted for NHS trust status from April 1994.

Unemployment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he proposes to tackle unemployment in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Redwood: It is the job of Government to create the right conditions in which business might thrive, and a wide range of measures designed to create a self-sustaining market economy and thereby help unemployed people find work is already in place. Our strategy for growth is bearing fruit with four consecutive monthly falls in unemployment.

Mr. Richards To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many children have been (a) adopted and (b) fostered in each year and in each county in Wales since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The total number of adoption orders made each year in England and Wales since 1979 is published by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys in its series FM2 "Marriage and Divorce Statistics" (HMSO). A copy is in the Library of the House.

The following tables show the numbers of children entering fostering arrangements by county in Wales since 1979.

Cardiac Centre

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to announce the establishment of a second cardiac centre in south Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The option appraisal dealing with cardiac services in south Wales has been completed and an announcement will be made very shortly.

Timber

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much board feet of timber has been harvested from Welsh forests in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The volumes of timber harvested from Welsh forests since 1979 are shown in the following table, in thousands of cubic metres. The quantity of sawn wood produced from this timber would depend on the end-use and the efficiency of the conversion process, but each cubic metre is likely to produce about 220 board feet of sawnwood.

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales died from cancer of the spine in each year since 1987.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The number of deaths to residents of Wales where the underlying cause was cancer of the spine is not available separately. However, the number of deaths where the underlying cause was cancer of the vertebral column (main part of the spine), excluding sacrum and coccyx and the number of deaths where the underlying cause was cancer of the pelvis and the lower part of the spine (pelvic bones, sacrum and coccyx) are given in the following table:

Investment

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what work is currently undertaken by his Department to attract increased levels of investment into Wales by venture capital houses.

Mr. Redwood: Every encouragement is given to venture capital houses to increase their investment in Wales. Through the financial services initiative and other means, my Department and the WDA have regular contact with providers of finance and their representative bodies, and all possible support is given for them to take advantage of the excellent investment opportunities available in Wales.

Corporate Jets

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions his Department has had with potential bidders for Corporate Jets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: All such matters are commercial in confidence.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit the Corporate Jets factory, Broughton, Clwyd.

Mr. Redwood: I have no current plans to do so.

Central Heating Grants

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from Maplewood avenue in Alyn and Deeside about the introduction of grants for the installation of central heating.

Mr. Redwood: None.

South Llanelli

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what percentage of the total (a) receipts arising out of and (b) expenditure incurred on the development of south Llanelli has fallen to the Welsh Development Agency;

(2) what has been the total (a) expenditure incurred and (b) receipts by the Welsh Development Agency in respect of its joint venture with Llanelli borough council for the development of south Llanelli.

Mr. Redwood: A provisional figure for WDA expenditure in respect of the re-development of south Llanelli up to the beginning of May 1993 is £14·1 million. Income due to the WDA for the same period is around £188,000. I am not in a position to advise on the borough council's income and expenditure as it is a matter for the local authority.

Enterprise in Wales

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to designate 1994 as a year for enhancing enterprise in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: My policy is that every year is a year for enhancing enterprise in Wales.

In the last 10 years, the number of self-employed people in Wales has risen by over a third.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to develop a Welsh enterprise foundation; and what efforts are currently undertaken by his Department to encourage an enterprise culture within Wales.

Mr. Redwood: My Department works closely with a range of bodies including the WDA, DBRW TECs, local enterprise agencies, colleges and schools to promote enterprise in Wales. I am considering the Institute of Welsh Affairs' report "Wales 2010" including its proposal that the institute should act as the catalyst in establishing a Welsh enterprise foundation.

Cancer

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cancer cases diagnosed among people living in Gwynedd were analysed by the various indentifiable categories of cancers for the latest available period; and if he will publish corresponding figures for five, 10, 15 and 20 years previously.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The latest available data on cancer registrations in Wales are for 1988 and are published at health authority level in table 9·03 of "Health and Personal Social Services Statistics for Wales, No 19, 1992". Reliable data on cancer registrations in Wales are available only from 1974. Data for Gwynedd for 1974 to 1983 are contained in table 2·8 of "Cancer Registration in Wales: 1974-84". Data for 1984 to 1986 are contained in table 1 of "Cancer Registration in Wales: 1984-86". Each of the above publications is available from the Library of the House.

Flu Vaccinations

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures are being taken to encourage people in Wales to receive flu vaccinations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In September of each year the Chief Medical Officer reminds all doctors of those groups of patients for whom immunisation against influenza is recommended. Further details are given in the 1992 edition of the Memorandum "Immunisation Against Infectious Disease" which is issued to all doctors in Wales. Posters are also issued to family health services authorities and health authorities for display in surgeries and other relevant patient areas.

Solvent Abuse

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures are being taken to tackle the problem of solvent abuse in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Initiatives in Wales to combat drug misuse, including solvent abuse, are undertaken locally by the health authorities and county councils. Nationally the Health Departments' anti-solvent campaign launched in February 1992 is still providing material to support the local campaigns.

The prevention working group of the advisory council for the Misuse of Drugs is currently examining the whole area of volatile substance abuse and hopes to make recommendations during the course of next year.

Tourism

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many recognised visitor attractions there are in Wales; and how many of them are located in Clwyd.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Wales tourist board knows of 421 tourist attractions in the Principality of which 53 are located in Clwyd. However there is no requirement for visitor attractions to be formally recognised.

Research and Development

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what steps he is taking to improve the take up of grants and other incentives for research and development by small and medium enterprises;

(2) what steps he is taking to improve the ease of access to innovation support programmes by small and medium sized enterprises.

Mr. Redwood: The Welsh Office carries out a range of promotional activities, working with other bodies including the training and enterprise councils, the Welsh development agency, the Design Council and the Development Board for Rural Wales, to encourage small and medium sized companies in Wales to take advantage of the support available for research and development both from the United Kingdom Government and the European Commission.

The climate for innovation and take-up of grants for research and development are encouraged through the work of local initiatives such as information technology Wales and the Welsh medical technology forum.

In addition my officials are now working closely with the Welsh relay centre which will play a central role in ensuring the results emanating from the EC's framework research and development programme are used effectively, particularly by small and medium enterprises.

In order to build effectively on these and other initiatives to encourage innovation, we are consulting on how best to improve access to and delivery of business services in Wales.

Forward Look

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will designate one of his Ministers to be responsible for his Department's contribution to the Government's science and technology Forward Look.

Mr. Redwood: Paragraph 2.37 of the recent White Paper "Realising Our Potential—A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology" describes the preparation of the Forward Look by the Office of Science and Technology, and the participation of Government Departments through the existing, well-established machinery of the official and ministerial Cabinet Committees on Science and Technology.

Near-market Research

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what his Department's policy is with regard to the funding of near-market research.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Gentleman to paragraphs 2.20 to 2.22 of the White Paper "Realising Our Potential—A Strategy for Science, Engineering, and Technology".

Incomes

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) men and (b) women aged over 16 years have an income of less than £75 per week.

Mr. Redwood: Estimates from the "New Earnings Survey" and "Employees in Employment" at April 1992 are that, in Wales, 1,500 full-time male and 2,000 full-time female employees on adult rates had gross weekly earnings below £75 per week. Comprehensive information for part-time employees is not available.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales aged over 16 years who work (a) part-time and (b) full-time have an income of less than £75 per week.

Mr. Redwood: It is estimated from the "New Earnings Survey" and "Employees in Employment" at April 1992 that, in Wales, 3,500 full-time employees on adult rates had gross weekly earnings below £75. Comprehensive information for part-time employees is not available.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Viral Haemorrhagic Disease

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of viral haemorrhagic disease there were in each year since 1985.

Mr. Soames: Since 1985 there have been four recorded cases of viral haemorrhagic disease of rabbits in Great Britain, all of which occurred in 1992.

Agriculture and Food Research Council

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps she is taking to draw up a concordat of co-operation between her Department and the Agriculture and Food Research Council.

Mr. Jack: As the recent White Paper "Realising Our Potential—A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology" makes clear, a new system of research councils will come into effect on 1 April 1994. The Government have proposed that each of these new research councils should work with the Government Departments with which they have a significant policy connection to draw up and publish concordats.

Near-market Research

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what her Department's policy is with regard to the funding of near-market research.

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to paragraphs 2.20 to 2.22 of the White Paper "Realising our Potential—A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology".

Science and Technology

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether she will designate one of her Ministers to be responsible for her Department's contribution to the Government's science and technology Forward Look.

Mr. Jack: Paragraph 2.37 of the recent White Paper "Realising Our Potential—A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology" describes the preparation of the Foward Look by the Office of Science and Technology, and the participation of Government Departments through the existing, well-established machinery of the official and ministerial Cabinet Committees on Science and Technology.

Benomyl and Cardendazim

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what formulations related to Benomyl or Cardendazim have been withdrawn from the market over the last 12 years.

Mr. Soames: Formulations of pesticide products are commercially sensitive. However, two products containing benomyl and 53 products containing carbendazim have been withdrawn since 1981. The benomyl products were Benlate T and Polycote Pedigree 3.

Those containing carbendazim were Derosal 50 per cent. WP, Kombat, Delsene Flowable, Delsene 75, Midox Carbendazim, Battal WP, Bolda, CME 10288, Cosmic, Konker, Bavistin M, Bavistin WG, Mastiff, Corbel Duo, Cosmic FL B, Cosmic FL C, Fisons Garden Disease Spray, Focal Flowable (00910), Focal Flowable (03927), Septal, Septal Flowable, Focal WDG, Starlate, Carbate, Bio One-Shot for Diseases, Multi W, Multi W Flowable, Systemic Fungicide (carbendazim), Gammalex Liquid, Mystic Systemic Garden Fungicide, Mystic General Garden Insecticide/Fungicide, Chafer Carbendazim 511, Headland Suppress Plus, Tripart Defensor WP, Hispor 225L, Mantle 370 FW, Clifton Carbendazim, H115, DKB Tecnazene/Carbendazim Dust, Ashlade Carbonil, Ashlade M, Cosmic FL A, Ashlade Carbendazim Flowable, Ashlade Mancarb FL, Delsene M Flowable, Compo Carbendazim, Maximate, Sheen 362 SW, Arena Plus, Ashlade Mancarb Plus, Murphy Zap Cap Vegetable Care, 200 Plus and Bayfidan BM.

In all cases the products were withdrawn or approval allowed to lapse because of commercial considerations.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what labelling arrangements apply to the use of Benomyl-related products indicating whether precautions should be used by pregnant women.

Mr. Soames: All pesticide products, including those containing benomyl and related active ingredients, are approved on the advice of the independent advisory committee on pesticides, only if the Government are satisfied that they can be used without risk to the public —whether users, consumers of treated produce, or those in the vicinity of the spraying operations. Labelling arrangements are covered by the approvals process and labels of benomyl products include warning to keep off skin, to wash after use and, for the home garden product, to store away from children. They do not include specific precautions to be taken by pregnant women.

Clenbuterol

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to her answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 30, if she will make a statement on the abuse of clenbuterol outside Great Britain.

Mr. Soames: I am aware of reports from other member states which allege that clenbuterol is being used illegally for growth promotion purposes. Ministers spoke to their counterparts in the Irish and Belgian Governments about these reports at the time and received assurances that every effort was being made to stamp out the misuse of this substance. The authorities concerned can be confident of our full support in their efforts to this end.

Nevertheless surveillance for clenbuterol in imported meat has been increased this year as indicated in my right hon. Friend's reply to the hon. Member for Langbaurgh (Mr. Bates) on 2 March 1993 at columns 78-9.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the number of recorded incidents of clenbuterol abuse in each EC member state for each of the last three years.

Mr. Soames: In the United Kingdom over the past three years, 1,780 random samples taken under the national surveillance scheme from cattle, sheep and pigs have been analysed for the presence of clenbuterol. No positives have been found under this scheme for clenbuterol in Great Britain, but as indicated in my reply to the Member for Glandford and Scunthorpe on 7 June (Official Report, column 29-30), two clenbuterol positive samples were reported in 1992 from samples taken under the separate arrangements directed at retail and wholesale premises.

In Northern Ireland three positives were found in 1991 (two in 1992) under the national surveillance scheme random sampling arrangements. In addition under intensive meat sampling procedures which have operated in Northern Ireland since 1991, and which are capable of detecting residue traces up to 120 days after administration has ceased, 965 suspect animals were detained and tested in 1991 (1,482 in 1992) of which 68 were found positive (112 in 1992) involving 28 producers (32 in 1992) out of a total of 36,000 producer herds. All levels detected were below the maximum residue level and thus presented no risk to human health. Nevertheless all carcases were condemned as the drug was used in unlicensed form.

I regret that comparable information from other member states is not available from the EC Commission.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many incidents of clenbuterol abuse in meat imported into Britain from non-EC countries were recorded in each of the last three years.

Mr. Soames: Ongoing surveillance in Great Britain for clenbuterol in imported meat is carried out under a scheme, co-ordinated by the working party on veterinary residues in animal products, which is directed at retail and wholesale premises. All of the samples taken under the scheme since it was established in January 1990, from meat imported into Britain from non-EC countries and tested for the presence of clenbuterol, have proved to be negative.

Benlate DF

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what imports have taken place into the United Kingdom of Benlate DF over the last 12 years.

Mr. Soames: We have no record of any imports of Benlate DF.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the names of those persons who sit on the Advisory Committee on Pesticides and their sponsoring or employing organisations.

THORP

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consideration he has given to the public responses received by 23 January in response to draft discharge authorisations for the BNFL thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield; and how many were (a) against and (b) in favour of granting such authorisation.

Mr. Jack: My right hon. Friend is currently considering a report on the representations received in response to consultation on draft radioactive discharge authorisations for BNFL Sellafield. 64,514 responses were against issuing the authorisations as drafted and 19,217 were in favour of granting them.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions she has had with, and what representations she has received from, senior management at BNFL on draft authorisations for BNFL's thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: In dealing with this matter the Minister and the chief inspector of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution act jointly under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 in regulating radioactive discharges from sites licensed under the Nuclear Installations Act 1965. They have therefore received detailed applications from BNFL for new radioactive discharge authorisations for Sellafield, including THORP. BNFL has since written to emphasise the commercial importance it attaches to reaching a decision on the draft discharge authorisations without undue delay.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether the application from BNFL for authorisation for proposed new radioactive discharge limits from the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield fulfils the requirements of environmental assessment; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The information supplied by BNFL in support of its application for new radioactive discharge authorisations for Sellafield, including the thermal oxide reprocessing plant, has been sufficient for the purposes of the radiological assessments carried out by this Department.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Probate Service

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 26 October, Official Report, columns 436-37, if he will list the progress made in attaining improvements to the probate service in England and Wales in respect of each of the proposals in the Comptroller and Auditor-General's report "Probate—Service to the Public"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Following the report of the Comptroller and Auditor General in February 1992, an internal review was commissioned to report on such matters as staffing levels, the organisation of the service, storage of records and computerisation. That review reported in April 1993 and made several recommendations which are presently under consideration, although, like the Comptroller and Auditor General's report, it confirmed that the structure and organisation of the probate service were generally sound. When further information is available, I will make a statement, but the hon. Member for Dundee, East can be assured that the high standard of service provided by staff in the probate service will be maintained.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Stefan Kiszko

Ms Lynne: To ask the Attorney-General when the report into the West Yorkshire police's handling of the Stefan Kiszko case by the Lancashire constabulary was completed and handed to the West Yorkshire police; and when the report was submitted to the Director of Public Prosecutions.

The Attorney-General: The report was submitted to the West Yorkshire police on 2 June 1993 and to the Director of Public Prosecutions on 3 June 1993.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Attorney-General how Stefan Kiszko and the family of Lesley Molseed have been kept up to date with the progress of the investigation, and whether they have been informed of the contents and conclusions of the Lancashire constabulary report, on the handling of the Stefan Kiszko case by the West Yorkshire police.

The Attorney-General: The police service rather than the Crown Prosecution Service has the responsibility for maintaining appropriate contact with victims and others affected by crime. I understand that the investigating officer and his team have kept the legal representative of Stefan Kiszko and the family of Lesley Molseed informed in general terms as to the progress of their investigation. The contents of police reports relating to investigations are, however, confidential.

Asil Nadir

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer of 10 June, Official Report, column 334,(1) how many Ministers were among those who made representations to him over Polly Peck prosecution;

(2) what action he took regarding the (a) written representations and (b) oral representations over the Polly Peck prosecution; if he advised those making oral representation to put those representations to him in writing; and in how many cases was this done;

(3) how many representations he has received from right hon. and hon. Members in the past two years over prosecutions relating to fraud where no court proceedings had yet taken place, excluding representations connected with the Polly Peck and Maxwell cases.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) on 10 June, Official Report, column 334, on Asil Nadir, how many of the representations received were (a) from Ministers and (b) from other hon. Members; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I receive many representations from hon. Members of all parties, both written and oral, about matters within my ministerial responsibility which they believe raise points either of general concern or of concern to particular constituents. Statistics are not maintained for either the overall number of such representations or the particular class mentioned by the hon. Members.

In some cases where the representations are informal or insufficiently precise, I may invite the hon. Member to write to me.

Whenever the representations are sufficiently formal and particularised I consider the points raised carefully and dispassionately, causing inquiries to be made as necessary, before responding to the hon. Member.

I do not intend to expand on my answer to the hon. Member for Walsall, North of 10 June, Official Report, column 334, about representations made about the case of Mr. Nadir.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Football Offences

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences under section 3(1) of the Football (Offences) Act 1991 were reported in 1992; and how many resulted in (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions.

Mr. Maclean: Offences committed under the Football Offences Act 1991 are not notifiable. However, the football unit of the National Criminal Intelligence Service has advised that there were 76 arrests at Football League matches under section 3 of the Football Offences Act 1991, which came into force on 10 August 1991, for the 1991-92 —August-May—season.

In England and Wales in 1991, there were six prosecutions under section 3 of the Act, five of which resulted in a conviction.

1992 data will not be available until the autumn.

Racial Incidents

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many racial incidents were reported to each police division in 1992; what proportion of those incidents involved assault or violence; and how many resulted in (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions.

Mr. Maclean: The only information held centrally relates to the number of reported racial incidents and I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Walthamstow (Mr. Gerrard) on 26 April, Official Report, column 266.

Prostitution

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prostitution-related offences were recorded in 1992; and how many resulted in (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions.

Mr. Maclean: Information on the number of prostitution related offences is not recorded centrally.

The table shows the number of "known offenders"—those cautioned and found guilty—and the number of defendants prosecuted and convicted in England and Wales for prostitution-related offences in 1991.

1992 data will not be available until the autumn.

North Wales Police

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures have been taken to improve the quality of service provided by the North Wales police force; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The quality of service provided by North Wales police is the responsibility of the chief constable.

Ruislip Kennels, Bracknell

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of whether Ruislip kennels, Bracknell, is conforming with the Animal Boarding Establishment Act 1963; and when they were last inspected.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Enforcement of the Animal Boarding Establishments Act 1963 is a matter for local authorities, which have powers to inspect licensed boarding establishments at all reasonable times and, if they wish, may nominate a veterinary surgeon or veterinary practitioner to do so.

I understand that Ruislip kennels were last inspected by the local authority on 15 December 1992, prior to the issue of a licence under the 1963 Act.

Bail Hostels

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many bail hostels there are within 50 miles of York; how many beds each of these hostels have; and on how many nights in the past 12 months (a) all or (b) 90 per cent. of those beds have been occupied.

Mr. Maclean: There are four approved bail hostels within a 50-mile radius of York:

	Places
South Bank, Cleveland	24
Howden House, West Yorkshire	27
Walmer Villas, West Yorkshire	18
Town Moor, South Yorkshire	25
Total	94

Statistics on the occupancy of hostels are collected centrally in terms of a monthly average percentage and not on a daily basis, but in none of the four hostels concerned was average occupancy 90 per cent. or above during the last 12 months.

Home Affairs Council

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) of 9 June, Official Report, column 246, what were the voting figures for each member state recorded in the meeting of the EC Home Affairs Council held on 2 to 3 June.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Work in the field of intergovernmental co-operation proceeds by consensus; decisions at the meeting of Immigration and Trevi Ministers on 1 and 2 June therefore required the agreement of all member states.

Prisons, Wales

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to establish new penal institutions in Wales; where such prisons would be situated and for what complement of prisoners; whether such institutions would be run by the private or public sector; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated June 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent question about plans to build new Prison Service establishments in Wales; where such prisons would be situated and their size; and whether such establishments would be run by the private or public sector.

Work which has been carried out on the long term planning of the Prison Service estate has shown that there is a need for additional accommodation in Wales. We have already decided to increase the capacity of both Swansea and Cardiff prisons by the provision of new houseblocks. But this expansion will not be sufficient to meet the demand for places, indicating the need for a further, new establishment. A final decision has not yet been made about such an establishment.

We are also concerned that all prisoners whose homes are in North Wales have to be held in establishments in England. But the numbers concerned are relatively small, and there are other areas which are under greater pressure and which must therefore have higher priority for relief.

On the question of whether any new establishment would be run by the private or public sector, no decision has yet been taken on the approach to be taken to the provision and management of new establishments.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Finance

Sir Rhodes Boyson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount of credit approvals/capital allocations given to local authorities in (a) England, (b) Greater London and (c) the south-east, excluding Greater London, for each year since 1982-83; and what is his estimate for 1992-93.

Mr. Curry: The information is as follows:

Local authority capital allocations

£ million

Year	England	Greater London	South-east[1]
1982-83	4,288	1,179	593
1983-84	4,101	1,041	605

1987-88	2,975	671	455
1988-89	3,094	740	475
1989-90	2,904	635	454

Year	Issued[1] England	Used[2] England	Greater London	South-east[3]
1990-91	2,827	2,786	744	386

[2] Total credit approvals used, as reported by local authorities to the Department. Figures may differ from credit approval issued because of under-use of credit approvals and because authorities may have underestimated credit approvals.
[3] Excluding Greater London.
[4] Outturn (provisional).
[5] Estimate.

Limehouse Link

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated annual cost of maintenance of the Limehouse link in respect of (a) ventilation, (b) electricity, (c) surface repairs and (d) other expenses by category.

Mr. Baldry: The estimated annual cost of maintenance for the Limehouse link tunnel is as follows:

(a) Ventilation	72,000
(b) Electricity	584,000
(c) Surface repairs	60,000
(d) Other costs
—Pumps	20,000
—Lighting and Lamps	50,000
—Electrical equipment	50,000
—Service building (Depot)	48,000
—Salaries of tunnel operating staff	461,000
Total	£1,345,000

Methane Emissions

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the report by the energy technology support unit assessing methane emissions from landfills.

Mr. Yeo: The report is being prepared as part of a series of reports from the controlled waste management research programme. It should be available within two months.

Council Tax

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many residential care homes are liable for council tax in each local authority; what consideration he has given to allowing council tax discounts to such homes if there are resident staff; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The total number of residential care homes in the area of each social services authority as at 31 March 1992 is set out in the table. No information is available on the distribution of these between districts in non-metropolitan areas or on the council tax liabilities relating to them.

People receiving care in registered homes are not counted towards the personal element of the council tax. The council tax bill for a dwelling where all the residents are recipients of care will therefore be subject to a 50 per cent. council tax discount—the tax payable will be the same as that due for any empty property. Members of staff with accommodation in the home will not affect this discount provided that their main home is elsewhere. If separate, self-contained accommodation is provided for staff, this will be subject to a separate council tax bill, and will not affect the tax payable in respect of the care home itself.

If, on the other hand, a member of staff has his sole or main residence in the care home itself, discount entitlement may be lost. But where this is the case, the discount forgone is likely to be smaller than the council tax for which the person would have been liable if he or she had lived elsewhere. It is also very likely to be smaller than the community charge which the member of staff will have paid in previous years.

Mineral Planning Permission

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce legislation to ensure that all mineral planning permission is reviewed at intervals of no longer than five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: We consulted last year on options for the updating and review of old mineral permissions. I hope to issue a further consultation paper on detailed proposals for change later in the summer. It would be wrong to pre-empt the content of that paper or to prejudge the outcome of further consultations.

Unitary Authorities

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the procedure for an area coterminous with a shire county to be considered for unitary authority status by the Local Government Commission.

Mr. Baldry: If people living in localities bordering on an area being reviewed by the Local Government Commission feel that their area should be included in that review, they may make representations to the commission. Where the commission judges that there is strong community support for a review to be extended across a county boundary, it may ask the Secretary of State for a direction to widen the scope of the review.

Housing (Compulsory Competitive Tendering)

Mr. Hawksley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the development of compulsory competitive tendering of housing management.

Sir George Young: I have today issued a consultation paper to all housing authorities in England, the local authority associations and other interested organisations. The paper sets out the Government's detailed proposals on some of the key components of compulsory competitive tendering—CCT—of housing management. I am placing copies in the Library.

The consultation paper follows discussion with the local authority associations and the eight local authorities which are piloting housing management CCT. It also takes account of work done by consultants in co-operation with the pilot authorities.

The proposals in the consultation paper address the scope of the defined activity, which lists the functions which authorities will have to subject to CCT, unless they contract them out voluntarily, the timetable that authorities will have to meet when they are introducing housing management CCT, and the size of contract packages. It is intended that the orders implementing the first two components should be in place from 1 April 1994. The third component will be implemented by way of guidance.

I hope that issuing our proposals at this stage will help authorities in their detailed preparations for the introduction of housing management CCT. In addition, I am keen to have authorities' comments on the practical implications of the proposals, so that the final package takes account of the different circumstances prevailing in different authorities.

CCT represents a new direction and opportunity for the management of local authority housing. Competition will improve quality of service and value for money by testing the market. It will expand the opportunities for the involvement of the private sector in housing management, while ensuring that local authorities themselves have every opportunity to compete. The consultation provisions of the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Bill, currently before Parliament, will ensure that tenants are fully involved throughout this process.

The Government want tenants to secure the benefits of CCT as soon as possible, allowing for the healthy development of the market. It is intended therefore that housing management CCT should be phased in over three years with the first contracts in operation from 1 April 1996. The proposals contained in this consultation paper are at the centre of housing management CCT and represent a major step towards its successful introduction.

London Docklands

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Bow and Poplar (Ms Gordon) of 8 June, Official Report, column 191, how many people attended the London Docklands development corporation banquet on 7 May; what proportion of the total cost was met from public funds; who were the catering contractors; and if he will place a list of those attending in the Library.

Sir George Young: Approximately 650 people attended the Limehouse link dinner on 14 May. The London Docklands development corporation paid £27,750 towards the cost, the remaining £21,950 was contributed by a variety of companies and individuals. The catering contractors were Crown Catering Group of Romford, Essex. I have asked the LDDC to send a list of participants to the hon. Member.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will publish the scheme council tax, used in calculating the transitional reduction for 1993-94, for each local authority in England;

(2) if he will publish the amount of other adjustments which formed part of the personal community charge in 1992-93 for each local authority in England;

(3) if he will publish the amount of the collection fund deficit at the most recent available date for each local authority in England.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, my hon. Friend the Member for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire), on 24 May, Official Report, column 369.

Westminster City Council

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations Ministers or officials in his Department have received from, or on behalf of councillors, former councillors or officers who are the subject of the investigation by the district auditor into the designated sales programme of Westminister city council; and how many such representations were made by right hon. and hon. Members of this House.

Mr. Curry: I am not aware of any such representations.

Local Government Commission (Lancashire)

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Local Government Commission will commence its inquiry into the county of Lancashire.

Mr. Baldry: On 20 September 1993.

THORP

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received calling for a public inquiry to consider the potential environmental impact of planned radioactive discharges from BNFL's thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield; what is his policy on holding such an inquiry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 16 June 1993]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received a number of representations calling for a public inquiry into the draft authorisations for the disposal of radioactive waste from BNFL's Sellafield site. He has received the regulators' report on the public consultation and is considering it and, in accordance with the Radioactive Substances Act 1960, is considering whether to call in the applications for authorisation and if so whether to cause a local inquiry to be held.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent discussions he has had with, and what representations he has received from, senior management at BNFL on draft discharge authorisations for BNFL's thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 16 June 1993]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no recent discussions with senior management at British Nuclear Fuels plc. The chairman of BNFL has written to the Secretary of State on one recent occasion, about the timing of the issue of new authorisations for BNFL's Sellafield site.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations the Government have received calling for a joint Department of the Environment and Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food hearing to consider the potential environmental impact of planned radioactive discharges from BNFL's thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield; what is his policy on holding such an inquiry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 16 June 1993]: The Government have received a number of representations calling for a hearing into the draft authorisations for the disposal of radioactive waste from BNFL's Sellafield site. My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have received the regulators' report on the public consultation and are considering it and, in accordance with the Radioactive Substances Act 1960, are considering whether to afford a hearing.

TRANSPORT

M1-M62 Link Road

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the current timetable for the establishment of an M1 to M62 link road; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what plans he has, following the formal consultation process, to alter or abandon the proposals for the M1 to M62 link road.

Mr. Key: We expect to be in a position to make an announcement about the way forward on this scheme before the autumn.

Market Testing

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all the market tests that have taken place in his Department since November 1992 and indicate, in each case, whether the result was the maintenance of in-house provision, or whether the service was contracted out.

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport's market-testing programme for the year from October 1992 to September 1993 was set out in the first report on the citizens charter. None of the cases has yet reached award stage.

Transport Council

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for St. Ives (Mr. Harris) of 11 June, Official Report, columns 383-84, what were the voting figures for each member state recorded in the meeting of the European Community's Transport Council held on 7 to 8 June.

Mr. MacGregor: No formal votes were taken.

M25

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make announcements on the subject of increasing the capacity of the M25 in (a) Kent, (b) Surrey, (c) Buckinghamshire, (d) Hertfordshire and (e) Essex.

Mr. Key: My right hon. Friend will make a statement in due course.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Civil Service College

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much has been spent on building works, maintenance and equipment at the Civil Service College, Sunningdale in each of the last five years.

Mr. Waldegrave: The information requested covering college expenditure at the Sunningdale site is as follows:

Year	Building Works £ thousands	Maintenance £ thousands	Equipment £ thousands
1988-89	130	436	351
1989-90	367	509	492
1990-91	2,072	519	863
1991-92	1,960	567	996
1992-93	3,891	632	357

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Overseas Aid

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total monetary value of overseas aid distributed in the 1992-93 financial year.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The provisional outturn of gross domestic expenditure on the Overseas Development Administration's external assistance programmes for developing countries and for eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union in 1992-93, including the United Kingdom's share of European community aid expenditure, is £2,098,886,000.

Aid and Trade Provision

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the future of the aid and trade provision.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Government have concluded their review of the aid and trade provision—ATP. They have decided that the scheme should continue. It will help finance sound projects that will contribute to sustainable development and that are of particular industrial and commercial importance to Britain. The ATP budget for 1993-94 of £110 million will be enhanced by £7 million subject to parliamentary approval. The scheme will in future focus on creditworthy, low-income—income per head under $700—developing countries.

There will be a transitional period during which a few projects already at an advanced stage of consideration, which would not be eligible under the revised scheme, will exceptionally be taken forward. The selection of projects under the revised scheme will take account of the new OECD rules governing the use of tied aid which came into force in 1992. Specific measures to improve the effectiveness of ATP and achieve better value for money will be implemented immediately.

This revised scheme will provide a clearer framework for industry within which companies should be able to obtain an early indication of the prospects for ATP funding for individual projects.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Human Rights

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultation between Her Majesty's Government and the United Nations took place prior to the withdrawal by the United Nations of invitations to British-based human rights organisations concerned with human rights in (a) the Punjab, (b) Kashmir and (c) Assam, to attend a United Nations conference on human rights in Vienna; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The secretariat of the United Nations world conference on human rights was informed in advance of the conference that we had no objection to any British-based human rights non-governmental organisation being invited to participate. On learning of the withdrawal of the invitations to those organisations referred to by the hon. Member, we protested to the secretariat. As a direct result of this pressure, the invitations were reinstated.

Burma

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken to persuade the Government of Burma to comply with the European Community statement of 12 March.

Mr. Goodlad: With our European Community partners, we continue to monitor closely the human rights situation in Burma, and take every opportunity to underline our concern to the Burmese and in the appropriate international bodies.

Xanana Gusmao

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Indonesia concerning the trial and imprisonment of Xanana Gusmao.

Mr. Goodlad: Following the trial's conclusion, Her Majesty's ambassador, together with other European Community representatives in Jakarta on 10 June, impressed on the Indonesian Government the importance the Community attach to humane treatment of Gusmao, including regular access by the International Committee of the Red Cross.

East Timor

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Indonesia to urge it to meet the requirements of the International Committee of the Red Cross with regard to prison visits in East Timor.

Mr. Goodlad: Our ambassador in Jakarta with his European Community colleagues have urged the Indonesian authorities—most recently in representations this month—to facilitate the early resumption of International Committee of the Red Cross access to prisoners in East Timor.

Market Testing

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all the market tests that have taken place in his Department since November 1992 and indicate, in each case, whether the result was the maintenance of in-house provision, or whether the service was contracted out.

Mr. Goodlad: Of the activities to be investigated for market testing in the diplomatic wing of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, decisions have been reached on three. The client function for the television facilities unit has been transferred to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office from the Central Office of Information; installation of local radio networks and satellite communications by in-house teams will effectively be abolished in 1994; and supply services for office stationery and machinery are being contracted out. Of the activities scheduled to be market tested in the aid wing, one, administration of overseas pensions, has almost been completed. The service is to be retained in-house.

Guatemala

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has made to the Government of Guatemala about human rights abuses against its indigenous peoples; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We take every opportunity to make clear to the Guatemalan authorities the concern felt in this country about observance of human rights, including those of the indigenous people. We welcome President Ramiro de Leon Carpio's commitment to improve matters.

Libya

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consequences in terms of the availability of consular and other services are imposed on United Kingdom citizens who take up work in Libya against the advice of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The United Kingdom has no diplomatic relations with Libya. As a result, the small British interests section of the embassy of our protecting power, Italy, can offer only limited consular services to British nationals in Libya.

We advise British nationals planning visits to Libya to consider whether their journey is really necessary, and the resident British community to consider whether they need to remain.

I am sending the hon. Member a copy of the FCO's "Travel Advice on Libya".

Karyn Smith and Patricia Cahill

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has received on whether the drugs found in the possession of Karyn Smith and Patricia Cahill, currently serving gaol sentences in Bangkok, could have physically fitted in the luggage of the two women, as alleged in court; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The solicitor for the family of Karyn Smith has provided documentation to support his view that the drugs could not have fitted into the suitcases. HM Customs and Excise have reviewed this documentation. They have examined the photographs of the luggage and the drug containers. They are satisfied that the compressed heroin could have fitted into the luggage.

Child Abduction

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which members of the European Community have not signed (a) The Hague and (b) the European conventions on child abduction.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Ten countries of the European Community have ratified The Hague convention; Italy and Begium have yet to ratify the convention.

Eleven countries have signed and ratified the European convention. Italy has yet to ratify.

Foreign Affairs Council

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Foreign Affairs Council held on 7 and 9 June.

Mr. Hurd: My hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and I represented the United Kingdom at the Foreign Affairs Council in Luxembourg on 7 to 9 June.

At an inter-institutional meeting between the Council, the European Parliament and the Commission on 7 June, no agreement was reached either on an inter-institutional agreement on subsidiarity or on a decision by the European Parliament on procedures for the ombudsman to be appointed by the Parliament. Both issues were blocked by the Parliament. Ministerial sessions of the accession negotiations with Norway, Austria, Sweden and Finland were held in the margins of the Council. These registered useful progress.

Ministers had a substantial discussion on former Yugoslavia. They reaffirmed the overriding importance of efforts to achieve a lasting and equitable peace in co-operation with the rest of the international community, their full support for Lord Owen and Mr. Stoltenberg in their contacts with the parties, and their commitment to the Vance/Owen peace plan. They agreed that measures contained in the joint action programme set out by the United States, France, Spain, Russia and the United Kingdom on 22 May should be followed up: they will support the United Nations Secretary-General's efforts to attract further troops and funding to implement United Nations Security Council resolution 836 on safe areas. They called for an increase in the international presence in Kosovo and Macedonia to help pre-empt possible spillover of the conflict.

The Council heard a report by Sir Leon Brittan on recent developments related to the GATT Uruguay round negotiations. The French Foreign Minister presented his Government's recent memorandum setting out the French position on the round. The Council had a thorough exchange of views on both of these statements. We share the Commission's hope that it will be possible to agree the outline of an agreement on market access and services by the time of the economic summit in Tokyo in July.

The Council also approved the EC/United States oilseeds agreement, which was negotiated as part of the Blair House agriculture package last November.

Over lunch, Ministers discussed the humanitarian situation in northern Iraq, the continuing need for emergency aid, and the requirement for longer term development assistance. Ministers agreed the EC response to the establishment of the transitional executive council in South Africa. This will include the lifting of some of the remaining restrictions other than those related to the United Nations arms embargo, and the launch of the new EC development initiative. Sir Leon Brittan reported on his recent visit to Moscow.

In the afternoon, the Council discussed the Commission's paper for the Copenhagen European Council on strengthening relations with the central European associate countries.

The Council then discussed a Commission paper on openness access to information, summarising progress made since the Edinburgh European Council.

The Council discussed the revision of the regulations governing the EC structural funds. The Commission reaffirmed its inclusion of Merseyside and the highlands and islands of Scotland in its proposed list of objective 1 regions. The Minister of State argued for further regions in the United Kingdom to be added to the list of areas in the Community classified as objective 1. There was also discussion of how objective 2 and 5b areas should be determined. In the discussion of the proposed new objective 4, the United Kingdom reiterated its reserve of principle and argued against the diversion of European social fund money away from helping the long-term unemployed. The question of greater Council involvement in decisions relating to Community initiatives under the structural funds was also raised. It was agreed that an extraordinary General Affairs Council be held on 2 July to discuss these matters further.

The Danish presidency briefed the Council on its plans for the Copenhagen European Council. The main agenda items are likely to be economic growth and unemployment, the Community's relations with central and eastern Europe, the Community's relations with Russia, the progress of the enlargement negotiations, subsidiarity and the situation in the former Yugoslavia.

No formal votes were taken.

EDUCATION

Early Years Education

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to safeguard high-quality early years education; and what measures he will take to ensure the continued provision of suitably qualified graduate teachers for this age group.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Government's policies are designed to improve standards at all levels of education, including pupils' early years in school. My right hon. Friend has recently issued for consultation proposals for an additional route into early years teaching, to allow those who are sufficiently able and experienced to reach the necessary standards in one year; this will complement and not replace existing routes into teaching. The Government believe that schools should be able to decide for themselves among teachers with different academic qualifications who have the required knowledge and skills for effective teaching.

School Tests

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education on what date he plans to send to schools plans for next year's tests.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has written to all chairmen of governors and head teachers advising them of the streamlined arrangements for the 1994 tests for seven and 14-year-olds, which he announced to the House on 11 May. Detailed decisions on the scope and coverage of the tests will be made in the light of recommendations from Sir Ron Dearing, which are expected in July. Further information will be sent to schools as soon as possible thereafter.

Head Teachers

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement on the statutory duties and responsibilities on head teachers; and what monitoring is carried out to see they are fulfilled.

Mr. Robin Squire: Head teachers of maintained schools, including self-governing—grant-maintained—schools, have statutory responsibility for a number of functions relating to the organisation and management of the school, the discipline of its pupils and the curriculum. In undertaking these functions, they are accountable in the first instance to the governing body of the school and to the local education authority in those schools which it maintains. Parents also have a formal opportunity to discuss the way the head teacher has carried out his or her duties, at the annual meeting which governors must hold for parents. Independent inspections of schools every four years under the Education (Schools) Act 1992 will report on quality and standards in schools, including how effectively they discharge their statutory functions. Reports and governors' action plans will be published.

Top-up Fees

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received on the subject of top-up fees for university students; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 14 June, Official Report, column 420.

Pre-school Places

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many pre-school places for three to five-year-olds are provided in England and Wales by (a) local authorities, (b) private sector employees, (c) central Government for their own employees and (d) the private sector.

Mr. Bowis: I have been asked to reply.

The information held centrally covers places for children aged under five in day nurseries, playgroups and with childminders. This shows local authority provision, registered and non-registered provision and is recorded in the publication "Children's Day Care Facilities at 31 March 1991, England", copies of which are available in the Library. The number of pre-school places provided in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Terrorism

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the figures for (a) killings by terrorists, (b) terrorist shooting incidents and (c) terrorist bombs, including explosions and defusings in 1985; and in which of the subsequent years the number of offences in each category has been lower.

Mr. Mates: In 1985, there were 47 murders believed to have been carried out by terrorist organisations, 237 terrorist shooting incidents and 215 terrorist bombs, including explosions and defusings. The number of terrorist incidents in each of these three categories has not been lower in any subsequent year.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons were charged with terrorist offences in 1985; and in which of the subsequent years the number of such persons has been higher.

Mr. Mates: A total of 522 persons were charged with terrorist offences in 1985. The only subsequent year in which the number of such persons has been higher is 1986.

Compensation Agency

Sir James Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the business plan for 1993-94 for the Compensation Agency will be published.

Mr. Mates: The Compensation Agency's business plan for 1993-94 will be published today. The plan explains the agency's business and organisation and sets out assumptions about workloads and resources which underpin the plans and targets identified for the agency this year. I have made arrangements for copies to be placed in the Library.

PRIME MINISTER

UN Commission on Sustainable Development

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 13, if he will list the organisations or individuals to whom the United Kingdom report to the UN Commission on Sustainable Development has been or will be distributed.

The Prime Minister: Copies of the progress report have been sent to the commission's secretariat and copies are available for delegates attending the commission's meeting this week and next in New York. Copies were also made available to delegates who attended an Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development meeting in Paris last week.

The Prime Minister: Central Government funding to voluntary organisations in 1991-92 amounted to £3,387 million. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 17 June.

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 17 June.

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Teaching Company

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Prime Minister to which Cabinet Minister the Teaching Company management committee reports.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 16 June 1993]: The Teaching Company management committee is a sub-committee of the Science and Engineering Research Council—SERC—and, therefore, formally reports to my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. However, the terms of reference of this committee require it, inter alia, to report to the engineering board of SERC and to the Department of Trade and Industry, as well as to other funding bodies, and to advise SERC's engineering board, the DTI and others on the development of the scheme.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Theatres

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what information he has on the number of theatres that have closed in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland since 1979.

Mr. Brooke: The information requested is not held centrally. I am however advised by the Theatres Trust that the rate of loss of theatres has slowed significantly since the mid-1970s; indeed, a number of theatres referred to as being closed in the report of a 1982 survey have subsequently reopened.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Cutlery and Silverware

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee (1) whether compensation has been sought from the firm which failed to scrap or remove the two portcullis engravings from the two consignments of House of Commons cutlery and silverware as agreed;

(2) which firm failed to carry out the undertaking either to remove all marks or scrap the two recent consignments of House of Commons cutlery and silverware; and to which firm the items were subsequently sold.

Mr. Colin Shepherd: This is a matter for the Director of Catering Services and I shall ask her to write to the hon. Member.

HEALTH

Adoption

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the average time spent in fostered care/social service care prior to adoption by children adopted in each of the last 15 years;

(2) what was the average time spent in foster care/social service care prior to adoption in each of the last 15 years for children adopted at the age of less than one year, one to four, five to nine, 10 to 14 and 15 to 17 years.

Mr. Bowis: Information held centrally relates to the length of time a child was in care under the last legal status before leaving care. This will often be less than the total time he or she was in care. Averages for children leaving care on adoption or being freed for adoption for the year ending 31 March 1991 are shown in the table; figures for earlier years could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The number of children leaving care in six duration bands are published in "Children in Care of Local Authorities, England", of which copies are available in the Library. Statistics on the total time looked after are being collected from 14 October 1991, but processing for the period ended 31 March 1992 is not yet complete.

Number of children leaving care on adoption or on being freed for adoption in the year ending 31 March 1991: England

Age on leaving care	Number of children leaving care	Average duration of last legal status on leaving care (years)
All ages	2,439	3·4
Under 1	469	0·5
1 and under 5	899	2·1
5 and under 10	701	4·1
10 and under 15	275	7·4
16 and over	98	11·5

Children who were readmitted to care subsequently in the year ended 31 March 1991 are excluded. For children subject to a parental rights resolution, the duration of legal status relates to their time in care under section 2 of the Child Care Act 1980, not since the resolution.

Sports Injuries

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths and severe injuries were caused by sport in each of the last five years; and if she will publish figures for the number of such incidents for each main sport.

Mr. Sackville: The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys publishes statistics on sporting deaths in the monitor "Fatal accidents during sporting and leisure activities", series DH4, a copy of which is available in the Library. The latest year for which information is available is 1991. The information for 1987 to 1991 has been summarised and will be placed in the Library. More detailed information may be obtained from the monitor.

The information for severe injuries is published by the Department of Trade and Industry. Copies of the table will be placed in the Library.

Mental Illness

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of residential places available for people with mental illness in the most recent year available; and how many of these were family placements or provided respite care or housing.

Mr. Bowis: The information available centrally shows that at 31 March 1992 in England there were 11,569 places in staffed local authority and independent sector residential homes, primarily for people with mental illness and 1,997 places in unstaffed local authority homes. Information is not available centrally for unstaffed homes in the independent sector. Information on places is not broken down by the type of care.

In addition, there were 284 staffed residential homes reported at 31 March 1992 as serving mentally ill people as a second or third client group within the home, but information is not available on the number of places specifically designated for mentally ill people in these homes.

Patients Charters

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what redress and compensation are available to patients when health authorities and trusts fail to meet service commitments made in local and national patients charters.

Dr. Mawhinney: Health authorities and hospitals are responsible on a day-to-day basis for delivering patients charter rights and standards and are expected to ensure that service commitments are fully met.

In two specific instances the patients charter offers redress. Under the citizens charter, patients are guaranteed treatment within a maximum of two years—18 months for hip and knee replacement and cataract operations—from the date when their consultant places them on a waiting list. Where a hospital cannot give treatment within the guaranteed maximum waiting time, then health authorities should make alternative arrangements with another provider.

Also operations should not be cancelled on the day a patient is due to arrive in hospital. If this happens twice, then treatment should be arranged within one month of the date of the second cancellation.

Battens Disease

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what measures are being taken to ensure that all children who suffer from Battens disease are treated before they are three years of age;

(2) how many cases of Battens disease have been recorded in each year since 1983.

Mr. Bowis: Battens disease is extremely rare, and its prevalence is not precisely known. There is no known effective treatment for Battens disease. In the infantile forms, with onset before the age of three, the health care of the children is guided by the basic principles which apply to all types of progressive disorder with handicap.

NHS Employmnent Contracts

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice her Department gives to health authorities and trusts regarding employment contracts with particular reference to clauses designated to prevent staff speaking to the media.

Dr. Mawhinney: Where explicit clauses on safeguarding confidentiality are included in individual contracts of employment, they must not conflict with the principles set out in the advice "Guidance for staff on relations with the public and the media" EL(93)51, issued recently by Sir Duncan Nichol to all health authorities and trusts. A copy of the guidance is available in the Library.

Children's Health Records

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of children now have parent-held records;

(2) what percentage of purchasing authorities are contracting for parent-held records.

Mr. Bowis: Information from the British Paediatric Association, which has produced a model personal child health record, shows that 107 district health authorities are contracting for the record. Information on the number of children who have been issued with the record is not available centrally.

GP Fund Holders

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of general medical service funds is for budget holding in (a) 1990-91, (b) 1991-92, (c) 1992-93, (d) 1993-94 and (e) 1994-95.

Dr. Mawhinney: The main component of spending on the general medical services—GMS—non-cash-limited element, consists of the payment of general practitioners fees and expenses. Arrangements are identical for fund holders and non-fund holders and no special allocations are made to the former. For the cash-limited component, the proportion of funds allocated by the Department to regional health authorities specifically for GP fund holders is shown in the table. Regional health authorities can supplement the national funding from their revenue allocations for hospital and community health services. Information on supplementary funding is not available centrally. No decisions have been taken on the funding to be made available in 1994-95.

Hospital Admission Times

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the guaranteed admission times for hospital treatment for each health authority.

Dr. Mawhinney: As purchasers of health care, district health authorities will shortly be publishing their first annual report on performance achieved by their providers against all patients charter standards.

Junior Doctors (Working Hours)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health further to her answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 44, what plans she has to assess the actual hours worked over 83 per week by junior doctors; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: We continue to make clear to health authorities and trusts that, as well as monitoring reductions in the contracted hours of junior doctors and dentists, they should ensure that actual hours of duty do not exceed contracted hours. We are determined to ensure that junior doctors and dentists see real improvements in their working lives from the new deal.

Learning Disabilities

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many adult training centres exist in each local authority for people with learning disabilities; what places are available; and what figures she has on the number of people assessed as suitable for admission to an adult training centre for whom there are currently no places available.

Mr. Bowis: The latest available information on the number of adult training centres, and the number of places available in them, by local authority, is published in "Adult Training Centres for People with Learning Disabilities and Local Authority Day Centres for Adults, at 31 March 1991, England", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Information on the number of people assessed as suitable for admission to an adult training centre for whom there are currently no places available is not available centrally.

Corporate Affairs Intelligence Unit

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give the budget for the corporate affairs intelligence unit for 1992-93, 1993-94 and 1994-95.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) on 22 February at columns 482-83.

Dental Health

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make a statement on how the dental health care of children is being improved; and what further plans she will bring forward;

(2) what monitoring of adult and child dental health care her Department is now doing; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The provision of dental treatment and the monitoring of the dental health of all age groups of the population is a matter for district health authorities to undertake jointly with family health services authorities. Health authorities also arrange for the screening of teeth of children in state-funded schools at least three times in each child's school life.

The Department conducts decennial surveys of the dental health of adults and children alternately each five years. The last survey of adults was carried out in 1988. A survey of children is now in progress. The 1983 child dental health survey, copies of which are available in the Library, showed that among eight-year-olds, the proportion with some active decay in their permanent dentition had decreased from 40 per cent. in 1973 to 17 per cent. in 1983 and among 14-year-olds from 61 per cent. to 37 per cent.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to bring forward new proposals for dental remuneration; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: We shall announce our proposals in due course.

Water Fluoridation

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what indemnities have been given by Yorkshire regional health authority to Yorkshire Water plc against all claims arising from fluoridation of water supplies; if she will place a copy of the indemnity in the Library; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Though indemnities against liabilities arising from fluoridation may be provided, Yorkshire Water plc has not yet sought them.

South-West Health Authorities

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give details of the chairmen and non-executive members appointed to the South West regional health authority and to NHS trusts in the south-west, listing their current occupations and whether their main residence is within the authority or trust area.

Dr. Mawhinney: A list of all such appointees and the most recent information about their occupations, where this is held, is shown in the table. Where possible, people appointed to health authorities and national health service trusts are expected either to live or work in, or have other connections with the area served by the authority or trust.

Pharmacists

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library copies of her correspondence with the chairman of the Pharmaceutical Services National Committee concerning the modification or withdrawal of proposals for changes in the remuneration for pharmacists.

Dr. Mawhinney: Yes.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the outcome of her meeting with the Pharmaceutical Services Negotiating Committee on Tuesday 15 June.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department had a short, constructive meeting about the longer-term arrangements for pharmacists' remuneration and the elements of the settlement for 1993-94. Another formal meeting has been arranged for next month, with less formal joint working in the meantime to develop options further.

Neo-natal Units

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action she is taking to ensure adequate provision of lung surfactant in NHS neo-natal intensive care units; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what action is being taken by her Department to improve nursing staff levels in NHS neo-natal units; and if she will make a statement;

(3) what new resources or policy initiatives are being devoted by her Department to increasing the number of temperature monitors, blood pressure monitors, ventilators and incubators available in NHS neo-natal units, and to updating existing equipment; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Allocations of funds to health authorities for purchasing health care services including neo-natal services are made on the basis of the size, age, distribution and relative health of their resident populations. Specific arrangements about staffing and equipment are matters for local decision. The Clinical Standards Advisory Group, set up by the United Kingdom Health Ministers, was asked to examine access to and availability of a number of specialised services, including neo-natal intensive care following the introduction of the national health service reforms. Its report and the Government's response will be published shortly. Health care purchasers and providers will need to take account of these in making decisions about future provision.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received from the British Association of Perinatal Medicine on the appropriate provision of paediatric consultants for each neo-natal unit; what response she has made; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: No recent representations have been received from the British Association of Perinatal Medicine.

Young Smokers

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has for each year since 1988 on the prevalence of 11 to 15-year-old smokers.

Mr. Sackville: Information relating to the prevalence of smoking among 11 to 15-year-olds is available from the biennial Office of Population Censuses and Surveys "Smoking Among Secondary School Children", as shown in the table. A copy of the publication is available in the Library.

"Help Us to Help You"

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the budget for the "Help Us to Help You" campaign.

Dr. Mawhinney: All regional and district health authorities, family health services authorities, national health service trusts, directly managed hospital units and community health councils have been sent copies of a "Help Us to Help You" information pack, which gives advice about how to develop a local campaign. The total cost of producing the packs was £31,870. Copies of the packs will be placed in the Library.

Paediatric Beds

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many intensive therapy unit beds for children there were in each of the last five years; and what was the total child population in each of those years;

(2) how many times in each of the last five years a child has been refused admission to children intensive therapy unit beds; and how many child intensive therapy unit beds are closed at present;

(3) what information she has on the children intensive therapy unit beds in each other EC country, and the total number of children in each of those countries;

(4) what was the number of (a) paediatric beds and (b) intensive care paediatric beds in each region in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 10 June 1993]: Figures showing the number of beds allocated for paediatric care in each regional health authority from 1987-88 to 1991-92 are shown in the table with details of the population. For earlier years, from 1981, statistics were calculated on a different basis and are not comparable.

Although the figures show a decline in bed numbers in the period, patient activity has increased, due to the extended use of day surgery, decreases in lengths of stay, and developments in medical practice. Although the child population has remained fairly constant at around 9·5 million—under 16—patient activity in paediatrics increased by 58 per cent. between 1981 and 1988-89 and by 11·3 per cent. between 1988-89 and 1991-92.

Information on the number or management of designated paediatric intensive therapy beds here or in other European community countries is not available centrally. However, the Department has funded an independent survey of the beds currently available within the national health service as part of a review of the need for intensive care facilities for critically ill children which a working party established by the British Paediatric Association is carrying out. Its report is due in the autumn. We expect that it will help health authorities in assessing the needs of their child population and negotiating contracts with hospital provider units to meet these needs.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Product Marking

Mr. Riddick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals his Department has to require all retail products (a) to be labelled in metric units and (b) to be labelled with their price per metric unit of weight.

Mr. McLoughlin: All existing requirements for retail products to be marked with their weight or volume and for unit prices to be displayed are to be amended in accordance with the Units of Measurement Directive 1989.

Package Tours

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has had from the Association of British Travel Agents regarding the consequences of the EC package tour directive on its members.

Mr. McLoughlin: My Department maintained close contact with ABTA during the negotiation of the directive and during the preparation of the implementing regulations.

Wood

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the total annual value of imports into the United Kingdom of wood and wood-related products.

Mr. Needham: In 1992, total United Kingdom imports of wood and wood-related products were valued at £2·6 billion.

UKAEA Constabulary

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has for the future of the UKAEA constabulary; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The future of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority constabulary will need to be considered in the context of the study I have set in hand to advise on options for the future of the Atomic Energy Authority. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Harlow (Mr. Hayes) on 1 April 1993, Official Report, column 407.

Anti-dumping Cases

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the anti-dumping and countervailing action cases filed against British companies by United States steel companies; what progress has been made in each case; and what representations have been made by the DTI to the European Community and to the Government of the USA.

Mr. Needham: On 19 January 1993, the US Department of Commerce—DOC—imposed final duties on certain United Kingdom lead and bismuth carbon steel products as follows:

Company	Countervailing Duty Per cent.	Anti-Dumping Duty Per cent.
United Engineering Steels	12·69	25·82
Allied Steel and Wire	20·33	25·82
Glynwed	00·00	25·82

Folowing this decision, the US International Trade Commission—ITC—upheld the United States steel

However, in a separate anti-dumping case concerning steel rails exported by British Steel plc, the ITC rejected the United States industry's allegations of injury.

The US DOC have also imposed provisional countervailing and anti-dumping duties of 19·13 per cent. and 109·22 per cent. respectively on plate products produced by British Steel plc. Final determinations are expected on 21 June.

The Government are particularly concerned about countervailing duties imposed on the grounds that British Steel and others are still benefiting from subsidies paid prior to privatisation. We totally reject this allegation and have argued our case strenuously and in detail with the United States authorities. The European Commission has also taken up our case in its actions against the United States under the GATT subsidies and anti-dumping codes.

My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has raised the privatisation issue on several occasions in writing with Ron Brown, the US Secretary of Commerce, and his predecessor. My right hon. Friend the Minister for Industry also raised the subject with Mr. Brown in Paris on 2 June.

Space Planes

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what policy he has towards the development of space planes; and what studies, research or demonstration projects he supported in 1992-93 and proposes to support in 1993-94.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government recognise the importance of securing access to space for satellite manufacturers at the most economical cost and the role which reusable launchers, such as spaceplanes, might play in reducing those costs. The Government believe that the case for the development of such vehicles would need to be judged in the context of the likely international competition for the supply of launch services, the evolution of the uses of space and the costs of development.

The Government firmly believe that the development of such vehicles could only be afforded on an international collaborative basis and recognise the efforts made by United Kingdom companies to establish collaborative links with European and other industrial partners. The Government supported studies of winged launchers and spaceplanes through the European Space Agency—ESA—during 1992-93 and are supporting ESA studies of a rocket-assisted demonstration vehicle during 1993-94.

Textiles

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which issues he will raise in relation to the international trade in textiles when he next meets his EEC counterparts.

Mr. Needham: The provisional GATT agreement on future arrangements for international trade in textiles forms part of the continuing Uruguay round negotiations which are regularly discussed by the EC Council of Ministers.

Bankruptcies

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the latest figures for bankruptcies.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Information on insolvencies is regularly published by the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, on behalf of the Department of Trade and Industry, in "Business Briefing"; copies are available in the Library of the House. Figures for the first quarter of 1993 were published on 14 May 1993.

Post Office

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he last met the chairman of the Post Office; and what was discussed.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade last met Michael Heron, the chairman of the Post Office, on 19 May. They discussed various matters relating to the Post office and the Post Office review.

I had an introductory meeting with the chairman on 8 June.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many sub-post offices and post offices in the United Kingdom receive (a) remuneration in the form of basic payment and (b) payment for transactions carried out of less than £5,000, £6,000, £7,000, £8,000, £9,000, £10,000, £11,000 and £12,000 a year.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 16 June 1993]: Some 2,700 offices receive remuneration in the form of fixed payment, rather than on a scale reflecting units of work transacted. The vast majority of these are paid less than £5,000. The remaining offices are paid on a sliding scale. Of these, some 4,150 offices are paid less than £10,900, and 8,240 offices between £10,900 and £30,150. Precise information is not available in the form requested on numbers of offices falling into £1,000 bands.

Radioactive Sand

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the application of (a) the export licence regime and (b) radioactive materials transport regulations to the export of sand from beaches and estuaries found to be radioactively contaminated.

Mr. Needham: There is no requirement for an export licence for sand under the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1992 unless it contains radioactive materials or properties as specified in the order. Equally, if sand or other material falls within the International Atomic Energy Agency definition of radioactive material, its transport would need to comply with that organisation's standards and international regulations for the transport of hazardous cargoes by air or sea.

EC Technology Report

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he received a copy of the European Commission report EUR 14456 of 1992, "Technology and the Future of Europe"; and what assessment he has made of the relevance of the report to the impact of emerging technologies on the British industrial economy.

Mr. McLoughlin: This report, which has only recently been brought to my attention, offers a useful analysis of how we have got to where we are in Europe, what challenges we are facing, what technologies are becoming important, what effects these technologies are having on us and what changes we are likely to see in future years.

Thus the report makes a useful contribution to the debate on how emerging technologies are affecting the economies of Europe.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Hood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make available the paper submitted to the Advisory Committee on the Safety of Nuclear Installations by the nuclear installations inspectorate on generic safety issues in Magnox nuclear reactors.

Mr. Eggar: No. However, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Pembroke (Mr. Ainger) on 25 May 1993, Official Report, column 488. I understand that the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate proposes to place a copy of its report on generic Magnox power station issues in the Library of the House in due course.

Steel Imports

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the cost to British industry of trading restraints on steel imports.

Mr. Needham: A precise estimate cannot readily be made, but the cost is likely to be small. In 1992 United Kingdom steel imports were unrestricted except from North Korea. For 1993, Community-wide quotas or tariff quotas are also in force against the Commonwealth of Independent States, Georgia, Bulgaria and the Czech and Slovak Republics, but United Kingdom imports of the products concerned from these sources accounted last year for only 1·17 per cent. of total United Kingdom steel consumption. The Government have made it clear in the Community that such measures should not be applied after this year unless they are clearly justified.

Assisted Areas

Mr. Devlin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he has yet submitted to the European Commission the Government's proposal for a new assisted areas map.

Mr. Heseltine: The Government's proposals for a new assisted areas map were submitted to the European Commission on 15 June for approval. As soon as Commission approval has been received, the proposed new map will be published. In order not to prejudice negotiation with the Commission and to avoid uncertainty, no information on the proposed map will be released until Commission approval has been received.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 171, if it is his intention to publish the outcome of his Department's assisted areas review before the end of July.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 16 June 1993]: I hope to announce the outcome of the review before the House rises for the summer recess.

Loan Guarantee Scheme

Mr. Hutton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the average time taken to approve applications under the loan guarantee scheme in each of the last five years.

Mr. McLoughlin: No information is held on the average time taken to approve applications prior to January 1992. Since that time, 99 per cent. of applications were cleared by the Department of Trade and Industry within five working days of receipt.

Mr. Hutton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many applications under the loan guarantee scheme were successful in each of the last five years; and what was the average value of the loan guaranteed expressed in constant 1993 prices.

Mr. McLoughlin: Information on the scheme is held by financial year. The number of applications guaranteed in the last five years with their average value expressed in constant 1993 prices is as follows:

Year	Loans guaranteed	Average value (£) (constant 1993 prices)
1988-89	2,266	35,071
1989-90	3,204	36,323
1990-91	3,387	27,582
1991-92	2,933	24,515
1992-93	2,342	22,350

Mr. Hutton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total value of loans secured under the loan guarantee scheme in each region of Britain in each of the last five years, expressed in (a) cash and (b) constant 1993 prices.

Mr. McLoughlin: Information on the scheme is held by financial year. The total value of loans guaranteed in each region of Britain in each of the last five years, expressed in (a) cash and (b) constant 1993 prices is as follows:

Trade Associations

Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to encourage trade associations to provide an effective voice in representing the needs of business to Government.

Mr. Heseltine: I want trade associations to be effective organisations—in representing the views of members to Government Departments, the European Commission and other bodies, in promoting the international competitiveness of their member companies and in providing a strong point of focus for their industry. The principal responsibility for ensuring that this is the case falls on the companies that are their members.

But the CBI also has a role to play. And so do the Government. We must be open in our discussions with companies and industrialists about our perceptions of the effectiveness of the organisations which represent them.

In light of this, I am considering adopting a new approach to representations from trade associations to my Department. Where a lead association has emerged in a sector and the subject of proposls was relevant to the sector as a whole, I would ask the lead association to co-ordinate representations received from other associations in that sector before submitting them to me.

To support the efforts of the trade associations to promote the competitiveness of their sectors, I am inviting them to submit proposals for "competitiveness clubs" to carry out benchmarking studies of processes important to their sectors. I propose allocating up to £0·5 million to support the 10 or so most attractive schemes.

I will be setting out my views in a speech which I am delivering at the CBI today. I am placing copies of my speech in the House of Commons Library.

Post Offices

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he proposes to take to allow post offices to widen the range of activities and businesses they undertake.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 15 June 1993]: Sub-post offices may undertake an almost unlimited range of activities on the private side of their shops. Requests by Post Office Counters Ltd. to widen the range of activities undertaken by them through the post office network are considered on their merits. We have recently announced that Post Office Counters will be allowed to take on work in connection with the national lottery. More generally, we are considering the question of Counters' activities as part of our review of the structure and organisation of the Post Office.

Parcelforce

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has for the future of Parcelforce; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 15 June 1993]: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade announced on 15 July 1992 his intention of privatising Parcelforce—Official Report, column 1137. Decisions on the most appropriate method and timing for the sale will be announced in due course.

Shipbuilding

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the shipbuilding yards in the United Kingdom which have access to intervention funding; and where Her Majesty's Government have wholly or partly placed warship orders since 1985.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 15 June 1993]: The following shipbuilders yards in the United Kingdom have access to the shipbuilding intervention fund:

Appledore Shipbuilders Ltd.
Richard Dunston (Hessle) Ltd.
FBM Marine Ltd.
Ferguson Shipbuilders Ltd.
Harland and Wolff Shipbuilding & Heavy Industries Ltd.
Kvaerner Govan Ltd.
John Mowlem Construction plc—McTay Marine Division
Richards (Shipbuilders) Ltd.
Yorkshire Dry Dock Co Ltd.

All yards listed, with the exception of Appledore Shipbuilders Ltd., Ferguson Shipbuilders Ltd. and Yorkshire Dry Dock Ltd have received orders from the Ministry of Defence since 1985. However, as the shipbuilding intervention fund does not apply to orders placed by the Ministry of Defence, no support has been provided in respect of those orders.

Research and Development

Dr. Moonie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to improve the take-up of grants and other incentives for research and development by small and medium enterprises.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 16 June 1993]: The three schemes of support specifically for small and medium sized enterprises for research and development projects continue to be popular. The small firms merit award for research and technology—SMART—and support for products under research—SPUR—have maintained their levels of activity and I expect all the available funds to be committed. Regional innovation grants—RIN—have experienced a dramatic increase in take up since May 1992 when the scheme was expanded to additional geographical areas, the upper limit on the size of business was raised to fewer than 50 employees and the restriction of one grant per business was removed. In the financial years 1991-92 and 1992-93 the take-up of the schemes was as follows:

Scheme	SMART (Stages 1 and 2)		SPUR		RIN

Innovation Support

Dr. Moonie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to improve the ease of access to innovation support programmes by small and medium-sized enterprises.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 16 June 1993]: I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 2·18 of the recent White Paper "Realising Our Potential—Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology" and to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade to my hon. Friend the Member for Elmet (Mr. Batiste) on 26 May, Official Report, columns 583-86. One-stop shops will play a key role in providing access for smaller and medium-sized businesses to innovation support both from my Department and from other organisations.

Science and Engineering Research Council

Dr. Moonie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to draw up a concordat of co-operation between his Department and the Science and Engineering Research Council.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 16 June 1993]: As the recent White Paper "Realising Our Potential: A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology" makes clear, a new system of research councils will come into effect on 1 April 1994. The Government have proposed that each of these new research councils should work with each of the Government Departments in which they have a significant policy connection to draw up and publish concordats. In the case of the Department of Trade and Industry, work to conclude concordats with the existing research councils has been under-way for a number of months.

"Forward Look"

Dr. Moonie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he will designate one of his Ministers to be responsible for his Department's contribution to the Government's science and technology "Forward Look".

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 16 June 1993]: Paragraph 2.37 of the recent White Paper "Realising Our Potential—A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology" describes the preparation of the forward look by the Office of Science and Technology, and the participation of Government Departments through the existing, well-established machinery of the official and ministerial Cabinet committees on science and technology.

Refrigerators

Mr. Cryer: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the annual number of second-hand refrigerators and freezers exported to South Africa; what precautions are taken to prevent leakage of harmful gases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 15 June 1993]: Information on the export of second-hand refrigerators and freezers to South Africa is not available. Under section 33 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, it is illegal to treat, keep or dispose of controlled waste, which includes chlorofluorocarbon refrigerants, in a manner likely to cause pollution to the environment. There is no United Kingdom legislation covering discharges from refrigerators outside the United Kingdom.

Near-market Research

Dr. Moonie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what his Department's policy is with regard to the funding of near-market research.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 16 June 1993]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the recent Government White Paper "Realising Our Potential—A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology" (HMSO Cm 2250), sections 2.20 to 2.22.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Taxation and Benefits (Merger)

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent progress has been made towards merging the taxation and benefit systems; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: There are no plans to merge the tax and benefit systems. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has, however, recently set up a working group to identify options for reducing the administrative difficulties for business caused by the difference in the rules for national insurance and income tax, which he announced in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Colne Valley (Mr. Riddick) on 26 May 1993 at column 638.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the independent living fund ceased accepting applications under the special rules covering the terminally ill; and what are the financial savings from this decision.

Mr. Scott: The former independent living fund ceased to operate on 31 March 1993. At the same time two new bodies were established, one of which was the independent living (1993) fund. This fund is an independent trust. Within the discretion accorded them by the trust deed, the trustees are responsible for deciding the fund's priorities.

The trustees have recently decided that the fund's resources should be targeted on the most severely disabled people in order to allow them to live as full a life as possible in the community, rather than on terminally ill people, for whom separate provision is made both by this Department and the Department of Health as well as a number of charitable and voluntary bodies. Because the fund is cash limited, no financial savings arise from the trustees' decision.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the decision of the independent living fund not to give help to new applicants who are terminally ill.

Mr. Scott: The former independent living fund ceased to operate on 31 March 1993. At the same time, two new bodies were established, one of which was the independent living (1993) fund. This fund is an independent trust. Within the discretion accorded them by the trust deed, the trustees are responsible for deciding the fund's priorities.

Disability Allowances

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are in receipt of the mobility component of the disability living allowance in (a) Orkney and (b) Scotland.

Mr. Scott: The information is not readily available and dcould be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Compensation Scheme

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the clearance target used in the new compensation scheme, announced on 4 May, will be the target for the year the payment should have been made or the target for the year the payment was finally made.

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply to him on 21 May at columns 326-27.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will publish a leaflet for the public setting out the rules governing the new compensation scheme for late payment of social security benefits announced on 4 May, to include the clearance targets relevant to each benefit;

(2) if he will publish the full rules governing the award and calculation of compensation in the new compensation scheme for late payment of social security benefits announced on 4 May.

Mr. Hague: The special payment arrangements to compensate for late payment of benefit are not new but were introduced several years ago. We have, however, recently significantly improved the arrangements by reducing, in the majority of cases, the period before which payment of compensation is considered and linking it with the relevant clearance targets.

The arrangements are ex-gratia and so it is not considered appropriate to publish the internal guidance. However, the criteria under which payment of compensation is considered are:

The delay must be six months plus the relevant target clearance time set for the majority of claims (usually between 85 per cent. and 95 per cent.);
The delay must be caused by official error;
The arrears must be £50 or more.
There are no plans to publish a leaflet.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the clearance target for each social security benefit which will be used in the calculation of the new compensation scheme announced on 4 May.

Mr. Hague: The targets will be used in the calculation of the revised compensation arrangements will be the Secretary of State secondary targets for the clearance of new claims to the relevant benefit as published in the Benefits Agency business plan. For those benefits which do not have a Secretary of State clearance target the target will be the operational or internal target set by the BA. In the case of those benefits which do not have a secondary clearance target, the primary target will be used.

Spending Statistics

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the change in social security spending in real terms between 1979 and 1992-93 and the proportion of this rise due to (a) increased benefits levels, (b) changes in demographic and family patterns and (c) changes in levels of unemployment.

Mr. Scott: Information in the form requested is not available, but the 1993 departmental report contains information about benefit expenditure on certain categories of beneficiaries. A copy of the report is in the Library. In real terms, social security spending, at 1992-93 prices, has risen from £46,341 million in 1978-79 to £78,343 million in 1992-93.

SCOTLAND

Timex

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the sum total of Government grants received by Timex Corporation and Timex Electronic Corporation in relation to their Dundee factories since 1980, indicating the year, amount and nature of each grant.

Mr. Stewart: The principal sources of Government grants available to Timex Corporation and subsequently Timex Electronics Corporation since 1980 have comprised regional development grant—RDG—and regional selective assistance—RSA. Comprehensive records on the RDG I scheme, which was terminated in 1984, are not retained. No grants were made in respect of the RDG II scheme which was terminated in 1988. Offers of RSA under which payments were made were as follows:

Year of offer	Amount offered
1983	£700,000
1985	£270,000
1987	£865,000

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the number and proportion of children receiving school meals broken down into (a) paid and (b) free in (i) primary schools, (ii) secondary schools and (iii) special schools in each year since 1987-88.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 16 June 1993]: The information requested, taken from the annual school meals census returns for each year since 1987-88, is as follows:

Near-market Research

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what his Department's policy is with regard to the funding of near-market research.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 16 June 1993]: I refer the hon. Member to paragraphs 2.20 to 2.22 of the White Paper "Realising Our Potential—A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology".

Youth Training, Newham

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number of young people on the youth training scheme in the London borough of Newham in each of the last five years; and what percentage (a) finished their course and (b) left early.

Miss Widdecombe: Information is not available for the London borough of Newham. Results available are for east London area office, which later became London East training and enterprise council—LETEC—and includes the London borough of Newham.

Table 1 gives the number of youth training and table 2 gives completers and early leavers information, for each of the last five years.

Market Testing

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list all the market tests that have taken place in his Department since November 1992 and indicate, in each case, whether the result was the maintenance of in-house provision, or whether the service was contracted out.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Four tests have been completed since November 1992, all of which are included in the Employment Department headquarters' 1992-93 market-testing programme:

(i) van service—3 van service runs were tested, 2 were contracted out and 1 remained in-house;
(ii) travel service—was contracted out;
(iii) the Field System—was contracted out;
(iv) TECs and National Providers Unit—was contracted out.

Benlate

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what discussions are taking place with the United States Government on the investigation being undertaken by the Federal National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health into the use and effects of Benlate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 16 June 1993]: No discussions are taking place with the United States Government on any investigation by the Federal National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health into the use and effects of Benlate.

Government Departments with responsibility for pesticides maintain a watching brief on the scientific and technical literature and assess the results of relevant research. Where appropriate, the results are forwarded to the independent Advisory Committee on Pesticides—ACP.

The ACP reviewed benomyl, the active ingredient in the pesticide product Benlate, in 1992 and considered further information from a university of California study in March 1993. The ACP concluded that there was no cause for concern over the continued use of benomyl in the United Kingdom.

WALES

Open-Heart Surgery

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many adults resident in Wales had open-heart surgery outside Wales in 1992.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The latest available information is given as follows:

Cancer

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cancer cases were confirmed per 1,000 population in each county in Wales in 1972, 1977, 1982, 1987 and 1992.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Data on cancer registrations in Wales for the current district health authorities are only available from 1974. Prior to this date, the Welsh Cancer Registry only collated data for the previous districts of south and mid Wales. Data for 1992 have not yet been processed. The latest available recorded number of cases of malignant cancers per 1,000 population for each health authority in Wales for 1977, 1982 and 1987 are given in the following table:

Firms (Receivership)

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the percentage change in the number of Welsh firms going into receivership between the first four months of 1993 and the first four months of 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Official statistics on companies placed into receivership are not available separately for Wales.

Strategic Planning Guidance

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to receive the strategic planning guidance document commissioned from the Assembly of Welsh Counties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply my predecessor gave to him on 27 May at column 716.

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales have died from solvent abuse in each county in Wales in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The number of deaths to residents of Wales associated with abuse of volatile substances in each year since 1979 are given in the following table. Information at county level is not available for reasons of confidentiality.

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures are being taken to help those people in Clwyd whose homes are at risk from radon seepage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The results of further research, to delineate more accurately areas where radon levels may be higher than average, are expected in the spring of 1994. In the meantime, free measurement of radon levels is available to concerned householders living in areas where concentrations may be elevated. Home renovation grants may be available for homes where radon concentrations are found to be above the Government action level of 200 bq/cu m.

Rural Schools

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many rural schools have been closed in each county in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Information is not collected in the form requested. The available information is as follows:

Bathing Beaches

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures are being taken to ensure that the bathing beaches at Kimnel bay and Rhyl comply with the mandatory coliform standards as laid down by the EC; and when they are expected to meet these standards.

Mr. Redwood: As part of its major investment programme, Dwr Cymru is constructing a long sea outfall and a new sewage treatment works in the area which, on completion in 1995, should ensure compliance of the bathing waters at Kimnel bay and Rhyl with the mandatory bacteriological standards of the EC bathing waters directive.

Coastal Erosion

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures are being taken to protect vulnerable areas of the Welsh coast from damaging erosion; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: District councils in Wales have spent over £32 million during the past 10 years protecting vulnerable areas of the Welsh coast from erosion, with some £21 million of this being provided by the Welsh Office as grant aid under the Coast Protection Act 1949.

Maritime district councils, the National Rivers Authority and other bodies whose interests involve coastal defence have formed themselves into coastal groups extending around the Welsh coast. These groups ensure that protection of the coastline is managed strategically. The Welsh office is working closely with these groups to co-ordinate a new survey of the complete Welsh coastline and its defences.

Welsh Development Agency (Chairman)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to fill the vacancy of chairman of the Welsh Development Agency.

Mr. Redwood: I expect to make an announcement about Dr. Jones' successor shortly.

Autism

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales are known to suffer from autism; what measures are being taken to provide support and treatment to those children in Wales who suffer from autism; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Although detailed information is not held centrally, it is believed that autistic disorders affect between 2,500 and 5,000 people in Wales.

Financial assistance is provided, under the mental handicap strategy, for the development of services for people with autism where these have been identified as priorities by county joint planning teams.

Public Bodies

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 24 May, Official Report, column 467, how many vacancies there are in Welsh non-departmental public bodies.

Mr. Redwood: As at 11 June, there were 18 vacancies among appointments which I make.

Tourism

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the contribution from tourism to the gross domestic product of Wales in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Current data do not allow such an assessment to be made, but the available information on expenditure by overnight and day visitors to Wales is listed as follows. Comparable figures prior to 1989 are not available.

Estimated expenditure by overnight and day visitors to Wales

	£ million[1]

1990	1,260
1991	1,255

[1] To the nearest £5 million. Estimated expenditure by day visitors in 1988-89 is used for all years.

Details of Wales' gross domestic product at factor cost were published in the December 1992 edition of "Economic Trends" (No. 470), available in the Library of the House.

Regional Assistance

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether Aberconwy will be given priority in his discussions regarding allocation of objective 5(b) status in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: My overriding objective for the current review of the structural funds is to both retain and extend our present geographical coverage in Wales. The omission of Aberconwy from objective 5(b) status is widely recognised as an anomaly which needs to be rectified and my predecessor drew the attention of the relevant EC Commissioners to this fact earlier this year. I propose to continue to pursue vigorously its case for future eligibility.

Mental Health Act 1983

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people from Wales have been detained under section 2 of the Mental Health Act 1983 in each year since 1985.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information is in the following table:

Admissions to hospitals and units in Wales under section 2 of the Mental Health Act 1983[1]

Year
1985	275
1986	357
1987	329
1988	320
1989	327
1990	415
1991-92	380

[1] Prior to 30 September 1983 Section 2 was classified as Section 25 of the Mental Health Act 1959. The data collection system was revised in April 1991. Financial year figures are given for 1991-92.

NHS Staff

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) district nurses and (b) community midwifery staff have been employed by the NHS in Wales in each year since 1987.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Detailed breakdowns of nursing staff employed by health authorities and NHS trusts into occupational groups such as those requested are not considered reliable. However, information on the whole-time equivalent numbers of all nursing and midwifery staff is as follows.

Staff in post as at 30 September

	Number
1987	27,764
1988	27,920
1989	28,037
1990	28,093
1991	27,962
1992[1]	27,583

[1] In addition there are about 1,000 student nurses who have been reclassified as students from nurses following the introduction of Project 2000 nursing education reforms.

Trawsfynydd Lake

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the importance of Trawsfynydd lake as a centre for recreation in North Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Trawsfynydd lake is used for watersports, but has no particular significance as a centre for active recreation.

Market Testing

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all the market tests that have taken place in his Department since November 1992 and indicate, in each case, whether the result was the maintenance of in-house provision, or whether the service was contracted out.

Mr. Redwood: The contract for building management services previously undertaken by the Property Services Agency has been market tested and awarded to Kirkham, Williams and Lewis.

The catering service to the Welsh Office has also been market tested. The contract was retained by Forward Catering Service.

Landfill Sites

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many landfill sites have closed in Wales in each year since 1985; and what measures are being taken to prevent them leaking toxic liquids and explosive gases.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This information is not maintained centrally, but is available from the individual district councils.

Local Government

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many private representations he has so far received on the reorganisation of local government in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: It was made clear in the White Paper that all responses received would, unless otherwise requested, be placed in the Welsh Office's library and the Library of the House. No respondents sending in representations to the Welsh Office have indicated that they want their comments to be private.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what closing date he has set for comments on the White Paper on the reorganisation of local government in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I have not set a formal closing date. But I have made it clear that I would find it helpful to receive comments by the end of June. That will be four months after the publication of the White Paper.

Cockle Pickers

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent representations he has received from cockle pickers in Wales about access to cockles; if he will seek to introduce legislation to license cockle pickers in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: None. Responsibility for managing inshore fisheries in Wales, including the licensing of cockle pickers, rests with sea fisheries committees, whose management regimes are enforced in accordance with byelaws which require my confirmation.

Minister for Women

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his assessment so far of the consequences of his decision to designate, in his Department, a Minister having responsibilities for women; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: My right hon. Friend the Minister of State has had special responsibility for issue relating to women in Wales for some years. He has been a member of the Cabinet Sub-Committee on Women's Issues since April 1992; and prior to that was a member of the ministerial group on women's issues.

The present ministerial sub committee aims to focus Government thinking and policy on women's issues and allows my Department to contribute to the overall range of Government activity affecting women.

My right hon. Friend's role also ensures that policy measures across the wide spectrum of my Department's own responsibilities are co-ordinated to take full account of the needs of women in Wales.

Urban Investment Grants

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 11 June, Official Report, columns 346-48, if he will list the public bodies, other than the Welsh Office, which can offer urban investment grants; what are the maximum thresholds of grants above which the Welsh Office has to give separate approval; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Cardiff Bay development corporation is the only public sector body in Wales, other than the Welsh Office, which offers urban investment grants. Welsh Office approval is required if the development corporation proposes to make an offer of grant which is greater than the current delegation threshold for projects of £250,000. These delegation arrangements are no different from those which apply to other types of project.

Minister for Children

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will appoint a Minister for Children at his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: No.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Abattoirs

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in considering the practical implications of the new regulations concerning small abattoirs.

Mr. Soames: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales gave to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) on 27 May, Official Report, column 715.

Multi-annual Guidance Programme

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the minimum and maximum number of half days provided under the multi-annual guidance programme obligation and the average for each segment of the fleet; and what relations those figures bear to the provisions made under the Sea Fish Conservation Act 1992 for (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland, and by each port.

Mr. Jack: The United Kingdom's multi-annual guidance programme is expressed primarily in terms of capacity. The United Kingdom's target is a 19 per cent. reduction in capacity—45 per cent. of which can be achieved by reductions in time at sea. Time at sea will be controlled on an individual basis and initially the Sea Fish Licensing (Time at Sea) (Principles) Order will restrict fishing patterns to 1991 levels.

Fish Catches (Monitoring)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many EC fishery officers are employed to monitor fish catches in each EC country that possesses an ocean fishing fleet.

Mr. Jack: The most recent information on numbers of fisheries officers employed in member states with ocean fishing fleets is contained in a Commission report on monitoring implementation of the common fisheries policy, published in March 1992 a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Floods

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has to provide additional funding to help meet the costs resulting from the recent floods in Devon and Cornwall.

Mr. Jack: Local authorities that have incurred an exceptional financial burden as a consequence of the recent flooding events can apply to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment for activation of the Bellwin scheme of emergency financial assistance. Each case is considered on its merits.

Grant aid is available to local authorities and the National Rivers Authority from the Ministry for new and improved flood defence works. Grant provision has increased in recent years and priority is given to flood warning and urban flood and sea defence works.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Shipping and Shipbuilding

10. Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures are under consideration to arrest the decline of the British shipping and shipbuilding industries.

Mr. Dorrell: Along with the rest of United Kingdom industry, ship owners and builders are operating with the lowest rate of inflation for 30 years; the lowest interest rates in the EC; and the lowest rate of corporation tax in the EC. My hon. Friend the Economic Secretary will be meeting the Chamber of Shipping shortly to examine their case for special measures.

Unemployment

12. Ms Short: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect on the public sector borrowing requirement of a halving of the rate of unemployment.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Lady to the reply given earlier to the hon. Member for Knowsley, South (Mr. O'Hara).

Any attempt to quantify the effect of changes in unemployment on the PSBR would depend on a large number of assumptions, and would be subject to great uncertainty. In particular, there are no reliable estimates of the effects of unemployment on tax revenues.

23. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effects of Government economic policies on unemployment over the past year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The Government's success in bringing down underlying inflation to its lowest levels for 25 years has created a secure foundation for sustained recovery. Interest rates are at their lowest levels for 15 years, and manufacturing unit wage cost performance is the best on record. These developments; combined with the measures for business and the unemployed in the March Budget, provide the basis for sustainable, non-inflationary growth and improving employment prospects, as recent labour market indicators show.

Public Sector Pay

13. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Government's intentions for public sector pay for 1993-94.

Mr. Portillo: As announced in the last autumn statement, public sector pay restraint, which limits all settlement within the range zero to 1·5 per cent., will be applied for one year. There can be no catching-up settlements following that. Public sector pay is an important part of public expenditure and will obviously have to be kept under tight control.

Manufacturing (Unit Wage Growth)

14. Mr. Spring: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his latest figures for unit wage growth in manufacturing in the United Kingdom, Germany and Japan.

Sir John Cope: Over the last year unit wage costs in Britain fell by almost 3 per cent. In comparison, they rose by 9 per cent. in Japan and 10 per cent. in Germany.

Tax Changes

15. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the impact of recent tax changes on economic recovery.

Mr. Dorrell: I have every confidence that the measures announced in the Budget will ensure recovery is sustainable. They demonstrate the Government's commitment to low inflation and sound public finances.

Unemployed People (Tax Burden)

16. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the direct and indirect tax burden is on a single person in receipt of unemployment benefit.

Mr. Dorrell: A single person receiving unemployment benefit with no other source of income will pay no income tax. The amount of indirect tax paid will depend on his pattern of spending.

Financial Policy

17. Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Governor of the Bank of England to discuss financial policy.

21. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has recently held with the Governor of the Bank of England to discuss financial policy.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I meet the Governor from time to time to discuss a range of issues.

Taxation

18. Mr. Davidson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest estimate he has about the income distribution of the direct and indirect tax burden.

Mr. Dorrell: The latest information is given in the May 1993 edition of "Economic Trends".

11 Downing Street (Rental Value)

19. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the rental value of the residential accommodation at 11 Downing street.

Sir John Cope: The Treasury is charged a rent of £139,359 per annum for No. 11 Downing street through the Government's internal charging, property repayment system. The residential element is not separately assessed.

G7 Summit

20. Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he will be proposing at the G7 summit in Tokyo in July to enhance international economic growth.

Sir John Cope: The continuing weakness of the world economy is a serious cause for concern. Tackling the problem will require short-term national measures to boost confidence and promote recovery and medium-term measures to strengthen the sustainable rate of growth. The appropriate medium-term measures include a reduction of budget deficits and structural reform to make markets work better. However, the one single measure that will do most to promote non-inflationary growth is a successful outcome to the GATT negotiations.

Ministerial Responsibilities

22. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to reorganise the responsibilities undertaken by Ministers in his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have no plans at present.

Unemployment Benefit

24. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the proportion of public spending accounted for by unemployment benefit.

Mr. Portillo: In 1992-93, unemployment benefit accounted for 0·7 per cent. of general Government expenditure, excluding privatisation proceeds.

VAT (Fuel)

25. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of VAT on domestic fuel on inflation; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: The extension of VAT to domestic fuel and power is estimated to add just under 0·4 per cent. to the retail prices index in 1994-95, and just over 0·4 per cent. further in 1995-96.

Government Borrowing

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he intends to take to reduce Government borrowing.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The economic recovery will reduce Government borrowing. We shall also maintain firm control of public expenditure and implement the tax measures announced in the Budget.

Trinidad Terms

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn (Mr. Jones) of 11 February 1993, Official Report, column 719, what reasons underlie the treatment of levels of debt of other countries as confidential; and if such treatment has been requested by all the countries concerned.

Mr. Nelson: The answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn related to bilateral debt reduction undertaken by all of the Paris club group of creditor countries. We do not hold details of bilateral obligations between all debtor and creditor countries. Moreover, on United Kingdom bilateral debt, the details of individual debtors' positions are confidential to the country concerned and we cannot publish these figures without the consent of the authorities.

Bank of England

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has recently held with the Governor of the Bank of England about the state of the economy.

Mr. Nelson: My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer meets the Governor from time to time to discuss a range of issues.

Income Tax

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the expected current annual yield from income tax at the basic, lower and higher rates; what are the comparable figures for 10 and 15 years ago; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Estimates of taxpayers' income tax liabilities at the various rate bands are as follows:

£ billion

	1978-79[1]	1983-84[1]	1993-94
Lower rate	4·4	—	10·8
Basic rate	13·7	29·7	36·5
Higher rate	1·9	3·5	12·8
Investment income surcharge	0·2	0·2	—
Total income tax liability	20·2	33·4	60·1

[1] For years prior to 1990-91 liability is determined by the taxable income of the tax unit (ie single person or married couple). From 1990-91 onwards following the introduction of Independent Taxation each individual's liability is calculated separately.

Open-ended Investment Companies

Mr. Watts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made on legislation to allow the introduction of open-ended investment companies.

Mr. Nelson: Following informal consultations with the unit trust industry and others, the Treasury intends to publish later this year a consultation document on the proposed structure of onshore open-ended investment companies. This will discuss proposals for regulations under section 2(2) of the European Communities Act 1972 to permit, as a first step, the introduction of open-ended investment companies which fulfil the requirements of EC Council directive 85/611—the UCITS directive.

DEFENCE

School of Aeronautical Engineering

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to move the School of Aeronautical Engineering to Arborfield.

Mr. Hanley: The principles on which the further restructuring of the Army's training organisation were to be based were announced on 16 December 1992. Much detailed work has been done to identify the future training locations for the Army, but no decisions have yet been taken.

British Army of the Rhine

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British soldiers are currently serving in Germany.

Mr. Hanley: The current military strength of the British Army of the Rhine is some 39,000.

Army Recruitment

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Regular Army recruiting offices operate a capping system whereby a top figure of potential recruits has been allocated irrespective of the number of potential applicants.

Mr. Hanley: Individual Army careers information offices do not operate capping systems. The total number of recruits into the Army is, however, limited by the number of vacancies which are forecast to arise. The acceptance of any potential recruit into the Army is therefore determined centrally and on merit, regardless of the Army careers information office to which he or she applied.

House Sales

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will establish a specific housing trust to oversee the disposal of MOD houses to local authorities and housing associations.

Mr. Hanley: There are no plans to set up such a body. It remains our policy to dispose of surplus married quarters as quickly as possible, with priority given to the services discount scheme.

Ulverston Drill Hall

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many offers were received for the purchase of the Ulverston drill hall; and when his Department intends to arrive at a decision as to which offer to accept.

Mr. Hanley: Four offers have been received and all are still being considered. A final decision will not be taken on which offer to accept until an alternative training venue has been found for the cadets who use the hall at present.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Clerks

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, what is the number of Clerks in the Department of the Clerk of the House; and how many are in grades with a higher salary than that to which a Member of Parliament's salary is linked.

Mr. Beith: Sixty and 35 respectively.

Day Nursery

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee when he expects a day nursery to be installed and operating within the precincts of the Palace of Westminster.

Notes:

1. Prisoners sentenced to detention during the Secretary of State's pleasure are included.
2. The table excludes licensees in whose cases the period served for retribution took into account significant assistance given to the authorities and prisoners whose licences have been revoked.

Coronary Angiogram Procedures

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what limits have been placed on the number of coronary angiogram procedures which can be performed each week in the Royal group of hospitals; and what effect these are having on the volume of candidates being considered for coronary artery bypass grafting.

Mr. Ancram: Cardiologists at the Royal group of hospitals treat patients on the basis of clinical need. The present capacity of the coronary catheterisation unit at the Royal group of hospitals, which performs coronary angiograms, is being fully utilised. No artificial restrictions have been placed on the number of procedures performed.

Cardiac Surgery

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how the waiting list for cardiac surgical operations in Northern Ireland has increased or decreased during the last 12 months.

Mr. Ancram: The total number waiting in Northern Ireland for treatment in the cardiac surgery specialty fell by 205 between March 1992 and March 1993 from 964 to 759.

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how the average waiting time for those people waiting for their first appointment with a cardiac surgeon has increased or decreased during the last 12 months.

Mr. Ancram: The information is not available. Information on waiting time for first appointments was not collected centrally until this year.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the buildings currently owned or rented by his Department, together with (a) the estimated value, (b) the annual rent and (c) the annual maintenance cost of each building in the current financial year.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment on 8 June, Official Report, column 194. In addition to arrangements made by Property Holdings, projected expenditure by the Office of Public Service and Science during 1993-94 on maintenance in buildings occupied by the Department is £651,000.

Scientific Links (Japan)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Rochford (Dr. Clark) on 7 June, Official Report, columns 17-18, how many members the advisory group on scientific links with Japan and Pacific rim nations will have; what criteria he will use to choose the members of the advisory group; and if he will make it his policy to ensure the scientific implications of civil nuclear collaboration and co-operation is included on the agenda of the first meeting.

Mr. David Davis: The composition of the advisory group has not yet been decided. It will include representatives of industry, academia and Government who have extensive experience of scientific co-operation with this region. No agenda has yet been drawn up for the first meeting, but it will look at the whole range of science and technology relations, to identify areas where co-operation can be strengthened.

Citizens Charter

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the total cost to date of all the public information published and distributed as a consequence of the citizens charter programme.

Mr. Waldegrave: A key aim of the charter is that customers should have ready access to public services through clear and effective information. It is not possible to provide a total cost for all the charter-related information published and distributed: charters, charter standard statements and explanatory leaflets have been issued by a wide range of public service providers, including Government Departments, agencies, nationalised industries and local authorities.

HEALTH

Respiratory Stress Syndrome

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children have died from respiratory stress syndrome in each year since 1983.

Mr. Sackville: Numbers of deaths (underlying cause) from respiratory distress syndrome ICD[1] 769 for the years 1983 to 1991 is contained in the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys publication "Mortality statistics: cause" series DH2 nos. 10-18; copies of which are available in the Library. The information for 1992 is shown in the table.

Number of deaths from Respiratory Distress Syndrome (ICD 769)[1] for England and Wales, 1992[2]

Age group[3]	Number
Under 1	8

[1] International Classification of Diseases, ninth revision.

[2] Data from 1983 to 1992 are not comparable due to the changes to cause of death coding in 1986. From 1986 the number of deaths by cause excluded neonatal deaths, ie deaths of babies aged under 28 days. A new neonatal death certificate was introduced in January 1986, from which it is not possible to assign an underlying cause of death. Consequently, table 2 in series DH2 does not include neonatal deaths except in the figures for all causes.

[3] Deaths occurred only in those aged under one.

Battens Disease

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have died from Battens disease in each year since 1983.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Intensive Care Cots

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures she is taking to increase the number of neonatal intensive care cots available in NHS hospitals.

Mr. Sackville: Health care provision, including neonatal intensive care facilities is a matter for decision by purchasing health authorities in the light of their assessment of local needs. The Clinical Standards Advisory Group, set up by the United Kingdom Health Departments, was asked to examine access to and availability of a number of specialised services, including neonatal intensive care, following the introduction of the national health service reforms. Its report and the Government's response will be published shortly. Health authorities will need to take account of these in planning future provision.

Bone Marrow Transplants

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many bone marrow transplants have been carried out in each year since 1983.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Psychiatric Patients

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give the percentage on average of NHS psychiatric patients in private hospitals in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Market Testing

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list all the market tests that have taken place in her Department since November 1992 and indicate, in each case, whether the result was the maintenance of in-house provision, or whether the service was contracted out.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Dundee, East (Mr. McAllion) on 15 February at col. 76.

Since then, the market test of the 1994 health survey has been completed. The contract has been awarded jointly to Social and Community Planning Research and University College, London. The health survey has previously been conducted by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys.

Condoms

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the approximate budget for condoms in each region and in total for NHS family planning clinics in each of the last five years; and what percentage of this budget was used to provide condoms for general practices.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the expenditure on drugs by the family health services in England in 1992-93.

Dr. Mawhinney: The final outturn for 1992-93 is not yet available, but the latest supply estimate for the year was £2,660 million.

Health Expenditure

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of gross national product was spent on health in the EC as a whole, the United Kingdom and the USA in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Sackville: Total national health service expenditure in the United Kingdom as a percentage of gross domestic product (GDP) in each year since 1988-89 is shown in the table. GDP has been used rather than gross national product for consistency with other sources of information on public spending. Figures for the European Community and the United States of America are not available on a comparable basis.

Year	Gross expenditure as a percentage of GDP
1988-89	5·1

Help Us to Help You Campaign

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money she expects to save by the Help Us to Help You campaign; what mechanisms are or will be put in place to monitor the savings that are being made by the campaign; what is the total budget for the Help Us to Help You campaign; and how much of that budget has already been spent.

Dr. Mawhinney: Help Us to Help You is an initiative to help the development of local campaigns to promote messages about how people can help the health service improve its efficiency and effectiveness and thereby help other patients. It will be for the national health service locally to decide on the exact form and resourcing of local campaigns. Any savings will depend upon the effectiveness of these local campaigns and cannot be estimated centrally.

All regional, district and family health service authorities, NHS trusts, directly-managed hospital units and community health councils have been sent copies of a Help Us to Help You information pack which gives advice about how to develop a local campaign. The total cost of producing the Help Us to Help You packs was £31,870. Copies of the packs are available in the Library.

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hip operations were carried out during the last 10 years for which figures are available.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Street Children

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the United Kingdom-based non-governmental organisations assisting street children which are receiving funds from his Department in the current year, together with the amount of funding.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Complete information is not yet available for the current year. However, in 1992-93 we supported, through the joint funding scheme, the following NGOs specifically to assist street children:

Non-governmental organisation	£
Childhope	34,759
National Children's Home	33,176
World Vision	117,333
CAFOD	13,210
Oxfam	17,552

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total United Kingdom bilateral disbursement for aid to street children in 1991 and 1992; how much was spent in each country receiving this help; and what are the planned contributions, by country, for 1993.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We help street children through a number of specific activities but, more significantly, by integrating their needs into projects with a wider poverty focus. Information about the location and costs of all projects where street children may be among the beneficiaries could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Thalidomide

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations through the United Nations and other appropriate international bodies to warn of the dangers of thalidomide used in Brazil and elsewhere.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 14 June 1993]: We have consulted the World Health Organisation about the use of thalidomide. WHO has confirmed that it recommends its use for the treatment of certain immunological reactions that may occur in leprosy patients either before or during specific treatment. However, because of its well-known embryopathic effects, WHO stipulates that the drug should be given only to men and postmenopausal women; women of child-bearing age should never be given thalidomide.

WHO guidance on the use of thalidomide is made available to national Governments, who are responsible for the control of the manufacture, distribution and use of this drug in their own countries.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Attorney-General how many prosecutions handled by the Crown Prosecution Service have been initiated in magistrates courts in each of the most recent 12 months for which figures are available.

The Attorney-General: The figures are not available in the form requested by the hon. Member. I will write to him.

EMPLOYMENT

Training Credits

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which training and enterprise councils are currently using training credits within their adult training programmes.

Miss Widdecombe: In 1992-93, the following training and enterprise councils (TEC)s started national development projects involving the use of training credits in adult training programmes: Bradford; Barnsley and Doncaster; Rotherham; Manchester; South and East Cheshire; Hertfordshire; Birmingham; East London; and South Thames. Good practice from these projects will be available later this year.

In addition, South and East Cheshire TEC and Northumberland TEC are using training credits and a number of other TECs are considering or developing projects using existing resources.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 6 May, Official Report, column 236, what are the appropriate circumstances in which the Government will encourage training and enterprise councils to consider adult credits.

Miss Widdecombe: Training and enterprise councils (TEC)s are required to set out a comprehensive approach to the delivery of adult training in their draft business plans, which are the subject of annual negotiation with my regional directors. The approach adopted by each TEC will depend on the circumstances prevailing in its area, and may include adult credits where appropriate.

Investors in People

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many employers in each training and enterprise council area have been given the investors in people award; and what is the accreditation standard for this award.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is available from the 1981 and 1991 censuses of population and can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action the Health and Safety Executive is taking to examine the safety of AWE Aldermaston; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: On 13 May 1993 the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) announced its intention to carry out a comprehensive review of health and safety management systems and standards of risk control at all atomic weapons establishment (AWE) premises, including Aldermaston.

The review team will include HSE specialist radiation, factory, explosives, and nuclear installations inspectors, employment medical advisers and experts in health and safety management systems.

A report will be published and HSE will be as open about the findings of the review as national security considerations will allow. HSE does not expect to complete the review until the spring of 1994 at the earliest.

AWE and the Ministry of Defence have indicated their full support and their wish to co-operate with the review.

Coal Mines Fatalities

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many fatalities per 1,000 man-shifts there were for each of the last 10 complete years for which statistics are available (a) in private coal mines, (b) among sub-contract workers doing work for British Coal and (c) amongst British Coal's employees.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A fatality rate based on man-shifts is not available for private mines.

The table shows the fatalities per 100,000 man-shifts at British Coal Corporation—BCC—mines from 1985-86, the first year for which a discrete rate for BCC mines was calculated by the Health and Safety Executive's—HSE—inspectorate of mines.

Fatal accidents to sub-contractors at BCC mines are included in the rates shown in the table. Separate records for sub-contractors have not been maintained by the HSE.

Youth Training

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many young people entered employment in 1992 with no access to training.

Mr. Boswell: I have been asked to reply.

Information on young people entering employment with no access to training is not collected centrally.

WALES

European Funding

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent representations he has made to the European Commission on the subject of European funding.

Mr. Redwood: My predecessor met with Commissioner Millan on 15 March and also with Commissioners Steichen, Ruberti and Flynn on 2 April to discuss a wide range of issues of mutual interest. He also wrote to Commissioner Matutues since it proved impossible for them to meet. In each instance he invited them to visit Wales but we must wait and see whether these invitations are taken up. I also intend, however, to visit Brussels later in the year and to meet a number of the Commissioners.

Cattle Identification

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the issuing of cattle identification documents; and what plans he has to review the administrative arrangements associated with the beef premium scheme in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: I have received several representations about cattle identification documents and am monitoring the introduction of the new scheme to see what scope exists to simplify arrangements.

Bellwin

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how much his Department has paid in each of the last five years under the Bellwin formula to local authorities in Wales; if he will list each receiving authority; how much they received; how much each authority had to spend before receiving any grant; and what percentage the grant represented of that total eligible expenditure by the authority on the particular emergency;

(2) how much his Department has paid in grant in each of the last five years under the Bellwin formula to local authorities in Wales; and if he will list (a) each receiving authority, (b) how much each authority had to spend up to and beyond the threshold before receiving grant and (c) what percentage the grant represented of that expenditure at (b).

Mr. Redwood: The information required is given in the table:

Flood Damage

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will disregard emergency expenditure by local authorities on emergencies such as the recent flooding in west and north Wales from his calculations on capping limits for local authority expenditure in 1993-94.

Mr. Redwood: Local authorities have set their budgets for 1993-94 and as indicated in the reply given by my predecessor to the hon. Member for Monmouth (Mr. Evans) on 26 April at columns 284-85, the only authority in west or north Wales being considered for capping is Aberconwy borough council. On 21 May Aberconwy borough council challenged the proposed cap and put forward an alternative cap that is the same as its budget for 1993-94. I am still considering the authority's representations and I intend to announce my decision shortly.

SOCIAL SECURITY

New Age Travellers

Mr. Aspinwall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures are being taken to ensure that benefits payable to new age travellers comply with all the relevant rules.

Mr. Burt: New age travellers must satisfy the same conditions of entitlement to benefit as all other people. Those who claim benefit because of unemployment must be available for and actively seeking work, and all claimants are tested by the employment service to confirm that they are taking steps to find employment.

In order to ensure stricter compliance with Government objectives regulations were introduced in December 1992 to remove entitlement to income support from able-bodied single people and childless couples who do not actively seek work.

National Insurance

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the change in overall marginal tax rate, including national insurance, for each tax banding, if the national insurance upper earning limit were removed; and how much income that would raise in a full year for the Exchequer.

Mr. Hague: If the upper earnings limit for national insurance contributions were removed, the effect on marginal tax rates would be as follows:

Marginal tax rate including national insurance

[1] Annual income	With an upper earnings limit per cent.	Without an upper earnings limit per cent.
£3,445—£5,945	29	29
£5,946—£21,840	34	34
£21,841—£27,145	25	34
£27,146 and above	40	49

Note:
1. Assumes single person's tax allowance of £3,445.
2. Assumes that earnings for NI purposes are spread evenly throughout the year.
3. Annual upper earnings limit for the payment of NI contributions @ £21,840.

Removal of the limit would increase national insurance contribution yield by £2·7 billion in a full year.

Invalidity Benefits

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in the Dewsbury constituency are currently in receipt of invalidity payments; and how many were in receipt of invalidity payments in June 1992.

Mr. Scott: I understand from Mr. Michael Bichard the chief executive of the Benefits Agency that the information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Staff

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons are operating below their establishment for prison officers; and what is the shortfall of staff in each of these prisons.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Jim Callaghan, dated 17 June 1993.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about officer staffing levels in Prison Service establishments.

The attached annex lists those establishments with fewer officers than their target staffing figures on 30 April. I should add that on 1 April we devolved to governors responsibility for recruiting prison officers and deciding the number and mix of staff within their running costs budgets.

Criminal Records

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his consultation paper on criminal records will be issued; and what provision will be made in respect of article 13 of the EC data protection directive in connection with the provision to prohibit a demand by a third party on a person that he should exercise his right of access to data in order to communicate that data to the third party.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I expect to publish a consultation document in the course of the summer which, amongst other things, will refer to article 13 of the draft EC directive.

Market Testing

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all the market tests that have taken place in his Department since November 1992 and indicate, in each case, whether the result was the maintenance of in-house provision, or whether the service was contracted out.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Home Office functions which have been subject to market testing or contracting out since November 1992 is listed showing, in cases where the exercise has been completed, whether the result was the maintenance of in-house provision or whether the service was contracted out. The table also shows those market tests which have been discontinued. Except where an outcome is indicated, work is continuing.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy on the principle in article 13 of the EC data protection directive seeking to prohibit a demand by a third party on a person that he should exercise his right of access to data in order to communicate that data to the third party.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Government are sympathetic towards the concern which has been expressed about what is known as enforced subject access, but have encountered problems both of principle and practice in devising means of preventing it.

Bail Hostels

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the north Yorkshire bail hostel will be used for (a) people who would otherwise be remanded on bail in their own home, (b) people who would otherwise be remanded in custody, (c) ex-offenders not awaiting trial and (d) only for people from north Yorkshire.

Mr. Maclean: Bail hostels are solely for bailees who are deemed suitable by the court to reside in a hostel and who might otherwise have to be remanded in custody. They are unlikely to be used for people who could be bailed to their home address. Most of the residents will be local people, but hostels may accept referrals from other areas.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision he has made for the payment of compensation to people living in the vicinity of Alexander hotel, York who have suffered financial loss as a result of plans to use the hotel as a bail hostel.

Mr. Maclean: None.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the suitability of the Alexander hotel in Boroughbridge road in York for use as a bail hostel.

Mr. Maclean: The North Yorkshire probation service considered 16 possible sites for a bail hostel. A feasibility study indicated that the Alexander hotel was the best option in terms of operational needs and value for money.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons the Home Office has decided to open a bail hostel in north Yorkshire.

Mr. Maclean: North Yorkshire is one of eight probation areas in England and Wales which does not have an approved bail or probation-bail hostel. Outline approval for a hostel was given in 1991 on the basis that there was a sufficient number of defendants dealt with by the courts in and around York to justify a hostel there, bearing in mind that, when the courts wished to grant bail with a condition of residence in an approved hostel, north Yorkshire probation service had to rely on hostel places in other areas.

Blakenhurst Prison

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the projected staffing levels for Blakenhurst prison by job title/function.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 17 June 1993]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. John McAllion dated 17 June 1993:

HM PRISON BLAKENHURST

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question on the projected staffing levels for Blakenhurst Prison by job title/function.

HM Prison Blakenhurst has a Senior Management Team of nine. It is envisaged that when Blakenhurst is operating at full capacity it will employ a total workforce of approximately 300 staff of whom 276 will be certificated Prison Custody Officers.

To achieve optimum effectiveness and efficiency it is the contractor's intention to deploy staff imaginatively and flexibly by matching the requirements of the prison to the actual duties to be performed.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Company Investigations

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the companies investigations branch of his Department will obtain a copy of the book, details of which have been submitted to him.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 15 June 1993]: All evidence is carefully considered by the appropriate authorities where matters may lead to investigation by my Department.

French Security Services

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has made to his French counterpart in relation to activities by French intelligence agents in British aerospace and defence firms.

Mr. Heseltine: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on Monday 7 June, Official Report, column 12.

Matrix Churchill

Mr. Ainsworth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consideration is now being given to payment of compensation to employees of Matrix Churchill who suffered financial loss as a result of the collapse of that company.

Miss Widdecombe: I have been asked to reply.

The Employment Department made payments to former employees of Matrix Churchill last year totalling something over £950,000 covering redundancy payments, arrears of pay, and compensation for lack of statutory notice. The payments made were the normal statutory payments made to employees of insolvent companies under employment legislation.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Departmental Expenditure

Sir Rhodes Boyson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will publish the total amount of expenditure on provision within the responsibility of his Department in (a) England, (b) Greater London and (c) the south-east, excluding Greater London, for each year from 1982-83 distinguishing between current and capital expenditure, though excluding local authority credit approvals/capital allocations.

Mr. Brooke: The information is not available within my Department and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost. The great majority of this Department's expenditure goes to agencies and bodies sponsored by the Department of National Heritage. My Department seeks to ensure that the money is used in pursuit of the aims and objectives of the bodies concerned, but detailed spending decisions are the responsibility of these bodies. No systematic analysis of expenditure by geographical region is made.

Correspondence

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the reasons behind current delays in his Department's correspondence.

Mr. Brooke: The volume of correspondence, concentrated in one or two areas of particular interest, has been such that there have been unacceptable delays in replies in some cases. But now that my Department is in two locations instead of seven, with the benefits this should bring in terms of information technology and greater ease of communication, I hope that it will be possible to avoid backlogs and quicken the pace at which my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State and I reply to letters.

SCOTLAND

School Meals

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average price of a school meal in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in cash and real terms in each year since 1979.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The average cost to pupils of schooi meals is not collected centrally. Pupils can obtain either a fixed meal at a set charge or a cafeteria style meal for which the charge will vary depending on the individual pupil's choice. The tables give details of the fixed price meal charge levied by each regional authority in each year since 1979 in cash and in real terms. The level of the charge made is at the discretion of the regional authority.

Nursing Homes

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps are currently taken to ensure (a) proper inspection of nursing homes' care of elderly residents and (b) regular visits by general practitioners to monitor the health of residents and the carrying out of any necessary treatment, including removal to hospital.

Mr. Stewart: Under the Nursing Homes Registration (Scotland) Act 1938, as amended, health boards as registering authorities have a statutory requirement to visit and inspect all nursing homes in their area, including any register or records required, at least twice a year and to carry out spot checks at any reasonable time.

The person registered must provide or make arrangements for the provision of medical services for any residents in the home and must ensure that arrangements for dealing with medical emergencies of residents are agreed with the health board. Residents are also entitled to receive visits from their own general practitioner on request.

Strathblane Hospital

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to intervene to prevent the closure of Strathblane hospital for respite care for mentally and severely handicapped children.

Mr. Stewart: The organisation of hospital and respite care for the Greater Glasgow area is a matter for the health board. No decisions have been made affecting Strathblane hospital, any such proposal would be subject to public consultation and thereafter referred to Ministers for final decision.

Water Privatisation

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions his Department has been holding with Strathclyde regional council on water privatisation.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 16 June 1993]: There have been no such discussions.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information his departmental officials have given to the press concerning discussions between his Department and Strathclyde regional council on water privatisation.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 16 June 1993]: There have been no such discussions, and no such information has been given.

Manoucher Tehrani

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to review the case of Manoucher Tehrani, former consultant surgeon at Inverclyde royal infirmary; what consideration he has given to the recent papers supplied to him by Mr. Tehrani; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 17 June 1993]: My right hon. Friend received certain papers about Mr. M. Tehrani from the Tehrani action group to which he has given consideration. He has concluded that it is not necessary or appropriate for an inquiry to be conducted in relation to the matters raised by the action group.

Census

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the interval between holding and publishing the results of the census in (a) 1981 and (b) 1991; and if he will make a statement on the validity of the results of the 1991 census.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 17 June 1993]: Census results are published as a series of monitors and fuller reports for each region and for Scotland as a whole, followed by a series of reports for specific topics—mainly for Great Britain but with some Scottish reports. Comparison with the 1981 census publication dates is given in the table.

	1981 Census	1991 Census
CENSUS DAY	5 April 1981	21 April 1991
Preliminary Report, Scotland	June 1981	July 1991
Region Monitors
Start	January 1982	June 1992
End	June 1982	October 1992
Scotland Monitor	July 1982	December 1992
Region Reports[1]
Start	September 1982	December 1992
End	March 1983	April 1993
Scotland Report
Part 1	August 1983	June 1993
Part 2	December 1983	August 1993[2]
Topic Reports
Start	April 1983	February 1993
End	September 1984	Spring 1994[2]

Owing to some new questions and more detailed analyses, the 1991 Census publications contain roughly twice as many statistics as their 1981 equivalents.

[1] Region reports were published in four parts per region for 1981 and two parts for 1991.

[2] Planned dates.

Computer processing of 1991 data was delayed as a result of a problem discovered during a routine data quality audit. Some 400,000 people in Great Britain, who were apparently not students, had completed the question on term time address as though they were students, causing them to be wrongly allocated in initial processing. More information about this problem is given in "Census Newsletter No. 18", a copy of which is in the Library. The full publication programme is still expected to be completed more quickly than was the case for the 1981 census.

On the validity of the results, the Registrar General included a statement entitled "1991 Census under-enumeration: guidance for users in Scotland" as Annex A to the 1991 "Census Monitor for Scotland", a copy of which is in the Library. This indicated that the main 1991 census tables are in fact more complete than the equivalent 1981 tables and that the effects of under-enumeration in the 1991 census are likely to be unimportant for the majority of users.

Further information on the coverage and quality of the census results will be published in a series of OPCS reports based on analysis of the census validation survey for Great Britain.

DEFENCE

Trident

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the factors that will bear upon his Department's decision as to the number of nuclear warheads that will be deployed on the Trident submarines.

Mr. Aitken: We will deploy on Trident only the minimum number of warheads we judge necessary to provide effective deterrence, presenting any potential aggressor with the prospect of unacceptable damage.

Defence Export Services Organisation

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long the contract of the current head of the Defence Export Services Organisation has to run; and what is his annual salary.

Mr. Aitken: The present head of Defence Export Services, Sir Alan Thomas, has one year still to run of his five-year contract on secondment from Raytheon Europe Ltd. His current annual salary is £128,150 plus a performance bonus of up to an annual maximum of £30,000.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of staff of the Defence Export Services Organisation are seconded from industry; and what functions they perform.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 18 June 1992, Official Report, column 671.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff are employed in each of the overseas offices of the Defence Export Services Organisation; what is the estimated annual cost of the office in each case; and how many staff are employed in the London office.

Mr. Aitken: The following is a breakdown of the DESO overseas offices, the number of staff employed in each office and the 1993-94 estimated cost of each office:

Office	Staff numbers	Estimated costs £'000
Riyadh	2	84
Kuwait	1	76
New Delhi	3	78
Kuala Lumpar	7	154
Seoul	3	65
Canberra	2	77
Jakarta	4	63
Bangkok	2	86
Ankara	1	58

Note: 263 staff are employed in London.

Low Flying

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-level flying hours were flown by the RAF in each of the past five years.

Mr. Hanley: The total numbers of hours booked—but not necessarily flown—at low level in the United Kingdom by all users of the UK low-flying system in each of the past five years were as follows:

Year	Hours booked
1988	106,100
1989	111,037
1990	110,795
1991	96,943
1992	108,806

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many representations he has received on the subject of low-level flying; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: In the past 12 months we have received 5,698 such representations from members of the public and 272 from hon. Members.

Challenger Tank

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to proceed with the Challenger 1 upgrade programme.

Mr. Aitken: Studies to examine how best to equip the Army's six Challenger 1 tank regiments have now been completed, and the results are being evaluated. An announcement on the way forward will be made as soon as this evaluation is completed.

Rosyth Minesweeper Flotilla

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 18 May, Official Report, column 146, whether contingency plans exist to base the minesweeper flotilla in either Portsmouth or Plymouth if the Royal Navy's surface fleet presence at Rosyth is ended; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: We have no plans to end the minor war vessel presence at Rosyth naval base.

Aldermaston

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he proposes to take to improve the safety of AWE Aldermaston following concerns expressed after inspections by the Health and Safety Executive; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: AWE is, and will continue to be, subject to independent inspection by the Health and Safety Executive—HSE—under the terms of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974. The establishment co-operates fully in these inspections and acts upon any recommendations made by the HSE. We will continue to develop safety improvements at AWE wherever possible.

Royal Naval Engineering College, Manadon

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the investment appraisal study carried out into the Royal Naval engineering college at Manadon.

Mr. Hanley: A copy of the consultative document relating to our proposals for in-service first degree engineer officer training conducted at the Royal Naval engineering college at Manadon, Plymouth was placed in the Library of the House on 25 May 1993. This document contains information on the financial implications of our proposals.

"Panorama" Interview

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what considerations underlay the decision by the Minister for Defence Procurement to decline an interview to "Panorama" for its programme broadcast on 14 June;

(2) what considerations underlay the decision not to allow the administrative director of AWE Aldermaston to answer questions on "Panorama" on 14 June.

Mr. Aitken: My Department chose not to participate directly in the "Panorama" programme because we believed that the treatment would be neither even-handed nor objective.

Dartmouth Naval College

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of Dartmouth naval college.

Mr. Hanley: I have nothing to add to the answer that my predecessor, my right hon. Friend the Member for Epsom and Ewell (Mr. Hamilton) gave to my hon. Friend the Member for South Hams (Mr. Steen) on 24 March, Official Report, column 612.

Portland Naval Base

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the cumulative net present values for the Portland and Devonport options in the investment appraisal which supported his Department's decision to close Portland naval base; and what is the difference between these options.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the investment appraisal figures given in annex A of the Portland naval base consultative document, a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House on 12 November 1992.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Bosnia

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many breaches of the UN no-fly zone have taken place over Bosnia since it was established; and if he will list the reported breaches by month.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The no-fly zone over Bosnia was established by UN Security Council resolution 781 of 9 October 1992. Between 22 October 1992—when monitoring of the zone began—and 9 June 1993, the UN secretariat recorded 600 violations of the zone, as follows:

Month	Number
22-31 October 1992	13
November 1992	213
December 1992	142
January 1993	35
February 1993	58
March 1993	38
April 1993	42
May 1993	20
1-9 June 1993	39

Civil and Political Rights

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the states that have signed (a) the international covenant on civil and political rights, (b) the optional protocol to the covenant and (c) the second protocol to the covenant, indicating the year in which each state signed.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested by the hon. Member is contained in the UN publications "Human Rights: Status of International Instruments" and "Human Rights: Status of International Instruments: Chart of Ratifications", the most recent copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Public Expenditure White Paper

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were (a) the publication costs and (b) the price to the public, of the public expenditure White Paper in 1979 and its equavalent, including each of the departmental reports, in 1993.

Mr. David Davis: I have been asked to reply.

The price of the Public Expenditure White Paper (Cmnd 7439) was £4·25 in 1979. The combined price of all individual departmental reports and the accompanying statistical supplement to the "Autumn Statement" (Cms 2201-2219) was £261·25 in 1993. HMSO sells complete sets at the discounted price of £175.

The costs of printing, publishing and distribution were borne by HMSO which aims to recover these from sales revenue.

Tax Avoidance

Mr. Stern: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards countering tax avoidance.

Mr. Dorrell: The Government remain determined to prevent the growth of tax avoidance to the level that existed before 1979. And over the last 14 years a large number of measures has been introduced to counter avoidance, including some in the present Finance Bill.

Any taxpayer is entitled to order his affairs within the law to reduce to a minimum the amount of tax which he is likely to pay and is entitled to be protected against retrospective action by the Government or by Parliament which would reduce that right. But there is a point when avoidance can be regarded as improper and unacceptable, deserving to be looked at critically, and deserving to be stopped because it amounts to a defiance of, or an escape from, the underlying intention of the legislation.

In countering tax avoidance, the Government will continue to use a number of techniques which have proved successful in the past; these include rendering avoidance ineffective from the date of a clear announcment to do so, rather than necessarily waiting for the passage of legislation, and ensuring that Inland Revenue clearance procedures are not abused to the extent that they become part of the mechanism for constructing avoidance schemes.

EDUCATION

English Grammar

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment the curriculum authorities have made of the importance of a knowledge of grammar and of syntax in contributing to an understanding of English literature.

Mr. Robin Squire: This would have been one of the issues considered by the National Curriculum Council in drawing up its recommendations for revisions to the English curriculum, which formed the basis of proposals published by my right hon. Friend in April. In the programme of study for reading, the importance of a knowledge of grammatical structure to the full understanding of literature is recognised from the earliest stage.

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he is taking to improve the teaching of spelling, punctuation and grammar in English.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has recently published proposals for revisions to national curriculum English which give a strengthened emphasis to spelling, punctuation and grammar. In addition, 5 per cent. of the marks in all GCSE written examinations are now allocated to these matters.

St. Mary's School, Hendon

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he expects to determine the application by St. Mary's school, Hendon, to become a grant-maintained school.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend expects to make a decision on this application in the very near future.

Religious and Physical Education

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the calculated percentage curriculum time allocation for (a) religious education and (b) physical education in primary and secondary schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is available for secondary schools from the 1992 secondary school staffing survey which collected data from representative sample of maintained secondary schools in England. The table shows the percentage of total pupil periods recorded as having been spent on religious education and physical education. No recent information is available for primary schools or 6th form students in schools.

Year group	Religious education per cent.	Physical education per cent.
7	4·2	9·1
8	4·2	8·9
9	4·3	8·3
10	2·8	7·7
11	2·6	7·2

Education (Parental Complaints)

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to disseminate the names and addresses of organisations which assist in parental complaints about local education.

Mr. Robin Squire: None. Statutory rights of appeal or complaint have been publicised in the parents charter.

Humanism

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education whether he will make a statement on the inclusion of humanism in agreed syllabuses for religious education.

Mr. Robin Squire: Humanism is not a religion and should not be taught in religious education lessons as if it were. A syllabus may, however, include teaching about people, such as humanists, who do not believe in God but nonetheless have a code of moral values; or give examples of secular equivalents to practices which have a religious background, such as the marriage service or the taking of an oath.

School Syllabuses

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what action he proposes to take in the case of local education authorities which have made revisions to their agreed syllabuses since the Education Reform Act 1988 which in the opinion of the National Curriculum Council fail to meet the legal requirements.

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Schools gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Sutton and Cheam on 30 March 1993, Official Report column 155.

Graduation Tax

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to implement a graduation tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: None.

School Tests

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the cost of this year's tests for (a) key stage 1 pupils and (b) key stage 3 pupils.

Mr. Robin Squire: The estimated costs of producing and distributing the statutory tests for 1993 in English, mathematics, science and Welsh at key stage 1—7-year-olds—is £1,230,000. The estimated cost of the non-mandatory tests at this key stage is £1,470,000.

The cost of the statutory tests in English, mathematics, science, technology and Welsh at key stage 3—14-year-olds—is £4,090,000. This includes support materials.

Bullying

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many schools are using video equipment as a method to control and monitor bullying in schools; and what results have been achieved by these experiments.

Mr. Forth: This information is not collected centrally.

TRANSPORT

Warren Spring Laboratory

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what will be the impact on his budgets for research into air pollution from motor vehicles of recent announcements relating to Warren Spring Laboratory.

Mr. Key: Transitional costs of moving work from Warren Spring Laboratory to the new national environmental technology centre will not fall upon the Department's budgets in the area mentioned.

We shall continue to let contracts to the best available contractors and, if the new centre maintains the same standards as the laboratory, I would expect the volume of work placed there to be at a similar level.

West Coast Main Line

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with British Rail about funding and safety of the west coast main line.

Mr. Freeman: Re-equipping the west coast main line is an investment priority. I understand that British Rail has set aside funds for design work and plans to begin renewing the infrastructure next year. Decisions on the precise phasing of the renewal programme will need to have regard to public expenditure constraints.

There is no question of passenger safety being jeopardised in any way: BR has a statutory duty to operate safely.

Cycling

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what initiatives his Department is planning to take to improve conditions for cycling in London.

Mr. Norris: Most cycling takes place on local authority roads which comprise 96 per cent. of the London network. The remainder are DOT trunk roads.

We are helping to improve conditions for cycling in London in the following ways:

—by taking full account of the needs of cyclists when planning trunk road construction and improvements;

—supporting the 1,000 mile cycle network being developed by London Cycling Forum.

—providing capital funding support for cycle schemes on roads of more than local importance when they comprise or form part of a local safety scheme. The new "package approach" for capital schemes will provide flexibility for boroughs to submit joint bids for road proposals from 1994-95 and should facilitate the development of inter-borough cycle routes;

—providing advice and guidance to boroughs on the design and construction of cycling facilities via local transport notes and traffic advisory leaflets.

ENVIRONMENT

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will extend the range of local services put out to compulsory competitive tendering.

Mr. Baldry: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer the then Under-Secretary of State with responsibility for local government gave to the Member for Chingford (Mr. Duncan Smith) on 24 May 1993, Official Report, column 366.

Dockyards

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those dockyard facilities in the United Kingdom owned and operated by his Department, indicating this type of work undertaken and the numbers of people directly employed.

Mr. Baldry: The Department of the Environment does not own or operate any dockyard facilities.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 15 June at column 543, if he will also deposit in the Library the previous submission of Castle Point borough council dated 17 March referred to in paragraph 1.2 of the submission relating to limitation of council tax dated 27 April which he deposited in the Library.

Mr. Baldry: I have today placed copies of this document in the Library.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 226

SESSION 1992–93

7th June, 1993—18th June, 1993

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
